NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Womankind in general is interested in her fall and winter wardrobe at this season of the year, and suitable gowns and wraps are in order, an elaborate assortment of all kinds of wearing apparel having been liberally provided to meet the demand.

Many prefer to wait until the winter modes are practically settled before investing in an outfit, and the gowns designed in the spring of light weight wool and silk, and put away during the hot spell come in handy at this time. But for the woman who only has last winter's costumes to fall back upon, there are any number of ways this autumn of altering and renovating these frocks so as to pass over the interval between fall and winter fashions.

Now that the combination of two contrasting colors in a gown is again fashionable, the economical woman may turn out a stylish and up-to-date costume by employing the materials of two half-worn gowns, or combining new material with the old. Before starting to work, however, all the goods should be well cleaned and pressed, and a stock of new linings laid in, as old or washed linings tend to spoil and give a tawdy appearance to the prettiest dress.

There are any number of simple recipes for cleaning woolen and silk fabrics, which usually work wonders in the art of renovation. Naphtha, French chalk and magnesia are all excellent stain removers, but when benzine or naphtha is employed care should be observed in applying it and it is better to try it first on a small piece of the goods. Above all things these mixtures should be kept out of the reach of children and at a safe distance from the light or fire as they are apt to explode if brought in contact with heat. Fine flour or cornmeal is a simple and efficacious method of renovating white woolen goods, and the process consists in burying the material in the substance for twenty-four hours.

Velvet, which promises to be extensively employed this season on gowns, and hats, may be made to regain its former loveliness by holding the wrong side over a pan of boiling water and brushing the nap up with a whisk broom as the steam does its work. Another mode of brightening velvet is to dampen it on the wrong side, and then stretch smoothly across the face of a hot iron. The former method, however, is the safest and best.

Now for making over the materials. The first necessity is a good up-to-date pattern. This together with some fresh trimmings and an artistic touch is the groundwork of a pretty and fashionable toilette. As the circular effect with the close fitting upper portion is the correct skirt of the moment, this may easily be obtained by employing the top part of last season's frock and making the shaped flounce of some contrasting color, headed with a bias or satin fold. It may be necessary to purchase new material for the flounce, but if one possesses another half-worn frock it would be well to rip it up, have it dyed a contrasting color to the first gown and then use this for the flounce and trimmings.

The blouse bodice may be easily made over to conform to the latest mode, with yoke or guimpe effect of some pretty silk, with high tucked, stock collar and girdle belt to match, or if preferred one of the popular little boleros, either round or square which are now so much in vogue might be made of the cloth, with the entire vest of silk or some other pretty fabric. The sleeves must be altered to accord with the prevailing style, and may be adorned with a small cap or epaulet if desired to offset the very severe effect of these skin-tight models.

The next item of importance in the autumn outfit is the hat or bonnet to be donned on dressy occasions. Straw hats are now worn quite late into the autumn, especially those of black, while the yellow satin straw hats which have been worn through the summer adorned with filmy chiffon and pink roses make very attractive fall models trimmed with black ostrich tips and velvet ribbon of the same color. The prevailing style just now being to have the hats worn directly off the face, a good plan is to have the hat turned back in the front, with the feathers arranged to droop gracefully from the left side of the brim, while the crown of the hat is simply encircled with black velvet ribbon finished in the back with a smart bow. A few rich red roses resting on the hair beneath the brim in the back gives a pretty effect, but may be dispensed with.

A woman thus attired in a renovated frock, a pretty hat and immaculate shoes, gloves and veil presents quite as dainty and stylish an appearance as her sister more liberally endowed with this world's goods, arrayed in the latest importations from Paris.

To Keep Feathers.

Feathers that are plucked from fowls, ducks, and geese should be put into a dry wooden tub and kept free from damp until they dry; when the little quills are quite dry, they should be put into large paper bags and hung up in a warm dry place; they must be put in lightly, not packed together. If allowed to hang thus for a few months, they may be used for pillows or to fill up beds without further dressing. If wanted for immediate use, they must be put in a cool oven for several hours. Before putting them in pillows, &c., they should be looked through; the flues should be stripped from the quills of the larger feathers, and the tips of the quills cut from the medium size ones; the small ones may be left whole.

Challie House Blouse.

Pretty blouses in light woolen and silk fabrics are much in demand at this season for home wear, and some suitable and pretty models are seen in the large establishments.

A simple and attractive blouse bodice is made of rose colored challie, the material divided into three fullnesses in front, divided by bands of lace insertion. Over the shoulders are bretelles of pleated material, edged with small pleated frills. A similar band is arranged between the bretelles in the front. It is below these bands that the fullness of the material starts. The bishop sleeves are gathered into cuffs of the material, trimmed with lace insertion.

The Well-Dressed Woman.

The chief characteristic of fashion's present show is its infinite variety, its modified and graceful designs and outlines, and endless styles, affording an unlimited choice of models suited to any peculiarity of form, face, or feature. There has been a great rage for brilliant color-effects, but as a rule these melanges have been toned and artistically combined, and we have become entirely accustomed to the once most impossible union of odd colors. Personal choice and individuality in gowning are everywhere apparent, and thus, perfectly attired women are seen everywhere among the refined class of society, particularly at the fashionable resorts, where all the nice phases in modern gowning are best studied. Consistency is another characteristic that is receiving especial attention, and gowns and garnitures, jewels and laces are all appropriate to their own particular time and place. Of course there are very noticeable departures from this progressive and artistic state of things, but, as a whole, our American women are undoubtedly the best dressed people in the world. We are not treated any longer to the sight of an elaborate white lace parasol carried en suite with a cotton gown, however smart and pretty that same cotton gown may be. Neither do we behold, as in days past, the very absurd sight of diamond jewelry worn either with morning or travelling costumes, no matter how elegant these costumes may be. One strange thing, however, was noticed this season at a very celebrated watering-place, and that was the wearing of superb diamond earrings by women of wealth and social standing who were attired in the sable gowns of mourning.

The New Cashmeres.

The handsome double-faced cashmeres will find increasing favor and admiration as the new weaves and rich fall colorings are brought out. This material is quite heavy enough for winter wear, which single cashmere is not, unless well lined and worn above warm underskirts. The elegant Venetians and faced cloths make up into very stylish tailor costumes, but unless of the best quality, the surface guaranteed to have been sponged, rain and other spots show aggressively, as they do, in fact, on most dressed materials. India cashmere, being alike on both sides, is an economical purchase in the end. It is eminently soft, and in black is somewhat dull, but this all-wool variety is everlasting wear, and makes up handsomely, no matter how simply trimmed. Another variety of soft, flexible India fabric is covered with fine silky hairs, like an improved camel's hair, but many women object to it on this account. French cashmere is a very beautiful material, but its somewhat lustrous surface like many weaves in silk, has the objectionable fault of becoming quickly glazed by wear. Cleaners profess to remove this oily-looking gloss, but very frequently they do not succeed.

A Doctor on Sunstroke.

An eminent doctor has been investigating the malady, and has come to the conclusion that sunstroke is not due simply to excessive heat or exposure to the full rays of a cloudless sun. He declares that sunstroke is, on the contrary, an infectious disease, caused, like fever or small-pox, by a specific organism or germ. But this germ he has not yet succeeded in isolating, though he hopes in the course of time to do so. There is little doubt, he says, that the germ is bred in the superficial layers of the soil in certain low-lying regions of the earth, and that it is imbibed into the human system by the breathing of dusty air.

Der Wald war Besitzthum des Oekonomen Solger. Auch in der Stadtwaldabtheilung Saalgemeinde verursachten Funken der Lokomotive eines Postzuges einen Waldbrand, der aber durch hinzukommende Leute bald wieder gelöscht wurde, ohne größeren Schaden angerichtet zu haben.

Würzburg. Der Posten an dem Proviantmagazin faßte neulich Abends mehrere junge Burschen ab, die in das Proviantmagazin einzusteigen versuchten. In Folge der Geständnisse der Verhafteten ist man darauf gekommen, daß schon seit längerer Zeit größere Brodtdiebstähle im Proviantmagazin ausgeführt wurden.

YOU'RE READING THIS?

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

A Faithful Traitor

She was [illegible] in my eyes what she had been; there was no beauty about her; but she was a woman, and she was, or I know now, pretended to be, in great trouble—trouble that my ignorant folly had brought upon her. The vulgarity, the odiousness of the whole business, never came to me in that moment. I was excited, almost feverish. Dick's anger of the night before had left me in the very mood to be worked upon; his opposition to what I intended to do roused me to a sort of reckless defiance. I was worse than obstinate. I was driven into a corner, as it were; so, against the whole natural urging and sentiment of my heart, against my own common sense, against all that was purest and best in me. I spoke the words that have ruined my life. The moment they were spoken, Feo," he said hoarsely, "I recognized the full extent of my madness! I saw the look of triumph in her eyes; I shrank from her. She showed herself such a living lie to all I had believed of her. But the awakening came too late. I had asked her to be my wife; as a man of honor I could not undo what I had done!"

There was another pause. Rising suddenly, he moved across the room and stood by the open window, through which the fresh, cold, dew-laden morning air came softly. Dawn had broken, the sun had risen, and the green of the trees was turned almost to a golden tone as the sunlight burst through the gray of the fleeting summer night. The gardens and grounds were beautiful to look upon in this hour of earliest day. Feo still sat in silence; but in her heart there was a tumult—fiercest pain and fiercest anger mingled with the softer feelings of a woman's grief.

"Oh, my dear—my dear!" she said to herself brokenly. "My dear, generous, true-hearted boy!" She could have taken Antony in her arms and wept over him as he uttered the simple words of his honest, simple mind, as he spoke of the straightforward dealings that had brought about his undoing so completely. She watched him as he left the window and began pacing to and fro in silence; then she spoke gently—

"Go on, dearest," she said, "let me know what followed."

Antony glanced at her as she spoke.

"Feo, you ought to be in bed!" he exclaimed tenderly. "If Gregory could see you as you are now—so white and so unhappy—he would be furious with me."

"I am not afraid of Gregory's anger," Feo said; then with the yearning that had been with her all night but was now intensified—"But, oh, how I wish he were here now! How I wish you had gone to Gregory when all this business took place, Tony! He is so wise, so just; he would never have counselled you to do anything but what was absolutely right!"

"I had Dick," Antony answered. "And in those days at least there was no person who was so just, so wise in my eyes, as Dick! Not even Gregory could have been more vehemently against the marriage; and yet, you see, I would not even take Dick's advice, Feo!"

Lady Feo rose and went, as he had done, to the window. She could hardly see the glory of the coming day because of her tears.

"Because he never intended that you should take it, Tony!" she said huskily, passionately. "Oh, it is all pretty clear to me the sort of part Mr. Saville played in this matter of your marriage! Tony, dearest, you must forgive me if I speak bitterly. I feel—I don't know exactly how I do feel!" Feo said in a whisper. "I seem dazed by all you have told me. I seem to see, to touch real definite wickedness for the first time in my life!"

She bent forward and leaned for a moment out of the window. It was sweet to her to fill her lungs with the clear, pure, fresh air. She had half expected that Antony would make some eager protest against the accusation embodied in her last words, but he made none. He was standing by the tall, white fireplace, his elbow on the mantlepiece, his face bowed on his arm. His silence, his whole attitude, was eloquent of a sorrow too deep for words.

Feo's tears came in blinding force now; she knew—but only dimly, for no one save Tony himself could know the depth, the sincerity of his trusting love for his "big brother"—that the awakening she had somehow always expected had come at last, and that Richard Saville's long undisputed sovereignty in Antony's affection and reverent esteem was ended forever. She had no sense of rejoicing at this fact. Antony's terrible grief was only too clear to her loving heart. She brushed the tears from her eyes and went across to him, touching him gently.

"Do you feel equal to tell me any more, dearest?" she asked. "Don't if you would rather not. I am not curious, Tony darling; but I want to know all, because I wish to see whether—" She paused.

Antony raised his pale worn face.

"There is very little more to tell," he said. "Dick, failing to turn me from my determnation to marry her, pleaded that I should take at least a month in which to reflect. I let him negotiate everything. I felt assured the woman would not forego one iota of her rights: she had worked to become my wife, the sharer of my title and fortune—she did not intend to be anything less. What passed between Dick and herself I cannot tell you. Let it suffice to say that we left England for America, and that she must have started at the very same time, for, when we arrived in New York, she was there already. It was no longer a question of time or delay for reflection, and our marriage took place within three days after I set foot in America."

"Mr. Saville still opposed your folly?" Lady Feo queried; and, as Antony nodded his head, she gave a sharp sigh. "Did—did she travel with you afterwards?" she asked.

Sir Antony again nodded his head.

"We were together for a fortnight," he said; "after that"—he paused—"we separated by mutual consent."

Lady Feo's delicate brows were knit.

"Yes," he answered simply.

"She preferred to remain in America rather than return to England?"

There was an accent of incredulity in Lady Feodora's voice.

"She agreed to remain only on payment of a certain yearly sum of money," Antony said in reply.

"Why did you want her to remain in America?" was Lady Feo's next inquiry.

"I made no stipulation whatsoever. I left all to Dick," he said. "For myself I did not care what happened, except"—he paused—"except that I might not be forced to live with her, Feo, that was all. I suppose I shirked my duty; but"—he drew a deep breath—"but, had I remained with her, I believe, I know, I should not have been alive to tell you what I am telling you now!"

Lady Feo looked up at him.

"You agreed, then, to buy her silence by means of a large sum of money?" she said quietly.

Antony's face flushed.

"I had no definite thought of what I wanted or did not want just then, Feo," he said huskily. "I was no longer a sane man. The whole of the business seemed to have set my brain on fire. I tell you I was within an ace of putting an end to my life! Why Dick did not let me do so I don't understand. Now that all is clear to me, now that I see the true meaning of his friendship, I see how false all his care and distress about me was."

Lady Feodora put her head upon his shoulder with a sigh.

"Oh, Tony—my dear, my only brother—it makes me cold when I look back and realize what a life you must have led in the hands of such an enemy! Tony, this man has hated you with the subtle cunning hate of a madman. I don't know anything definite—I have no proofs to go upon, but I am convinced that, if you will make Gregory acquainted with everything, you will find that the onus of your unfortunate position now lies at Richard Saville's door. Don't question me as to why I know he has hated you, Tony, only accept the fact of that hate as a terrible certainty. There is more in this affair than a poor little brain like mine and a simple, straightforward nature like yours can fathom or understand all at once. The matter must be thoroughly investigated. There is so much that wants clearing up—so much that is in itself contradictory. If you have left everything to Saville, as you say—"

"How could I do otherwise?" Tony broke in hoarsely. "Yes—I have left everything to him—everything, Feo! I have never questioned, never interfered; I accepted all he said as being final, unalterable. Even when the fever of excitement went from me and I saw more clearly—even when I longed to be frank with all the world, with you, with dear aunt Bertha, with—" He paused, then went on. "I agreed to his proposals, assented always to what he deemed necessary. Now and then he told me some new story of the woman's demands. I let him do all that he said was advisable. I have been such a fool—such an awful fool, Feo!"

"You have been an angel, you mean!" Feo cried, and her tears were perilously near again. She took both his hands. "Tony, you know what you have to do now. You must go to Gregory as fast as you can and tell him everything just as you have told me. I shall not be in the least surprised if my Gregory does not carry you off to America and begin to investigate matters there immediately. With all due respect to Mr. Saville, I may be allowed to doubt the wisdom of all he has done. I am certain Gregory will advise you to take everything into your own hands, and dispense in future with Mr. Saville's clever assistance. It is common with me, as you know," Lady Feo confessed frankly, "to fly to hasty conclusions, so perhaps I may be wrong in imagining that there may be a way out of this horrible tangle for you, Tony. All the same," Feo said definitely, "I can't help it! I do feel as if there must be some way of escape for you from such an awful marriage as you have contracted; and if my Gregory does not find that way, I shall not—"

Antony stopped her suddenly.

"Don't, Feo" he said hoarsely—"don't! If—if you fill me with such thoughts, with this suggestion of hope, you will make me mad again. You don't know what I am suffering now! You don't know the agony I have undergone this night! I must not hope, Feo, for there is no hope, dear—I know that only too well. She is my wife—nothing can alter that fact—and—and my heart is broken, I think!"

Antony moved quickly away from her in his agitation and went to the open casement, and for a moment let the sweet morning air come to his parched lips, his aching eyes. Feo stood and watched him in silence; then she spoke in a whisper.

"There—there is more to tell, Tony—there is some one else in your heart?" she said.

Sir Antony was silent for a few moments; then he turned and came back to her slowly.

"Have you never guessed my secret?" he asked; then, as their eyes met—"I love Elizabeth!" he said simply.

Feo gave a little cry; she could not speak for a time.

"Oh," she exclaimed, as words came to her all at once—"oh, what an idiot! No, Tony—not you—I mean myself! Oh, what a dense inconceivable idiot!" She looked at him eagerly, clinging to him with both hands. "You really love my dear sweet Elizabeth?" she said. "But of course you do!" she cried the next moment. "How could you help yourself? And she? Oh, my poor Tony, how well I understand everything now! How brave you have been battling with everything all by yourself! And how you must have loathed me! How you must have wished me at Jericho," Feo cried self-reproachfully, "when I have done nothing but try to throw some stupid girl in your way! Elizabeth! Why, of course you would love Elizabeth—the dearest, sweetest, loveliest girl in all the world! And that is why she went away to-night looking like death. Oh, my heart aches for you both! Tony"—with a sudden change of manner—"you must run up to town at once! Go straight to my house—Gregory never leaves for the City before half-past nine. Look—it is nearly five o'clock now. There must be a workman's train or something from Stonebury at six. I will tell you what I will do. I will have my bath, dress, and come to the station with you. Don't say 'No,' because I mean to do it! I cannot accompany you to London—there is that horrid garden-party to-day, you know; and, besides, you won't want me; you will be able to talk better to Gregory if I am out of the way. Don't bother about your bag," Lady Feo continued. She revelled in this new excitement—it relieved her strained nerves. "You have heaps of clothes in your rooms in town; and if you want anything, Gregory will give it to you. What are you saying? I ought to go to bed? Why, I should simply go mad if I went and shut myself up in my room now!" she declared in her old brisk fashion. "Give me half an hour, Tony. Then we will slip down-stairs together. The walk through the grounds this lovely morning will be heavenly! We can talk over everything as we go; and, when I get back, I shall have 'Pootles' to attend to. I shall be only half an hour, Tony dear!" Feo repeated; and, kissing him softly again and again, she stole in noiseless excitement out of the room, while Antony went back to the window and stood looking with yearning eyes across the trees towards Elizabeth's present home.

The hour of his greatest trouble had come to Antony; yet, full and complete as his enemy's work had seemed to be, it was robbed of its bitterest pang by the knowledge of Elizabeth's pure trusting love. Even though they might never meet again, even though they might be divided forever by a gulf that could never be bridged, the memory of her sweet words, of her faith in his honor, would remain with him always, and give him hope and strength to meet the broken life that lay before him.

WATER THAT SUITS ARABS.

It Must Be Stagnant and Should Have Many Vile Odors.

"Water, water everywhere and every drop to drink," is the way your philanthropical Arab reads the quotation. Arabia has the water hobby, and has it bad. A blue-grass critic would call it a disease, and a Weary Walker would refer to the continual erection of fountains as the emanations of idiots. And, in the face of all criticisms, the Arab would go on about the business of life, which he interprets as being the placing in operation of as many drinking booths as it lies within his power to set up.

Any one who takes a trip through the country where these peculiar gentlemen live and have their being will note the extent to which the Arabs carry their ideas on the water question. In traveling through a section the size of Westchester county, one will run across as many fountains as he would find saloons in the district north of this city. When Allah calls from the field of activity one of the rich men of the tribe, the men of the law find that the deceased, instead of leaving his superfluous coin to the Young Men's Arabian society, or to a fund for the endowment of a college for the teaching of the classics, directs that the wealth be employed in erecting a fountain where the thirst of man and beast may be assuaged.

A peculiarity of these fountains is that very few of them contain the pure, clear water which is associated with the popular idea of a spring. The Arab has no use for the kind of water we drink. Such water he considers injurious, as he reasons it contains chemical properties which produce ill effects upon its consumers. The Arab wants his water stagnant, and hence more or less dirt. The dirtier and more stagnant the greater its value in his eyes. He would probably go wild with joy could he impress a portion of the Chicago river into service.—New York Press.

SPORTING.

GOLF.

The monthly handicap contests are now off for the balance of the season.

Next Saturday there will be a team match on the Hillside course between the Braitrusrol and Hillside golf teams.

Fisk scored three points, and Olaf Sangstaud made two points. Carl Walz and J. H. P. Wharton tied by making one point each. They will play off the tie early this week. Next Saturday the contest for the Mrs. Fisk cup will be concluded, and if there are any ties on that day they will be played off. The contest is now at a point where much interest is shown and the contestants are evenly matched.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Athletics in the Y. M. C. A. are now fully started. The classes are formed and each day the work is becoming more and more systematized. March 11th a club swinging exhibition will be given, and on the 25th again a dumb-bell contest, with a pair of dumb-bells. April 8th a bar bell contest for bar bell will close the season. An entertainment and supper is to be given some time during the year, and the closing exhibition will take place in the late spring.

FUNERAL OF A SOLDIER.

HE DIED WHILE WAITING TO FIGHT FOR HIS COUNTRY.

Private Charles Johnson Taken Sick While in a Southern Camp and Died in a Newark Hospital—Funeral in This City.

The funeral services of the late Charles Johnson, who was a private in Co. D, First Regiment, and a former resident of this city, were held yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock from Trinity Reformed church, where the deceased was for many years an attendant. The church was filled with friends who had known the departed and the services were exceedingly impressive. The floral display about the platform and casket was beautiful and consisted of a number of pillows from friends, and the company of which the deceased was a member. There was also a large pillow from the Ladies' Auxiliary of the church in Newark, where Mr. Johnson attended.

The body was brought to this city by a detail from Co. D, of which Captain Orrin E. Runyon is captain, and they acted as bearers. They were Captain Runyon, Sergeants Townley and Mills, Corporal Ritt, Bugler J. A. Shauger, and Privates Pudney, Smith and W. C. Baldwin. They wore their uniforms and presented an impressive appearance.

The services at the church were in charge of the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., and after reading the Scripture lesson, he made a few appropriate remarks.

About thirty members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., were present in a body to pay their respects to the departed.

Interment was in the Plainfield avenue cemetery, and at the grave Pastor Schenck offered prayer and Bugler J. A. Shauger sounded taps.

STOLEN WHEEL FOUND.

Then Witt fell upon him. In the struggle the colored man bit Witt's hand. He was finally landed safely in jail.

The negro gave his name as William Gray, of Rahway, where he claimed he had purchased the wheel. He was identified as having been in Philadelphia six months ago and was caught in several contradictory statements. The Magistrate sent him to the county jail for fifteen days. Meanwhile Chief Harding telephoned to all the neighboring cities.

Chief Grant, of this city, found that the description answered that of Dencklau's wheel. This morning the Chief and Dencklau went to identify the wheel.

into the cars ahead. The consequence was that sixteen cars left the track and were piled up over the tracks, all of them to a certain degree wrecked.

No one was hurt. The wrecking train was sent for and it soon arrived. Those cars which were not damaged were set back on the tracks, while the others were placed on flat cars and taken away.

A Soldier Boy Heard From.

Chris. Sorensen, Jr., of this city, who is a member of the Fourth Regiment Band, N. J. Vols., has been heard from. He together with the rest of the members of the regiment are stationed at Camp Mead, Middletown, Penn. He says that there are twenty-seven regiments in camp, and that the whole Second Army Corps, under Gen. Graham, expect to go to South Carolina at an early date. He says that his regiment is to take part in the peace jubilee at Philadelphia October 25th-27th, and from there they expect to go to South Carolina. He speaks about the very cold weather in camp, but says that all are well and enjoying life.

In City Court.

There was a small batch of offenders for City Judge DeMeza to dispose of this morning. Nicholas Kelly was arraigned and his trial set down for Saturday morning. He was charged with disorderly conduct. He was paroled in the custody of his counsel, Wm. G. DeMeza.

William Emmons and John Long were fined $5 each for being drunk and disorderly on Front street Saturday night. A man named Thomas was fined $3 for the same offence.

No Contest for Delegates.

The nominations for the local members of the county committee and the delegates to the county convention of the Republicans were closed last night. There is very little prospect of any contest, there being only one ticket nominated in each ward. The friends of Mr. Ackerman are very confident of a solid delegation for him from Plainfield.

Attention, Felix.

If there is such a man as Felix Meyer in Plainfield or vicinity he will learn of something to his interest by calling on Secretary Manning at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

WON A NEW YORK BRIDE

HARRY DREIER WEDDED LAST NIGHT TO MISS SANDBERG.

The Hebrew Marriage Ceremony Performed at Arlington Hall, St. Mark's Place, New York—500 Guests Present.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New York, October 24.—Miss Sophie Sandberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abram Sandberg, of Bleeker street, and Harry Dreier, of Plainfield, were wedded last evening at 6 o'clock at Arlington Hall, St. Marks place, this city. The impressive Hebrew marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Edward Lichte, of New York. The marriage was witnessed by fully five hundred of the relatives and friends of the couple.

The bride was gowned in white satin and wore a tulle vail. Her long train was carried by two little flower girls, Mise Bella Sandberg, and a cousin. They were both gowned in blue silk. The bridemaids were the Misses Frances and Bertha Sandberg, sisters of the bride.

In place of a bouquet, the bride carried a handsome white silk-covered Bible, on which the monograms of bride and groom and the date of the ceremony was set in solid gold.

The groom was accompanied by two best men, Jacob S. Rosenthal, of New York, and Walter S. Dreier, of Plainfield, his brother. They all wore the convential evening dress. After the congratulations, a banquet was served to the guests that lasted from 7 until 10 o'clock. It was ended with speeches of congratulation, William Newcorn, of Plainfield, acting as toastmaster.

The couple will go to their home at Plainfield this afternoon and will reside at 263 West Front street. Owing to the pressure of business for Mr. Dreier in the week preceding the opening of the hunting season, they will postpone their wedding trip for several weeks.

They will be "at home" to their friends Sunday, November 13th.

DOORS WITH VENEER FINISH.

Not Even the More Costly Are Made of Solid Wood.

The very finest of doors are made nowadays of veneer on a body of pine. Even when made of mahogany or some other costly wood, doors have to be veneered. The body of the door is made of a plain, straight-grained mahogany, while the surfaces are veneers of fine wood.

In the finest doors the body is made of selected white pine, free from sap and perfectly seasoned, which is cut into narrow strips and then glued together. The outer edges of this door are faced with what is called a veneer, but which is really a strip of the fine wood half an inch or more in thickness. The inner edges of the frame, by the panels, are covered in the same manner with thick strips, in which the ornamental mouldings or carvings, are made, and which are grooved to receive the panels.

This built-up frame of white pine, with edges of the fine wood, is then veneered with the fine wood. In some lighter doors the panels may be of solid mahogany, but in the finer, larger and heavier doors the panels also are made of white pine with a veneering of the fine wood, so that the entire door is veneered.

It would be difficult, if not impossible, to procure at any cost mahogany lumber in fine and beautiful woods of sufficient size for the larger doors. The built-up and veneered door, of pine wood, however, has every appearance of a solid door, and, made of selected veneers, it may be more beautiful than a solid door would be. It is more serviceable and remains longer perfect. Its cost is about half what a solid door would cost.—New York Sun.

German Military Honor.

"An officer who permits himself to be insulted by a civilian, without immediately killing him, will be dismissed." This is one of the unwritten clauses in the code of honor obtaining in the corps of German officers. If the insulter is not satisfactionsfahig (capable of giving satisfaction), that is to say, if he belong to the classes who are not wont to fight duels, then the officer must immediately draw his sword and cut him down or kill him on the spot with any other weapon. These laws are nowhere to be found written, yet they are strictly obeyed. At Augsburg an officer in private clothes recently received a blow on the face without having given any cause of offence from an impudent business clerk. It chanced that the officer had a revolver with him. He, however, made no use of it, nor did he challenge the clerk, whom he regarded as unworthy of meeting in a duel. Instead of taking either of these steps, he had recourse to the courts of justice, with the result that his assailant was sentenced to twelve days' imprisonment. Thereupon the regimental officers' court of honor assembled and compelled the officer to hand in his resignation because he had not adequately upheld the dignity of an officer's rank.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Wholly Unamiable.

"Excuse me," exclaimed the timorous man, "but may I disturb you for a few minutes on a matter of considerable importance to myself and possibly of some concern to you?"

"No, sir," replied the disagreeable citizen; "not unless you promise not to waste as much time talking business as you do apologizing."—Wash

One hundred and Fifty-two Years Old.

Princeton, Oct. 24.—Princeton University celebrated its one hundred and fifty-second birthday Saturday with appropriate academic ceremonies.

A procession, in which appeared ex-President Grover Cleveland, M. Taylor Pyne and William Milligan Sloane, passed from the library to Alexander hall, where the exercises of the day were held.

They were simple, and after a brief review of the history of the university and a reference to the proposed graduates' school, President Patton introduced as the guest of honor President Gilman of Johns Hopkins University, who delivered an able address.

A Good Report from Gen Wood

Santiago de Cuba, Oct. 22.

Condition in province favorable. No trouble anywhere. Indigent rations going constantly into interior by pack train and along the coast by ship. So-called Cuban government in session, but nothing definite being done. The health of the people and troops is improving.

Surgeon Taber's Contract Annulled

Washington, Oct. 24.—By direction of the secretary of war, the contract of Acting Assistant Surgeon Taber has been annulled. It appears from testimony taken before the investigating commission that he was the medical officer referred to in connection with the death of Hugh Parrett of Ohio at Camp Wikoff.

TROLLEY PROMOTERS ARE EUCHRED.

Unable to Push Their Franchise Through by Bluff and Bluster.

MANY REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS WERE HEARD.

ALL WANTED TROLLEY EXTENSION MADE, BUT UNDER LIMITED FRANCHISE.

Jacob Kirkner Was the First Citizen to Speak, and He Made Some Strong Points—F. E. Kinsman, J. E. Martine, A. S. Patterson and Others Are Heard—Secretary Riker, of the Company, Appeared For the Company—Council Adjourned Hearing, and Riker Got Mad and Withdrew the Application.

The most exciting hearing ever given by the Common Council on a public improvement was the one held last night on the ordinance in which it is proposed to grant the Plainfield Street Railway Company a franchise to extend its lines to the eastern limits of the city. The constant agitation of this matter by The Daily Press showed fruitful results when the lobby in the Council chamber became literally packed with representative citizens who had come there to be heard and to watch the proceedings. Lemuel William Serrell's friendly letter to the select circle had the effect of bringing a few of his friends out to the meeting, but they were as mum as mum could be. The remarks made by citizens were overwhelmingly against the petition of the street railway company.

The Council was called to order at 8 o'clock and the hearing opened immediately.

Mr. VanHerwerden wanted to know if those present in the lobby were there in response to Mr. Serrell's letter. If so, he thought it was a reflection on the intelligence of the Council. He said that the newspapers of the city were the mouth-pieces of the people and were competent to express their opinions.

Mr. Woolston was the first to speak among those in the lobby. He stated that he was not present in response to Mr. Segrell's letter. Until the last meeting of the Council he was of the opinion that the members of the Council had about settled on the conditions of the ordinance, and he thought that the Council knew how to act in the matter. Most people present, he said, were from the First ward and they were desirous of having the trolley extended.

At this time three petitions were read by the City Clerk which were presented by a number of property owners asking the Council to grant the franchise for the extension. In their opinion they thought the present conditions were fair and reasonable, and that the Council should not exact any further conditions. These petitions were received and filed.

The next speaker was Jacob Kirkner, of West Eighth street. He was very pronounced in his views and his remarks were listened to attentively. He stated that he had read in The Daily Press the verbatim remarks made by F. E. Kinsman at a recent meeting giving his views on the trolley question. In the main he agreed with Mr. Kinsman. He was of the opinion that to grant the franchise in perpetuity was an improper thing to do. He said that he has lived here for thirty-four years, and when once there was only 2,000 residents in the city. He had watched the growth of the city, and had seen where councils had made mistakes. Continuing he said, "I hope that this honorable body will give this matter careful consideration. A limited term of years is desirable, and then the matter can be carefully guarded. There is always 'A nigger in the wood-pile' when an effort is made to get a thing of this kind through in a hurry. You probably know that John Kean is no friend of Plainfield. He owns the city water works which he obtained under an old charter, and I doubt if that charter is legal. You no doubt remember our sewage beds. They are so successful that one former member of this Council thought it desirable to leave the city and live elsewhere. This trolley line will be a through one, and the charter should not be granted for a term not to exceed fifteen years. You all know that corporations have no souls, and it would be detrimental to grant it for a longer time."

James E. Martine stated that so far as he could learn no one opposed the extension of the trolley. It is a benefit, but also a very profitable investment. Railroads reap large rewards, and it would be a crime to grant the franchise in perpetuity. He did not think the franchise should be given away for nothing. He insisted that there is much to be gained in trolleys, notwithstanding the claims of the trolley companies. He stated that he was in favor of giving the franchise for a term of twenty-five years, and at the end of that time readjust the conditions to the times.

Col. Dietrich, of Arlington avenue, was the next speaker, and his remarks caused not a little laughter. There are enough consents on Arlington avenue, he said, to secure the trolley. There is only one man on the avenue who objects to the trolley and he does not own a foot of ground on the avenue, but he was fortunate to be elected to the school board. I pay as much money in tax as he does. We don't want the trolley to go to Scotch Plains, but we do want it out our way, and then every time we drop a nickel in the slot we will thank you for it. This year the sewer tax is the largest on the list. You fellows that live on Ninth street, can't you think of us? He did not want the Council to grant this franchise until they put a trolley on Arlington avenue.

F. E. Kinsman, who spoke at the last Council meeting, again reiterated many arguments given at the previous meeting. He spoke of controlling the trolley company, of the evident decrease in the cost of electricity, and extending the road out toward Hillside Cemetery, and of the proper compensation to be received by the city for the granting of the franchise. He also favored a short term of lease, say fifteen years. He said that there was nothing to hinder the company from carrying freight as well as passengers, and that the matter of asphalting a few streets was a small consideration for what the company would receive. He cited the fact that Plainfield merchants now receive all of the trade from Scotch Plains and that that would be no inducement to throw the franchise away.

The next speaker was L. W. Serrell, of the Plainfield Street Railway Company. He said in part: "According to Mr. Kinsman's remarks as to the cost of electricity, if it meets his most sanguine expectation, would scarcely be below ten per cent, and regarding a reduction in fares to three cents, the United States Circuit Court decided in the case of the city of Detroit that they had no right to confiscate property, and that would be the result if they demanded three cent fares. Much has been said in the local papers about the company making money. As a matter of fact the Plainfield Street Railway Company has not made money, on the contrary they have been obliged to borrow money to pay taxes.

"The Plainfield company has nothing to conceal nor has it tried to conceal anything. Last year after paying the interest on our mortgage $2,000 was borrowed to meet expenses. The franchise in this city to date has cost the company $50,000 and and a dividend has never been paid in the six years that the road has been in operation. I ask you tonight to place yourself in our place and consider the matter fairly. The Plainfield papers and some of the citizens have been talking a great deal about what the company would make out of the franchise, but it is evident that the people want the trolley."

At the conclusion of Mr. Serrell's remarks Mr. Riker, of the Plainfield Street Railway Co., was introduced and he spoke somewhat as follows:

"I have come here tonight to give a plain statement of facts. I find that there has been some criticism of affairs. When our franchise was before you some time ago, we unwisely expected that all legal formalities would be fixed, and that it would not be necessary for us to appear before you. The reason why I am here is known to you through the papers and the people who state that we want to obtain something for nothing. Take the past as a criterion. Many here remember seven years ago when the trolley was first brooded in this city. The matter was in your hands. At that time no one wanted to be a bloated capitalist and we were invited to come here and become such. We started the road in August, 1892. For the money invested we have not received one cent in dividends, interest or otherwise At no time have the bonds amounted to more than 50 per cent. and they have not been watered or aired. All that is in this road represents hard dollars. This is for six years, and you can judge the value of the franchise we ask for. From July, 1898, to June, 1898, we received from passengers $51,011 54 and from advertising $56. Our disbursements were $53,109.29, and on account of construction such as purchasing new moters we expended $1,481.16, leaving a net loss of $2,400. People ask why we want that extension If you will go over the route with me I will show you how the route runs around Robin Hood's barn to the dead end of Second street, a valuable franchise about two miles long, out of which we ask the city for about 4,500 feet, and the rest of the route runs through private property. It would require two cars for that extension at an expense of $9,000. It would require $40,000 to build the road. We would not touch that franchise with a ten thousand foot pole if that franchise was all there is to it. It is the connecting link for the company between this city and Elizabeth. This is the plain statement. We have not tried to hoodwink anybody in this matter. We have agreed to do more than John Kean has for the county. This county boulevard talked of must be presented to Mr. Kean and kept in repair at the county's expense, and for that the county is to receive $250,000. For what we ask we agree to macadamize at an expense of $10,000. We give the city $250 a mile after 1901, making in all $14,000 that you will receive for this franchise. If the receipts increase to $80,000 we agree to pay 5 per cent. of that amount.

"Is it to your interest to grant that franchise. I state honestly, fairly and authoritatively that we cannot accept a limited franchise. It will cost us $480,000 to build our road and for a 15 or 20 years lease we cannot afford to do it."

A. Stuart Patterson, of 927 Central avenue, was present and in reply to the remarks made by Mr. Riker stated that on an investment of $180,000 half of that amount is bonded and the Plainfield Street Railway Company is losing about $9,000 a year, and that they are giving their services for nothing. He thought that in twenty-five years time the company will not be anywhere. It is now a question of terms that is to be considered. The company says that they will not touch a limited franchise. Of course a man will not lease his house for fifteen years, and in fact there are only two classes of people, bachelors and widows, who agree to live for better or worse, for richer or poorer, through life. Twenty-five years is long enough to grant this franchise, and he urged that it be granted for not longer a time than fifteen years. Mr. Patterson stated in behalf of Mayor Fisk that the reason he would not take bonds of the railway company was because he held a city position and did not want to hold the bonds of an outside corporation.

In speaking again Mr. Kirkner remarked that he thought that the street railway company had given a great exhibition of philanthropy. They have been operating the Plainfield road for six years and have been losing money. Now they come to us and want another franchise to extend their road. It looks as though the company is bankrupt and that they will get deeper in the hole. You can put figures down and they will suit one class of people, but not another. I believe that Mr. Riker tells the truth, but I think that the company is an extraordinary set of captalists who will operate a road for six years and make no money.

Mr. Flannery, of Scotch Plains, made a vigorous speech in which he favored the granting of the franchise on the present conditions. He thought that there had been a great deal of fuss for two miles of road. He thought Mr. Riker's statement a fair and manly one.

Mr. Riker replied to Mr. Kirkner's remarks regarding the company being bankrupt. He said that the company was not in that condition; that they were able to pay their bills on the tenth of every month, and that the members of the company had invested between $85,000 or $90,000 in the Plainfield road.

Other remarks were made by J. B.

FOR NEW STORM SEWER

ORDINANCE PROGRESSED AND PUBLIC HEARING TO BE HELD.

It Will be Built by Issuing $2,500 Worth of Bonds, But the Plan is Opposed by Councilman Hetfield, Liefke Moffett.

At the regular meeting of the Common Council last evening $1,500 was borrowed to meet the third payment on the new engine house, and two electric lights were granted to petitioners. The special meeting of the Council followed.

Mr. Barrows moved that a public hearing be given regarding the installing of a storm sewer through Park avenue, Front street and Somerset street.

Mr. Hetfield objected to the bonding of the city for $2,500 to do this work. As there is not much chance of doing any asphalt work this year, he thought that matter could go over to next year and the work could be paid for out of next year's appropriation.

Mr. Baker agreed with Mr. Hetfield and thought that it would scarcely be right to bond for $2,500. He thought that bonds could be issued to cover both the sewer and asphalting.

Mr. Barrows stated that the law would not allow them to issue bonds to cover both. He said he did not care personally whether the sewer was built or not. It did not affect him and he did not have to use it, but thought the people wanted it. He said that the people howl for sewers, trolley, etc., and they hold the Council responsible for them.

Mr. Buckle favored the sewer and thought the people along the avenue are entitled to it.

Mr. Barrows stated that each year the Mayor had suggested such improvements, but the Councils have always been afraid to adopt the suggestions.

Mr. Hetfield thought there was no rush about the sewer and it could go over to next year. He advocated it strongly, but not under the present conditions.

The ordinance was finally adopted on first and second readings. Messrs. Hetfield, Moffett and Leifke voted against it. This concluded the business and the Council adjourned.

RECITED HER OWN HYMN.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE QUOTED HER GREAT NATIONAL ANTHEM.

An Impressive Incident to the Closing of a Talented and Entertaining Parlor Lecture at Her Daughter's Home

Almost the only living member of the brilliant New England literary coterie that made the middle decades of the century famous in the history of our literature, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe is welcomed everywhere as a charming and clever woman, a delightful speaker, and an author known and loved by all. The announcement that the author of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" would give a lecture at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon, created wide-spread interest, and when the hour for the lecture arrived it found Mrs. Hall's pleasant home crowded with eager listeners.

Mrs. Howe, who was born in 1819, is a beautiful old lady, with a clear, sweet, musical voice and an easy, conversational manner of delivery. She was dressed in black, with a lace cap over her hair. Her subject was personal recollections of the great writers whom she had known, and her graphic talk about Whittier, Longfellow, Holmes and Lowell brought those famous men very clearly before her listeners. The anti slavery agitation, Longfellow's writing of "The Skeleton in Armor," the odd and amusing personality of Dr. Holmes, and Lowell as editor, poet and critic, were some of the points touched upon in a bright and humorous way, enlivened with many anecdotes which made the audience break into smiles or listen in hushed silence. Poems of Whittier's, and strong bits from Lowell, were quoted with much sympathy and appreciation by Mrs. Howe. In closing, she spoke of the influence for nobility and helpfulness that these great men of our country should have over us, quoting the words:

"Lives of great men all remind us
We should make our lives sublime."

A fitting close to the afternoon was Mrs. Howe's grand Battle Hymn, recited as only she can recite it, with the solemnity, passion, and religious fervor that prompted those deathless words of devotion to God and native land.

PLAINFIELD SOLID FOR E. R. ACKERMAN.

Will Support His Candidacy For State Senator.

WAS NO OPPOSITION HERE.

THREE WARDS INSTRUCTED DELEGATES TO VOTE FOR HIM.

Thirty-one Votes Will be Cast for Mr. Ackerman at County Convention—Some Republicans in Second Ward Objected to Instructing Delegates—Ackerman Ticket Elected in Fourth Ward.

The Republicans of Plainfield are to present a solid front at the county convention at Elizabeth Thursday in support of their candidate, Ernest R. Ackerman. Last night, the Republicans of this city held their primaries to elect delegates to the convention. In three out of the four wards, resolutions were passed instructing the delegates to support Mr. Ackerman. In the other, the Fourth ward, the Ackerman ticket won.

FIRST WARD.

The primary in the First ward was held in the old City National Bank building. J. B. Coward was made chairman and L. A. Dunavan secretary. The following resolution was unanimously passed: "Resolved, That the delegates elected at the primary meeting be instructed to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of Ernest R. Ackerman for State Senator from Union county."

The officers of the election were: Judge, Wm. B. Ayres; inspector, B T. Barnes; clerk, H. B. McDonald. The votes cast were 91, of which 2 were thrown out. The votes of the successful candidates were as follows: David S. Dunavan, 87; E. B. Maynard, 87; Amos Andrews, 87; H. G. Adams, 87; J. E. Flannery, 87; H. Templin, 86. There was a small scattered vote. C. J. Newman and L. A. Dunavan were elected members of the county committee without opposition.

SECOND WARD.

The Second ward primary, held in the Bryant School building, passed off without incident save for a little argument as to whether the delegation should go instructed or not. There was an unanimity of opinion in favor of Mr. Ackerman as State Senator, but there were a few who objected on principle to the instructing of delegates, but they were overcome and the following resolution was passed: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the delegates should use their best endeavors to secure the nomination of Ernest R. Ackerman as Senator." Geo. D. Patten was chairman of that primary, and H. C. Durar, secretary.

The officers of the election were as follows: Judge, P. N. Kline; inspector, W. P. Spangenberg; clerk, R. A. Frey.

There were sixty-two ballots cast. The vote for the seven delegates was S. A. Ginna, 62; Marion S. Ackerman, 62; J. B. Dumont, 61; Josiah Browne, 61; George P. Mellick, 60; Charles C. Davis, 60, and Lewis Peterson, 55. The unsuccessful candidates were A. B. Beers, 4; J. W. Jackson, 4; Benjamin Sutton, 2; C. S. Foote, 2, and J. B Bromfield, 1.

William N. Runyon and George D. Patten were elected members of the county executive committee. One vote was cast for H. C. Durar for that office.

THIRD WARD.

The primary in the Third Ward was held at the Casino. Assemblyman Roger F. Murray was elected chairmam and John D. Titsworth secretary. The following resolution was passed: "Resolved: that the delegates elected at the primary election of this ward be requested to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of Ernest R. Ackerman for State Senator and to vote for him at the county convention as long as he is a candidate."

The officers in charge of the balloting were Judge F. E. Marsh; inspector, Eli Odam; clerk, J. Casper Kirkner.

There were 59 ballots cast. The vote for the eight delegates was as follows: Alex. Gilbert, 58; F. H. Andrews, 58; I. W. Rushmore, 59; J. W. Murray, Jr., 57; L. M. Daniel, 59; B. Frank Coriell, 59; F. E. Marsh, 58; A. S. Paterson, 56. J. Frank Hubbard, John Bushnell, William Mayhew and J. C. Kirkner received one vote each.

William T. Kirk and Roger F. Murray were elected to the county executive committee. Alex. Gilbert received one vote.

FOURTH WARD.

At the Fourth ward primary, held in Reform Hall, it was decided by the leaders that it would be better policy

ALIS TEAM ORGANIZES.

PLAINFIELD'S CRACK JUNIOR FOOTBALL 11 WILL TAKE THE FIELD.

Captain Phillips Has Found Sufficient Material For a Strong Team And Will Open the Season in a Week or Two.

The original Alis football eleven will make its appearance on the gridiron in a week or two stronger than ever. Since the return of its leading spirit, Roy T. Phillips, new energy has been infused in the ranks and the team has decided to schedule a full season as in former years. At first it was thought that the players were too scattered to permit the reorganization of the team but a glance over the material on hand showed that there was plenty to choose from and Phillips has laid his plans accordingly.

On Saturday afternoon, or a week after at the latest, the team will play its first game. Already the boys have been out practicing for several weeks with various teams and are in fair condition. Games are being scheduled with the Westfield, Dunellen and Cranford teams, the Orioles, of Jersey City, Pingry's School, of Elizabeth, Stevens School, of Hoboken, Rutgers "Prep" of New Brunswick, and a Harlem eleven.

The composition of the Alis team is by no means a settled matter as yet for there are too many good men in the field for the different positions to require the picking of the team at this early date. The lineup for the first game is likely to be somewhat as follows: Left end, Woolston; left tackle, Bull; left guard, Long; centre, Taylor; right guard, Leal; right tackle, Townsend; right end, Finch; quarter back, Dumont; left half back, Thomas; right half back, Cuming; full back, Phillips.

Of the eleven Long, Taylor, Finch, Dumont, Cuming and Phillips were all members of the team when it first started. Woolston went with the team when the North Plainfield eleven disbanded. Bull is new this year. Leal and Townsend have played but little with the Alis boys. Thomas is a Dunellen boy now attending Leal's School.

Kirby Dwight, a freshman at Princeton, is now home from college for a while and may return to the Alis team to play. He made for himself a great reputation at quarter on the Alis, running down Elizabeth's great sprinter in a game played here.

Then there are Carroll L. Runyon, Van R. Schuyler and half a score of other candidates who may get a show. Runyon, although rather new at the game, makes a plucky guard, but is rather heavy for the general average of the team.

SOLEMN REQUIEM MASS OFFERED

Funeral Services of Dottie Casey at St. Mary's Church.

The funeral of Dottie Casey took place yesterday morning from her parents residence, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Casey, 415 West Third street, and from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock, where a solemn requeim mass was offered by Rev. Father Smyth, who spoke at length on the kind disposition and loving character of the deceased, who was a member of the Angels' Society of the church. The members of the society turned out in a body in charge of St. Mary Esther. The floral tributes were magnificant, completely covering the entire top of the handsome white casket. The family have the sympathy of their many friends who knew that everything possible was done to alleviate the pains of the little one who bore her suffering uncomplaining. The pall bearers were Masters Owens, Kelly, Sommers, Kyle, Flattly and Lyness.

HAVOC OF THE WIND.

Part of the Washingtonville Ice House Blown Over—Workmen Hurt.

During the wind yesterday afternoon a bend in the roof of the new icehouse, being built in Washingtonville for the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, blew off, carrying with it two men who were at work there, Frank Conger and Theodore Stites, both of the borough.

When Conger felt the roof going he jumped, the distance being thirty feet. He struck on his feet and was considerably jarred. Stites fell the entire distance and was bruised and scratched as a result. Dr. Buchanan was sent for and made a hasty examination. Although not able to tell positively yet, the doctor thinks there are no internal injuries and that the man is not hurt seriously.

Will Cool Off in Jail.

On a charge made by Janitor Gettiesen, of the Y. M. C. A., William Daley was arrested last evening by Marshal Schenck in the borough. The charge was abuse and being drunk and disorderly. This morning Daley was sent to Somerville for ten days.

HOPED MR. ACKERMAN WILL WIN ON THIRD BALLOT.

With So Many Candidates it Will Be Impossible to Nominate Anyone On the First Ballot—Mr. Ackerman Has Strong Support—Ex-Sheriff Kyte a Candidate—Anything to Beat Cross.

A great cloud of uncertainty still hides the identity of the Republican candidate for State Senator from Union county. From present appearances the question will not be decided until the county convention convenes at the Lyceum Theatre, Elizabeth, Thursday. Even then it may take several ballots to find out who is the favored man. Right in the front rank of the candidates for the nomination is the Plainfield man, Ernest R. Ackerman.

Last night the primaries were held in Union county to elect delegates to the county convention when the Republican nominees will be chosen. As a result of the numerous candidates in the field, there were lively times in some of them. Despite all this uncertainty as to the result, the friends of Mr. Ackerman still have a firm belief in his ultimate victory. They realize however, that the contest is to be a close one. One of the prominent workers for Mr. Ackerman, who was well posted as to the results in the county, said that he believed that Mr. Ackerman would be nominated on the third ballot.

From present appearances, it does not seem probable that anybody will nominated on the first ballot. There are too many candidates in the field to make it possible for one man to poll a majority at the start. Of course, Plainfield will put up the name of Ernest R. Ackerman. Elizabeth will name Judge Cross. Chas. N. Codding will be Westfield's candidate. Ex-Sheriff George F. Kyte will be named by the Fanwood delegation. Cranford will present the name of J. W. Furgeson, of that place. Freeholder J. Martin Roll will be a candidate from Springfield.

In the first ballot, Mr. Ackerman is considered certain of 61 votes. Plainfield is solidly for him and there is good promise of support from Rahway and several delegates from Elizabeth. Linden is also counted in Mr. Ackerman's supporters.

Judge Cross captured the bulk of the Elizabeth delegation for the first ballot, but it may desert him toward the end. Mr. Codding's delegation won in Westfield. There were three tickets there. The Codding ticket, the opposition and a split from the latter. The split in the opposition saved the day for Mr. Codding. It is likely, however, that the vote will be merely a complimentary one. Mr. Roll carried Springfield and claims Summit and Union township, which are also claimed by Judge Cross.

Mr. Furgeson will not remain long in the race. Cranford will give him a complimentary vote and then turn to one of the leading candidates.

Ex-Sheriff Kyte was the choice of the delegations from Fanwood borough and township. He will receive their vote on the first ballot. There is, it is rumored, a secret alliance between his faction and the supporters of Mr. Ackerman. If anything should happen to Mr. Ackerman's chances, then the Plainfield delegation is to support Kyte. Westfield, while it will take the stand at the start for Codding, will willingly agree on Kyte as a compromise candidate and assist the Plainfield and Fanwood Republicans to elect him and down the Elizabeth man Cross.

If, however, Ackerman shows plenty of strength, then the Kyte supporters will support him after the first or second ballot. There is a possibility that Westfield may follow that same lead if Codding does not make a good run and aid in the defeat of Judge Cross.

For Champion's Release.

William G. DoMeza, the lawyer, has procured a writ of habeas corpus from Judge Vail, of the Court of Common Pleas, in the case of Albert Champion. The writ is returnable Wednesday morning, November 2d, at 10 o'clock, when it will come up for argument to show cause why Champion should not be released.

First Political Meeting.

Matthew Maguire, of Paterson, the candidate for Governor on the Socialist Labor ticket, will address a meeting of workingmen in T. A. B. Hall Thursday night.

When thirsty? Water.

Now use the same good common sense, and what would you give them when they are too thin? The best fat-forming food, of course.

Somehow you think of Scott's Emulsion at once.

For a quarter of a century it has been making thin children, plump; weak children, strong; sick children, healthy.

OUR PORTO RICAN POSSESSIONS.

The Oath of Allegiance Taken by the Insular Cabinet.

San Juan de Porto Rico, Oct. 25.—The members of the insular cabinet took the oath of allegiance to the United States Sunday with fitting solemnity. They will issue a manifesto announcing their resolution to avoid partisan politics and end party strife.

General Ortega has embarked on board the Spanish steamer Montevideo, and was saluted from the shore. He made a speech declaring that the island had surrendered by order from Madrid, adding that he would never have done so without such an order. The general was saluted by the United States cruiser Newark when he left.

Rear Admiral Schley and his staff are on board the Newark, awaiting the arrival of Commander Snow, who is to take command of the United States naval station at San Juan before departing.

Colonel Hunter, secretary of the United States military commission, leaves Ponce on October 26 on board the Philadelphia, being in poor health.

The efficient work of the United States commission has won popularity for its members among the people of San Juan, and there have been a number of graceful farewells exchanged.

A movement has been started to send a Porto Rican commission to Washington in order to represent to the authorities there the needs of the people of the island.

About twelve thousand dollars has been collected as customs duties since October 18, the day the United States formally took possession of Porto Rico.

The Stike at Pana, Ill.

Pana, Ill., Oct. 25.—The union miners claim to feel more buoyant than at any time since the strike was inaugurated. One reason is that notices have been posted in and around the mines saying that no insurance would be paid.

Pit Boss Franklin has resigned, saying that he could not risk his life with the careless negro miners.

Harry Stephens, the negro who led the riot of three weeks ago, has left for Alabama, saying that he had had enough of Pana. Other negroes accompanied him.

The militia, it is said, will leave this week, Troop B returning to Bloomington to-day.

The negro miners have secured a preacher and organized a church. A negro school also will be opened with a negro instructor from Alabama.

Big Blaze in Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, Oct. 25.—Flames which destroyed property worth $600,000, and because of which several lives may be lost, started yesterday afternoon in a cargo of jute on Pier No. 39 in South Brooklyn and made such rapid headway that within two hours from the time the fire was discovered the buildings on three city blocks, the wharves and bulkheads along the bay front for an equal distance and several vessels riding at anchor in the bay were on fire.

From three o'clock until dark the fire lasted. The flames were fed on hundreds of bales of cotton and shiploads of jute and barrels of resin and turpentine and alcohol.

Anarchists on Kaiser's Trail.

Haifa, Palestine, Oct. 25.—The police made an important arrest of a well known Anarchist here yesterday.

Extraordinary precautions are being taken to insure the safety of Emperor William and Empress Augusta Victoria. During the time that they are here veiled women will not be allowed in the streets, as the police fear that Anarchists might assume this disguise.

Alexandria, Oct. 25.—An Italian Anarchist was arrested here yesterday. He was a passenger on a steamer bound for Palestine.

Spanish Cabinet Council.

Madrid, Oct. 25.—A cabinet council has unexpectedly assembled to consider, it is announced, the questions involved in the repatriation of the Spanish troops and communications from the Spanish peace commission.

It is believed, however, that the minister of war, General Correa, has resigned.

The premier, Senor Sagasta, does not deny this, but he says this matter will not be submitted to the council.

Quarters for Torpedoboat.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Constructor Bowles of the Brooklyn navy yard visited the navy department yesterday to arrange for the laying up for the winter of eight torpedo boats that have been in active service during the war. They will be hauled entirely out of water and stored, after some repairs are made, in the Brooklyn yards.

One hundred and fifty thousand dollars has been appropriated for the building of sheds at the Boston navy yard for this purpose, and plans and specifications are now being drawn up.

OUR ANSWER TO SPAIN

Emphatic Position Taken on the Cuban Debt Question.

TIRED OF SPANISH DELAY

We Will Not Assume the Debt of Cuba and the Spanish Commission is so Informed. Porto Rican and Ladrones Questions When They Are Finished the Philippines Will Be Taken Up.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 25.—At yesterday's meeting of the peace commission in Paris the American commissioners were ordered to deliver to their adversaries something very closely approaching an ultimatum. The president is satisfied at last that the Spanish commissioners are purposely delaying the negotiations. This is the belief of the American commission also. The time has now come to cut off all false pleas and to come directly to the main issues left open by the protocol, namely, the disposition of the Philippines.

Up to this point the entire time of the peace commissioners has been consumed in repeated efforts on the part of the Spanish commissioners to force the Cuban debt question upon the attention of the joint commission against the firm opposition of the American commissioners. The latter have stated as positively as they could that under no circumstances will they assume sovereignty over Cuba, involving an assumption of the Cuban debt, and the time has now come when, in the opinion of the American commissioners, the Spaniards must be made to understand that this answer is final and conclusive.

So far the American commissioners, while preserving a firm attitude, have treated the Spaniards with the utmost courtesy and consideration, allowing frequent postponements of the work of the joint commission to accommodate the Spaniards, but now, without departing from their courteous treatment of the Spaniards, the American commissioners find it incumbent upon them to speak very plainly as to the determination of the United States government in regard to this matter of the Cuban debt and Cuban sovereignty as passed over and beyond recall.

The Two Commissions Meet.

Paris, Oct. 25.—The American peace commissioners were in session yesterday from 10 a. m. to almost 2 p. m., when they repaired to the joint session.

They took with them a carefully prepared written answer to the amended proposals of the Spaniards regarding Cuba.

It is understood that the American reply is to a certain degree in the nature of a compromise proposal.

The consideration by the commissions of the Porto Rican and Ladrones questions has now been merged with the Cuban question and all the points involved are being carried forward to a simultaneous conclusion. When this has been arrived at the Philippines question will be taken up.

Of course there is a possibility of a disagreement, and the Spaniards, if the American commissioners decide not to assume any portion of the Cuban indebtedness, may announce their unwillingness to proceed any farther with negotiations based upon the protocol. Should the Spaniards decide to do this, it will be because they wish to excite the pity of their creditors and of other nations.

The Cortes may then be asked to indorse their action.

In fact, Spain may even prefer a resumption of hostilities to acquiescence in the American refusal to share their financial burden.

The Americans, however, have intimated to the Spaniards the possibility that Spain may at some future period be able to deal with an independent Cuban government regarding the assumption of the provincial and municipal portions of the Cuban debt, which is estimated to have been $150,000,000 before the last rebellion in Cuba broke out and $500,000,000 contracted since 1895.

But, should independent Cuba, as she doubtless would, refuse to assume more than her proportion of the debt, based on actual betterments in Cuba, and only, even in this case of obligations contracted previous to 1895, Spain would be compelled to appeal to her people and confront them with practically seven-eighths of the debt contracted before the last revolution and the whole $500,000,000 contracted since.

Spain would also be compelled to declare her inability to meet her obligations, and this, at present, seems to the Spaniards a more bitter alternative than to accept the United States' refusal to share the Cuban debt, with all that this means, the idea being that the Spaniards would be able to call the attention of their creditors to the unyielding, though fruitless efforts in their behalf.

Finally, it is said that there are persons high in the Spanish councils who claim to believe that Spain would rather submit dumbly and helplessly to decimation or dismemberment than confront this continued financial burden.

One course would leave her pride unsullied, it is claimed, and the other is regarded as doubtful, if not impossible of adoption within the boundaries of national solvency.

Mrs. Guilford Extradited.

London, Oct. 25.—Dr. Nancy Guilford, the Bridgeport, Conn. midwife, who is wanted in that city upon a charge of complicity in the murder of Emma Gill, was formally extradited in the Bow street police court yesterday.

Solicitor Wilson, Mrs. Guilford's counsel, said that he had read the evidence and upon the strength of it he could not resist his client's extradition.

The statement that the prisoner had made a confessionu, he said, was incorrect. On the contrary she had always denied her guilt.

EVACUATION OF CUBA.

Spain to Be Allowed Until January 1 to Remove Her Troops.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The president yesterday considered a telegram from General Wade at Havana recommending that the limit of time allowed the Spaniards to vacate Cuba be extended from December 1 to January 1.

He said that it would be practically impossible for the 124,000 Spanish troops to leave before the first of the year. The recommendation was approved.

In the meantime the United States troops now in Cuba and others to be dispatched, will take possession of the territory as fast as the Spaniards vacate it, probably leaving Havana until the last.

In regard to the reported purpose of the Spaniards to dismount and remove to Spain the heavy ordnance of the forts and arsenals about Havana, it is said in positive terms that nothing of the kind will be permitted, and if this movement had already begun, it would be stopped at once.

The instructions given our evacuation commissioners at Havana covered all these questions, and explicitly provided that only the arms in the hands of the troops and what is generally understood as "impediments" would be permitted to be taken away.

AFFAIRS AT SANTIAGO.

A Narrow Escape for Gen. Wood. Free Rations Demoralizing.

Santiago de Cuba, Oct. 25.—General Wood, the acting military commander here, and Major Brooks, had a narrow escape Sunday evening from a serious disaster. They had started down the bay, on the way to Morro Castle, on board a steam launch. The engineer carelessly started to fill the boilers suddenly, while they were almost red hot.

Major Brooks saw the danger, stopped the launch, had the fire drawn, and the launch was towed back to her starting place.

The engineer was discharged. Majors Starr and Brooks returned yesterday from a trip to Baracoa, Sagua and other places. They report that there is no destitution among the Cubans at the places visited and that the distribution of free rations is having a demoralizing effect upon the people, who do not want to go to work on the sugar estates, which, with other industries, are badly in need of help, but cannot obtain workmen.

Fear Indian Troubles.

Perry, Oklahoma, Oct. 25.—Serious trouble is brewing among the Commanche, Kiowa and Apache Indians. For thirty years, since the Medicine Lodge treaty, the government has fed these Indians, but that treaty expired July 1.

They have commenced killing cattle belonging to Texas cattlemen and a crisis is near.

The Indians have no crops, few cattle, and have had no money for several months. Men who know say starvation threatens them.

There are 1,500 Commanches, 1,300 Kiowas and 600 Apaches.

Gone After Bug ah Mah Ge Shig.

Walker, Minn., Oct. 25.—It has been learned from reliable sources that fifteen Indians, armed with Winchesters and carrying handcuffs, have gone after Bug-ah-Mah-Ge-Shig and his son. At the agency the excitement is great and news will be anxiously awaited.

A petition signed by fifteen chiefs and 183 braves, was sent to Secretary Bliss yesterday asking him to allow them to cut logs during the coming winter.

North Carolina's Race War.

Wilmington, N. C., Oct. 25.—Advices from Ashpole say the town is closely guarded by whites and that all is quiet.

Four negroes who shot the three white guards have been captured. They were run down and brought to bay by the bloodhounds which are thoroughly trained.

The negroes are now confined in box cars at Ashpole, and heavily guarded. It is uncertain yet what the fate of the negroes may be, but it is feared that their cowardly attempt to assassinate the guards will so exasperate the whites as to cause further and more serious trouble.

The guard was composed of eight or ten men who were standing around the fire in the open air, thus becoming easy targets for the negroes, who fired on them under cover of darkness and then fled.

The Ashpole incident has increased the excitement at Wilmington, which was already near the danger line.

Another Rise in Wheat

New York, Oct. 25.—Wheat went up again yesterday because of the war scare abroad. The news that the government of France had given orders to prepare for a reception of infantry at southern French ports threw the Liverpool wheat pit into something approaching a panic just before the close there, and the excitement became so intense and fluctuations so wide that cables reported an inability to more than approximate the closing wheat figures.

The advance for the day was estimated at about 2 1-8d., which carried the price of wheat in Liverpool to between 24 and 26 cents above the parity in Chicago.

During the afternoon the excitement continued in the local market, everybody trying to buy wheat. Prices advanced steadily until they were two cents over the opening figure, the December option selling at 77 3-4 cents, against 75 3-4 cents in the early morning.

The Buffalo Off for the East.

Brooklyn, Oct. 25.—There is every indication at the navy yard that the cruiser Buffalo will get away for Manila to-day provided her coal is put aboard in time. Her stores and crew are already on board, and all that remains to be done is for her bunkers to be filled.

Presidential Appointments.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 25.—The president has appointed Theodore J. Arms of New York an assistant paymaster in the navy and Robert E. Steele of Louisiana to be chaplain in the navy.

THE THREE GRACES.

[By Jaquette.]

Grace Whitely, Grace Lorning and Grace Downlake were known far and wide as the "Three Graces." Grace by name, and possessing grace of form and manner, there was no stigma in the sobriquet. Another strange coincidence was the fact that they were chums, and lived at 15, 17 and 19 St. Valentine avenue. They belonged to the same "smart" set, and worshipped in the same sanctuary.

One day, recently, Grace Downlake rushed into No. 17 and found her friend Grace Lorning busy over a new recipe for making cake. Miss Lorning had already made several mistakes in compounding the ingredients, and when Miss Downlake bounced into the kitchen with, "Oh, Grace, love, I want you to go right down town with me to look at a new fancy in dress goods!" Miss Lorning threw up her hands in dismay, and exclaimed, "Grace Downlake, you're a mean thing; you've made me spoil this delicious cake—I mean, it would have been delicious—by scaring me into putting in the yolk of an egg in place of a lump of butter!"

It was the end of cake making in that house that day—unless the cook may have plunged the conglomeration into a pan and baked it for the coachman, against whom she had a standing grudge.

Grace Whitely gave me a history of the trip the next day. "Why," she said, "we went to Hahne & Co.'s, Newark. I had no idea that such a splendid assortment of dress fabrics could be found outside of New York. Long after we bought our dresses we lingered in discussing the beautiful display. Hahne's is a lovely place to buy everything." Then she showed me her shopping list, and I give my readers an exact copy of what each girl said of her new suit.

Grace Whitely: "An all-wool camel's hair, fifty inches wide, rough effect, in a lovely cadet blue. I know I'll look stunning in it. I paid only 85 cents a yard."

Grace Lorning: "A suit in bayadere stripe, ruby shade, three-tone effect, and forty-five inches wide. If I don't cut a dash, I'll change my name. The price was low; I paid only 75c a yard."

Grace Downlake: "I think 79c a yard was real low for my duchesse satin. It's all silk, too, and twenty inches wide. It's a perfectly sweet shade of brown. When I get it on, I'll make all the other girls envious."

AGAINST THE RAILROAD

Supreme Court Decision in the Joint Traffic Case.

THREE JUDGES DISSENT

The Agreement of the Association Illegal, Included in the Scope of the Anti-Trust Act. The Power of Congress to Regulate Such Corporations Affirmed.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The United States supreme court yesterday decided the Joint Traffic Association Railroad case in favor of the nited States and against the railroads.

Judge Peckham announced the decision. He said that the court could distinguish no difference between this case and that of the trans-Missouri case decided a year ago, which was decided against the railroads.

He said the only new point involved was as to the constitutionality of the anti-trust act. The court had reached the conclusion that as railroad corporations performed duties of a semi-public character, it was within the constitutional power of Congress to regulate them, as provided by the anti-trust act.

The only question then was as to the policy of Congress in adopting such a measure, and as to questions of policy, the court, he said, had nothing to do.

The opinion, which was very brief, was concurred in by Chief Justice Fuller and Judges arlan, Brewer, Brown and Peckham.

Three justices dissented, namely, Judges Gray, Shiras and White.

Judge McKenna took no part in the case, as the prosecution of the Joint Traffic Association was begun while he was attorney general.

After Judge Peckham had announced the opinion, Judge Harlan verbally expressed, with some evidence of satisfaction, his concurrence, on the same ground, he said, as that set forth in the Trans-Missouri case.

Under the decision rendered, the decisions of the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York and of the United States court of appeals, both of which were favorable to the Joint Traffic Association, are reversed.

Miss Churchill's Wedding.

New York, Oct. 25.—Miss Marie Heyl Churchill, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Churchill, was married to Harold Herman John Baring at St. Thomas's church at 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

A large number of invitations were issued and it was one of the most brilliant weddings of the season.

Florists were at work on the decorations early, and when the guests entered they found the church elaborately trimmed with plants and flowers in which white chrysanthemums predominated.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Wesley Brown, and the bride was given away by her father. The best man was George A. H. Churchill, the brother of the bride, while Miss Muriel Baring, the bridegroom's sister, had been selected as maid of honor.

Miss Churchill, who is a tall brunette, wore a white satin gown trimmed with point lace. Her veil was held in place by a diamond tiara and she wore a diamond collarette. She carried a bouquet of white orchids.

At the close of the ceremony a reception was given at 44 West Fifty-first street, the home of the Churchills, after which the pair started on a brief wedding trip. Returning to this city, they will sail for England, the home of the bridegroom, on November 16.

Mr. Baring is thirty years old. He is the son of the late Hon. Thomas C. Baring and a cousin of Lord Revelstoke, whose father was the head of the firm of Baring Brothers & Co.

Race Riot Still on.

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 25.—The race trouble at Harpersville, near here, is still unsettled. Constable Thompson's posse, reinforced by scores of white men from the surrounding country, is still after the negro Bill Burke, and his friends. More bloodshed is looked for.

The whole neighborhood, for miles around, is in an uproar, and every white man is armed.

Burke and his friends are barricaded in his cabin, where they have been ever since Saturday night, when an attempt was made to arrest Burke on the charge of attempting to murder a white man, Charles Freeman.

Up to yesterday morning one white man, Henry Sibley, had been killed and three others wounded. Ten negroes had been killed.

The fight raged all day Sunday. Four of the negro rioters were captured on Sunday night, taken to the town of Forest and lodged in jail.

There are about fifty negroes in the party of Burke, it is believed, and there were others ambushed in the neighborhood.

The whites have surrounded the place. More white men are constantly arriving there all fully armed.

Governor McLaurin is at the scene of the trouble, together with his brother, Prosecuting Attorney Sylvester McLaurin, Judge John Enochs and Congressman Patrick Henry.

House a Century Old Burned.

Braintree, Mass., Oct. 25.—The old Thayer house, which was built more than one hundred years ago, was destroyed by fire Sunday morning. It was owned by W. B. Simmons and occupied by Benjamin Curtin. Curtin lost nearly all of his personal effects.

A high wind blew the chimney down later in the day, and Frank Ross, seven years old, was struck by a falling brick and his skull fractured.

Chaplain McIntyre Dismissed.

Washington, Oct. 25.—President McKinley has approved the court martial sentence dismissing Chaplain Joseph S. McIntyre of the battleship Oregon from the naval service.

Secretary Long has accordingly issued the orders for the chaplain's dismissal. This is the first case of the kind on record.

LIEUTENANT HOBSON'S PLANS.

Boston, Oct. 25.—The Boston Fruit Company's steamer Beverly arrived here at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, having on board Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson.

The Beverly was twenty-four hours late, owing to a heavy storm. She left Port Antonio, Jamaica, on Tuesday last.

Lieutenant Hobson left the city on the ten o'clock train for Washington. When he started from the steamer to go to a carriage at the head of the wharf, a large crowd impeded his progress and enthusiastically cheered him.

Hundreds wanted to shake hands with the hero of the Merrimac and it was with difficulty that he was able to leave the wharf.

The naval constructor, before he left, said that he was not aware that he would attend the peace jubilee at Philadelphia, as stated.

Speaking of his work in raising the sunken Spanish war vessels off Santiago he said he was engaged in the preliminary work which is necessary before an attempt is made to raise the Cristobal Colon, and that it would take at least three weeks more before anything would be ready.

The government had appropriated $500,000 for the raising of the vessel, but it will be money well spent, he said, if the venture proves a success, as the ship is worth $4,000,000.

The purpose of his visit to this country, he said, was to see the secretary of the navy regarding further work on the warships. He thought that if the Viscaya can be saved it would be a paying venture, as she is estimated to be worth $3,000,000.

The Vizcaya had settled in the sand, which had formed a thick bed around her, so that the vessel was resting in an easy position, but a dry dock would have to be built around her before she could be raised.

An appropriation of $1,000,000 would cover the work of raising the Vizcaya, and would enable the government to bring her north and put her in good condition. There was some doubt, however, of saving her.

The Almirante Oquendo, Hobson says, is a hopeless wreck. The Reina Mercedes, which was sunk in Santiago harbor, is a good vessel, and can be raised with little cost.

"When the work on the Infanta Maria Teresa commenced," continued Lieutenant Hobson, "I had fifty American laborers employed, but owing to the foul atmosphere, foul gases and foul water very few escaped sickness, and I was obliged to fall back on Cuban laborers. These men seem to stand the work very well, and under proper supervision can accomplish good results.

"There is a growing sentiment, I find, among naval officers that every one of the sunken Spanish ships should be raised, and, if found to be unseaworthy, to be kept as relics. The Spanish vessels which have been, and those that no doubt will be saved and put in commission should retain their names as a memento of the prowess of America."

PHILADELPHIA'S PEACE JUBILEE.

Preparations for the Celebration Being Completed.

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.—Thousands of visitors are already in town for the exercises of the peace jubilee. Exercises were held in many churches on Sunday in connection with the celebration, but the real jubilee will begin today, when Secretary Long will review the naval vessels which are here.

The scene of the review will be the Delaware river, and it will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The warships that will be in line are the Texas, the New Orleans, the Mayflower, the Columbia, the Marblehead, the Dolphin, the Topeka, the Gloucester, the Winslow, and the Japanese cruiser Kasagi. The Texas is the flagship of the squadron.

On Wednesday will take place the big civic parade, and on the evening of that day there will be a reception to President McKinley at the Union League Club.

The military parade will take place on Thursday, and will be reviewed by the president and General Miles.

In the evening there will be a reception to general officers in the Academy of Music.

The president, vice president and members of his cabinet will arrive in this city on Wednesday afternoon. Secretary Long reached here this morning.

Several Vessels Wrecked.

Orient, L. I., Oct. 25.—The seventy-ton schooner Oscar C. Aiken of Newport, R. I., Captain Orr, coal laden, struck on Plum island and sunk. The crew were saved.

Buffalo, Oct. 25.—The steamship Majestic reports the loss of the schooner Churchill in Lake Superior on the night of October 13. Captain Cain and Barney Nelson, a seaman went down with the boat. The mate, with three other seamen, and the woman cook, were rescued by the Majestic.

Southwest arbor, Me., Oct. 25.—News was received here yesterday that the schooner Two Brothers, Capt. Joseph Andre, bound from Weymouth, N. S., for Portland, went ashore on Little Duck island yesterday and is a total loss. The captain and crew were saved.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 25.—The crew of the brigantine Irma, which went ashore on Thrum Cape Shoals, on Saturday night, were rescued yesterday morning.

Appalling Disaster in China.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 25.—Advices from China say that the overflowing of the Yellow river in Shantung province has caused the most appalling disaster of modern times in Central China. Villages were swept away by hundreds.

One hundred thousand people are ruined and homeless, crouching along the river banks in the pitiless rain. Two thousand were drowned.

The general distress is augmented by the spoiling of the cereal crops by the rainy weather.

Famine will prevail this winter in a district populated by more than a million people.

BRITISH NAVY READY

Torpedo Boat Destroyers Ordered Prepared for Service.

RUSE WORK ON CRUISERS

No Foundation However for the Report That Notices Have Been Sent to the Cunard and White Star Line. French Troops to Be Sent to Toulon. North Atlantic Squadron to Assemble.

London, Oct. 25.—The British admiralty issued a number of significant orders yesterday.

The dock yards at Portsmouth, Devonport and Chatham have each received instructions to prepare six 30-knot torpedo boat destroyers for commissioning, so that they will be able to put to sea in 24 hours.

Overtime has been ordered begun on the first class cruisers Europa and Andromeda, so as to hurry them for sea service.

Several gunboats in the different dock yards have been ordered to postpone necessary refitting.

There is no foundation for the report that the British admiralty has ordered the Cunard and White Star lines to have their subsidized vessels in readiness to be handed over to the admiralty officials.

In spite of the news of war mobilizations which came from France and different parts of England yesterday there was a distinctly better feeling in diplomatic circles last night and a growing belief that the Fashoda dispute will be arranged.

French Preparations.

Paris, Oct. 25.—The municipality of Toulon has been notified that the place will be the center of important military and naval preparations, and to arrange for the immediate reception of four battalions of infantry, 1,500 marines and 600 artillerymen.

Consequently, the municipality has decided to close the schools, which will be used to lodge the troops.

The naval authorities of Toulon have been ordered to expedite preparations for fitting out a new squadron of warships.

The newspapers here warmly praise the exposition of the French side of the Fashoda question presented by the minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, in the Yellow Book on the subject, issued Sunday.

The Figaro says: "If the British government rejects France's moderate and just proposals, it can only be because the government of Great Britain desires, before everything else, the humiliation of France."

The general tone of the press comment is reflected by the Eclair, which remarks:

"An agreement regarding Fashoda can be arrived at provided Great Britain does not persist in asking for the immediate recall of Major Marchand. But, as to an outlet on the Nile, we have an absolute right thereto and will brook no refusal."

The Autorite declares that France ought never to have gone to Fashoda, adding:

"It was a stupid mistake, and now England calls on us to get out. Well, it is no use talking, we shall have to get out, otherwise there will be war, which would be madness."

To Mobilize at Halifax.

Halifax, Oct. 25.—The commanders of all warships of the British North American squadron have received orders to mobilize at Halifax.

H. M. S. Pallas, Talbot and Indefatigable will come here at once, together with two torpedo boat destroyers, now at Bermuda.

The torpedo boats at the dock yard are being overhauled.

The crew of the flagship Renown will be sent to Lawlor's island this week for field practice.

The Renown went to sea yesterday morning for heavy gun practice.

An official at the dock yard said that the calling together of all the warships was significant, in view of the strained relations between France and England.

Federation of Labor.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor met at ten o'clock yesterday morning at their headquarters in the Typographical Temple. Those present were: President Sampel Gompers, Secretary Frank Morrison, Treasurer Frank B. Lennon, First Vice President P. J. McGuire, Second Vice President James Duncan and Third Vice President James O'Connell.

The council will remain in session three or four days. The principal object of the meeting is to prepare the reports to be submitted at the annual convention to be held in Kansas City next December.

The members of the council will also confer with representatives of the trade unionists of England.

The Yellow Fever.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The rapid decline of yellow fever in the South is shown by the few reports now reaching the Marine Hospital service, not a single new case being reported, and but a few dispatches relating to the fever having been sent here in the last forty-eight hours.

The cold weather is accomplishing all that was expected. The officials, however, are adopting all necessary precautionary measures.

Eleven Persons Drowned.

London, Oct. 25.—It has just developed that the German bark Satisfaction, of 43 tons, hailing from Momel, sank during the recent gales in the North sea.

The captain, his wife and crew of nine were drowned, being all on board except a boy, who was saved.

Funeral of Harold Frederic.

London, Oct. 25.—The funeral of Harold Frederic, the novelist and London correspondent of the New York Times, who died last Wednesday, took place at Woking yesterday. The body was cremated immediately after the services.

October 25—Public meeting of Town Improvement Association at Y. M. C. A. Hall, 3 p. m.

Poor Mr. Riker.

Possessed of an eloquent manner and a fluent tongue, together with an inside knowledge of the affairs of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, Secretary and Treasurer Riker appeared before the Common Council last night and indulged in some honeyed words in which he sought to stem the tide of honest sentiment among the people as to the requests he and his associate capitalists and speculators are urging to be granted them in the form of a franchise for the extension of their line to the eastern limits of the city. Mr. Riker is a man of fine address and a lawyer of ability. As a legal gentleman he knows how to make black appear white, and as a trolley promoter he has a delightful way of making such corporations as the Plainfield Street Railway Company pose purely as philanthropic institutions for the benefit of the public, and in whom he and his friends have staked vast personal interests to be carelessly dallied with by uncertain fate.

Mr. Riker appeared before the Common Council last night equipped with every technical fact that could be moulded by his subtle argument into an instrument that would secure for himself and the capitalists a franchise that they would have the people believe is scarcely worth the asking for. From his point of view he had everything his own way for the time being. If he had been a hero in a melo-drama instead of a "bloated capitalist," as he was pleased to term himself and his partners—an epithet, by the way that no one has applied to the trolley promoters in the present agitation—he would have been greeted with tumultous applause from the gallery.

Perhaps, unfortunately for his own gratification, Mr. Riker was nothing but a poor, deluded individual upon whom Plainfield has heaped an awful calamity in the form of a franchise for the operation of a street railway in the principal thoroughfares. It is truly pitiful that Mr. Riker and his honest but poor friends have been so terribly duped by the citizens of Plainfield.

But, strange to say, Mr. Riker and his friends actually want more of such privileges from Plainfield, and they want them, too, until Gabriel's trumpet blows.

Today The Daily Press devotes considerable space to a truthful report of the Council meeting held last night, and in that report Mr. Riker's plea is given a concise but fair part. We hope every Daily Press patron will read what Mr. Riker has to say. We are unable to editorially dissect Mr. Riker's remarks today for the lack of space, but from day to day hereafter for a while it shall be our extreme pleasure to do so.

Mr. Barrows' Position.

Councilman Barrows surprised us last night with an eminently fair and correct, in most particulars, statement of the trolley franchise situation as it has developed up to the present time before the Common Council. Mr. Barrows, no matter how resolute he may be to carry a point when once he undertakes it, seems in this case to be imbued with the idea of doing for the people what the people wish.

His rehearsal of the negotiations to date, the evident advantages of trolley extension, the lethargic attitude of the people towards the franchise as well as their sudden awakening to its value, were all the truth. We must confess our admiration for Mr. Barrows' action in securing a fair hearing for the public in regard to this franchise, when many others in his position, and with the influences that are being brought to bear on him, would doubtless have ignored the popular sentiment and pushed the ordinance through with "bells on."

Mr. Barrows deserves the appreciation of the people for his statement last night. It shows that he is possessed of the most important qualification of a public official—a desire to do as the majority wishes.

We trust that Mr. Barrows will pursue this course to the finish, and if he does we are confident that the Plainfield Street Railway will secure no further franchises till they pay a fair price for them and submit to stipulations that are in the right interests of the people.

PILLAGERS ON THE MARCH.

The Pillager band of the Chippewas which has revolted against authority and engaged in an outbreak that caused the death of Major Wilkinson and several of his soldiers, is the unruly element among the Indians in Minnesota. The band is always restless and ready to move at any time. The illustration shows the Pillagers on the march, and, as is usual with the noble red men, the women are carrying the burdens.

Don't Despair.

East Second street people need not despair of ever securing trolley facilities for their section of the city because Mr. Riker has made bold to withdraw from the Common Council the application of the Plainfield Street Railway Company for a franchise over the proposed route. Such a move was not unexpected on the part of the trolley capitalists.

Those who know something of the inside workings of the city government in dealing with the street railway company well remember that four years ago, when Mayor Fisk was chairman of the street committee of the Common Council, the capitalists assumed identically the same attitude in reference to the extension then under consideration that they do now. In order to secure the Dunellen line Mr. Fisk insisted that the company also extend their road to Netherwood. The capitalists said that they would not do so. Mr. Fisk then took the position that the Front street extension franchise would not be granted. The company said that ended it and that they would make no further efforts for a franchise to Dunellen.

It is a fact, however, that the street railway company are running their cars to Netherwood today. The same result will eventually prevail in relation to East Second street.

While the registration in Plainfield this fall is above the average for the usual State campaign, reports from the county seat show that there very little interest seems to be taken in the coming election. The registration there is smaller than it has been for several years and has greatly surprised the managers of both political parties. With one of the Gubernatorial candidates residing in that very city, it is but natural to think her citizens would show unusual interest in the ballot.

The school savings bank system for keeping the pennies of the children and encouraging thrift among them has been adopted by many schools in this country. The idea is French, but it is a good one, and it is claimed that it now only develops economical habits among the children, but that it benefits them by restricting their expenditures for candy and other useless and injurious articles.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Next Friday evening there will be a missionary meeting at Warren chapel. An interesting programme will be presented.

—The Sunshine Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue church will hold a sewing meeting in the church parlors tomorrow afternoon.

—Foster M. Voorhees, Republican nominee for Governor, will speak at Elizabeth Thursday at the close of the G. O. P. county convention.

—The new engine house in the West End is now enclosed and the work on the building is progressing favorably. It will be finished December 1st.

—The tracks of the street railway on West Front street, near Liberty street, are again being repaired, making travel far from pleasant.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"A Jay in New York" by Mr. Wm. Jerome and his Herald Square comedians will be the attraction at Stillman Music Hall tonight. It is a farce comedy of merit, very cleverly interpreted by a superior cast of popular artists headed by Mr. Wm. Jerome and the famous artists, Boyle and Graham, said to be the greatest pair of fun makers before the public. The comedy is replete with fun and specialties which have been successfully presented in all the principal cities, receiving highest praise. There are some eighteen people in the play, one and all of whom are engaged with special reference to their impersonations.

A farce comedy's intent is to amuse and when a farce comedy does it as thoroughly and legitimately as "McFadden's Row of Flats," the play which is to be here Saturday at Music Hall, then it is as likely to become popular as has this unique and droll clustering of human caricaturing. Some twenty or more clever comedians, vocalists and specialists have the handling of the lines and situations and whether it be the droll impersonation of McFadden by Jos. J. Sullivan or the eccentric German Baumgartner by Harry Crandall, each and all are well enacted.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The November Century is to have a novelty in the way of a colored cover designed by Grasset, the finest poster-maker of Paris. He has pictured Alexander the Great on his steed "Bucephalus," to mark the opening of Professor Benjamin Ide Wheeler's serial "Life of Alexander," which will be a feature of the magazine during the coming year. The great gray war-horse is represented in the immediate foreground, reined in until he has almost fallen on his haunches. On his back is the determined young Alexander, in rich trappings of gold and purple. The background is a typical Macedonian scene, with stately temples and palaces showing through the foliage. In the distance are the purple Olympian mountains. The colors are quiet but rich, like old tapestries.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, N. J., Oct. 25.—Burglars were prowling around several houses and shops here Sunday night, but as far as can be learned did not effect an entrance anywhere. Isaac J. Stites, the blacksmith, when he opened his shop yesterday morning, found two panes of glass broken and the staple in one of the outside doors nearly out where some one had pulled it. Nothing was missing except a peach basket. Mathew Egany, the tinsmith, says that some one broke a pane of glass in one of the side windows of his shop, and John Henry reports that some one was prowling around his house also.

The Methodist church netted $80 from their anniversary exercises last week. There was $30 from the collections and $50 from the supper.

The dance which was to have been given Friday night in Apgar's Hall, was postponed on account of the rain.

Mrs. Emily Apgar, of Front street, is visiting her daughther, Mrs. Sherman Cooley, of Flemington.

The chestnuts around here are about all gone. The crop this year was a good one in this vicinity.

Charles H. Rugg and wife, of North Plainfield, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Swackhamer.

Mrs. Duncan, of Perth Amboy, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Florence Giles, of Front street.

Miss Jane Churchill entertained Miss Williams, of Westfield, yesterday.

The Epworth League will hold a business meeting tonight.

Adam Dealaman spent yesterday in New York.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Oct. 25.—Although some time has elapsed now since George Waldron, Abner Coriell's hired man, left the village with over $4 belonging to his employer, he has not been caught. A warrant is out for his arrest, and the police of Newark are on his track. A few days after the alleged theft neighbors say that they saw Waldron in town, and Mr. Coriell is inclined to believe it because an old overcoat which was missed at the same time Waldren went away was found in its usual place. A few days after that an unknown man was killed on the railroad in New Brunswick. As no further trace of Waldren has been found Mr. Coriell is inclined to think that his old workman was the unknown victim.

Rev. Frank Fletcher, of the Baptist church, exchanged pulpits Sunday morning, with A. I. Martine, of the Presbyterian church, Dunellen.

Miss Laura Stout, of New Orleans, and Mr. and Mrs. William Stout, of Newark, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Ward.

The Father Light Society, of the Baptist church, will meet with Miss VanMiddlesworth Saturday afternoon.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Oct. 25—Mrs. Ann H. Cleaver entertained a number of her relatives at a dinner given at her home in Scotch Plains Wednesday last. The occasion was the return of her brother, Carmon R. Hetfield, and his wife, who have been for the past year and a half making a tour of the world, returning via Japan and San Francisco. The party was an unusual one, in that the ages of the four sisters present—Mrs. Swaney and Mrs. Pound, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Allen, of Plainfield, and Mrs. Cleaver—aggregated over 300 years. These, together with many of the nephews and nieces, formed an enjoyable reunion.

The Republican primary held in Excelsior Hall last evening, to elect three delegates to the county convention and two members of the county committee, called out the largest number of voters that have attended any of the primaries held this fall, and long before the time to call the primary to order it was seen that a slate had been fixed, but everything passed off harmoniously. The meeting was called to order by John Robison, chairman last primary, and on motion he was honored by a re-election. Charles D. Stout was nominated and elected secretary. After the call was read the primary proceeded to the election of delegates. E. L. Hand, James Johnston and Frank R Allen were elected from a field of six candidates. Then the nomination for two members of county committee was taken up. L. W. Miller, E. L. Hand and George Ball were nominated. This necessitated another ballot being taken, and Hand and Ball were elected.

The Republican voters of Fanwood Borough held their primary last evening in the Fanwood Clubhouse to elect one delegate to the county convention which meets at Elizabeth Thursday, and one member of the county committee. The primary was called to order by George Kyte, chairman of the last primary, and on motion was re-elected. Horce Young was elected secretary. The call for a delegate found two candidates T. R. Collins and W. M. Maxum. Mr. Collins received the largest number of votes cast and was declared elected. For county committeeman George Kyte and Dr. F. W. Westcott were nominated. Mr. Kyte receiving the majority of votes was declared elected. On motion the primary then adjourned, and it will go on record as one of the most spirited ever held in the borough.

The ladies of the Methodist church are arranging to hold a New England supper in Excelsior Hall, Wednesday evening, November 2d.

Mrs. Follmer and family and Miss Nellie MacLaughlin, all of Lewisburgh, N. J., are visiting Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Braker.

Fred Schmidt, of the Central Hotel, who has been detained at home by illness for several days, resumed his position yesterday.

George E. Hall's home in the borough has been much improved by a new coat of paint and the addition of a large porch.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Dunn are rejoicing over the arrival of a young son Saturday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. George Goodbrough are entertaining Mr. Goodbrough's mother from New York.

Mrs. A. L. Frentz spent Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. W. S. Jimerson, of Westfield.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Oct. 25—There was trouble in the Republican camp last night when the primary for the election of delegates to the county convention was held in the town room. The room was packed to the door and many had to wait their turn before they could get in to cast their vote, but the fight was for members of the county executive committee. Charles N. Codding and Charles H. Denman were named by the regular Republicans, but they were opposed by Samuel W. Reese and John M. Ledley, who named S. W. Reese and N. B. Gardner. The election resulted in the following choice: Delegates to the county convention—Charles F. Conant, Frank S. Smith, Fred C. Decker, Edward N. Brown, Edgar R. Pearsall, Eugene Wilcox and Ezra S. Bloodgood; members of Republican township executive committee—Martin Welles, Wellington Morehouse, James T. Pierson, George E. Gilmore, John J. Coger, C. H. Denman, George Wrenneck, G. B. Hoyt and David Manning; members of the county executive committee—Charles H. Denman and Charles N. Codding. The delegates will all vote for Charles N. Codding for Senator.

GARWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Garwood, Oct. 25—Burtis Kope, who has been in the employ of Grocer C. S. Beadle for some time past, has gone to Ohio.

Powers & Robinson, of Elkton, Md., are the purchasers of the old Hercules factory and intend getting machinery in readiness at the plant for the manufacture of boilers and machinery at a near future date.

Owing to the rush of orders the C. & C. factory is now running on several nights during the week.

Advice to Mothers.

Children's teeth should be cleaned from the first. A corner of a silk handkerchief dipped in water with a little borax in it should be wiped over the gums after each meal. From eighteen months and upwards they should be cleaned daily, at first in the same way, and afterwards with a soft badger's-hair brush. After two years old a dentifrice, such as prepared chalk, may be used. When this is done the teeth will not fall out early, and the child will be saved from such deformity as often happens on the arrival of the second teeth before the jaw is sufficiently formed to receive them. The mouth becomes overcrowded when this happens, and early visits to the dentist become necessary.

In fever a wineglassful of the following may be given from time to time to quench thirst:

Citrate of potash.....30 grains
Rice-water ..... 1 pint.

Tonics should not be given to a child whose bowels are disordered, as they are not likely to be then of any service, absorption being too imperfect. Some tonics, notably iron, may even act as irritants, and increase the mischief in these cases; they are medicines for convalescence, when they will increase the appetite, the force of the pulse, and the muscular strength.

To prevent needles from rusting in the summer-outing housewife, they should be thrust through a bit of oiled silk as they are put into the flannel leaves.

Cleaning Made Easy.

An apparatus for cleaning horses by machinery has been invented.

The cause of this revolution in the art of horse-cleaning, rubbing-down, and currying, all in one, is a simple contrivance, a movable shaft at one end of which is a circular brush composed of fairly stiff bristles. The brush, which is driven by steam, revolves many hundred times a minute, and is guided by the cleaner. Two of these cleaners operating with the brushes can on one animal accomplish more in one minute than four men with the old brush and currycomb in twenty minutes.

In exactly forty seconds the animal can be turned out as clean as a new pin, not a speck of dirt to be discovered on his fine sleek coat. No sooner does the brush touch the body of the horse than the dead hair and dirt fly in all directions. At first the horse starts nervously at the noise of the revolving shafts, but the instant he feels the touch of the brush he gives every indication of pleasure.

The harder the pressure on the brush the harder will be the rubbing, of course, and when the sensation becomes uncomfortable the horse moves away. In this way the cleaners are easily informed how hard a rubbing the animal will stand.

Starch For Collars and Cuffs.

The following recipe is a very valuable one, being learned from a French laundress whose collars and cuffs were remarkable for the beautiful ivory gloss her skilled treatment imparted to them. Take two ounces of the best white starch, and pour over it, without stirring, half a pint of cold water. Allow this to stand while you dissolve as much borax as will lie heaped up on a shilling in a teacup of boiling water. When the borax mixture is cold, add it to the starch. Pour into the starch one tablespoonful of turpentine, and mix the whole carefully with the hand. On no account must any undissolved borax be put in the starch, or it will make shiny patches on the linen. This quantity is enough for four pairs of cuffs and seven collars. A little borax water should be kept in readiness for adding to the starch should it become too thick.

A PARIS SUGGESTION.

Separate Waists.

Separate waists made up in rich and handsome materials still retain their popularity for dressy wear and it is hard to prognosticate when this almost indispensable article of feminine attire will be entirely abandoned. For the woman with a slim purse it is a positive necessity as with one handsome skirt, waist and blouses may be donned suitable for almost any occasion.

A lovely importation designed for visiting wear is of rose colored Liberty satin, trimmed with a girdle and bands of jewelled embroidered satin. It is made with a square yoke effect, the lower portion draped gracefully and caught up with a full rosette on the left side. The shirred sleeves are finished with small puffs at the shoulders.

To Prepare Parchment for Painting.

Make a firm pad with listing, and having dipped it in finely powdered white pumice stone, rub it over the parchment. If water colors be mixed with alum water, and used upon parchment prepared in this manner, they will not sink.

Spain's Ill Luck Due to an Opal.

Opals are coming into fashion again, but the old superstition as to the ill-luck attending them is not dead in Spain.

Spanish people believe that all the trials that have come to the reigning house are through the influence of a cursed opal ring.

The ring belonged to that famous beauty the Comtesse de Castiglione.

One of the admirers of this beauty was Alfonso XII. of Spain. She thought he was going to marry her, but he did not, and she resolved on revenge. She sent him this magnificent ring.

The King showed it to his wife, Queen Mercedes, who was charmed with its beauty, and begged to keep it. Alfonso gave it to her readily, and she slipped it on her finger. From that moment she pined away, and in a few months died.

The ring fell from her dead hand, and the King gave it to his grandmother, Queen Christina, who died a few months later.

Next the ring was given to Alfonso's sister, the Infanta Maria del Pilar, who wore it but a few days before she died of a mysterious illness.

After this series of fatalities, the King determined to keep the ring himself, and he slipped it on his finger. From that moment his health commenced to fail, and in twenty-four hours he was dead. Physicians could never quite account for it, and the matter was hushed up.

Queen Christina, who is not in any wise superstitious, took possession of the ring after her husband's death, but the other members of the family begged her to destroy it. This she refused to do; but to prevent it from doing other damage she hung it about the neck of the patron saint, where it is to-day.

The Spaniards, however, are not satisfied yet. They credit this war with the United States to the ring.

Shamrock Photograph Frame.

To make this frame a piece of strawboard or strong cardboard is necessary which is cut into the shape of a shamrock. Cut oval shaped apertures in each section of the leaf and then cover each one with velvet, green being the most appropriate.

The covering is done by gluing the velvet on the wrong side, snipping pieces here and there out of the edges so that they may not make thick folds. Across the hole slit the velvet lengthways and across. Turn these edges in, straining them well over the board as you do so, and glue them into place. At the back of this glass is glued, and then the photograph or picture is placed behind it; glue brown paper over the back. This kind of frame is easily made and when hung against the wall is very effective.

The Art of Furnishing.

The housekeeper returning home with her activities directed temporarily towards house-cleaning interests will be wise to let some of the wisdom and knowledge she must have gathered through the much preaching on these matters of late years bear fruit. Her new intelligence applied to autumn renovating will be of great benefit to her family's health and comfort. It is true of modern furnishings that they aid or retard sanitary conditions accordingly as they are wisely or recklessly made use of. Rugs, hard-wood floors, steam, gas, and electric heating and lighting add to the ease with which a house may be kept clean, but after this good start conditions are often complicated by some other modern inventions. Much bric-a-brac, hangings, bed draperies, tufted furniture, and other details of the still all too elaborate scheme of furnishing materially retard the keeping-clean process. As renewals are needed in the reopening of the closed home, every purchase and alteration should be considered in the sanitary as well as the artistic light. It will be found that the two are almost always entirely consonant.

Handsome Fabrics.

Very handsome fabrics for stylish autumn tailor gowns are those of soft, beautiful Venetian cloth—its smooth, light surface is like velvet—manufactured in shades of Russian green, a red and dark blue, pale silver-blue, hues that are rich but also deep in tone; damson, a superb reddish plum shade, golden brown, tan, gray, and black. These elegant materials will be made of one fabric with handsome silk gimps and tailor buttons by way of trimming, or combined with silk, velvet, fine wools in facy effects, or, richest of all, lustrous corded silks of a matching shade, with added garnitures of velvet on the waist portion. Among the most generally becoming colors of the season before us will be the damson dyes and a varied class of similar plum tints, like dahlia, petunia, etc.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Aus der Rheinpfalz.

Kaiserslautern. Das im Juni d. J. niedergegangene Unwetter in der Nordwestpfalz verursachte in den Distrikten Obermoschel, Lauterecken und Reckenhausen allein an den Distriktsstraßen einen Schaden von 42 090 Mark. Aus Kreisfonds wurde als Beihilfe zur Wiederherstellung der zerstörten Strecken die Summe von 4060 Mark angewiesen.

Neustadt. Nicht wenig überrascht wurde kürzlich der Inhaber des Havanna-Hauses Kunz hier, als ein Radfahrer durch sein Schaufenster in den Laden geflogen kam. Der Radfahrer —ein Arbeiter—wollte einem Fuhrwerk ausweichen und um die Ecke biegen. Er prallte mit voller Wucht gegen den Randstein, so daß er mit dem Kopf mitten durch das Schaufenster flog. Er zog sich klaffende Wunden am Kopf und Hals zu.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Die diesjährigen Weinaussichten sind in Württemberg sowohl als im weinbautreibenden Theil des Reiches keine günstigen. Von überall kommen Klagen über trostlosen Stand der Weinberge. Die vorsommerliche Witterung hat leider die Erwartungen für dieses Jahr zu Schanden gemacht. Kühles und nasses Wetter zur Zeit der Blüthenperiode haben dazu beigetragen, daß die erste Vorbedingung zur Weinlese, die Blüthe des Stockes, unter ungünstigen Umständen verlief. Krankheit und Ungeziefer fanden dabei reichliche Nahrung und somit stehen wir jetzt, trotz der brennenden August- und Septembersonne, vor einem Fehlherbst, sowohl in quantitaver, als auch, nach dem jetzigen Rebenstande beurtheilt, in qualitativer Hinsicht.

Dornhan. Ein längst gehegter Wunsch der Bewohner und Besucher unserer Stadt ist soeben in Erfüllung gegangen durch den Abbruch eines unseren Marktplatz verunzierenden Häuschens, welches inmitten desselben stand. Ermöglicht wurde dies insbesondere dadurch, daß der alte Wohlthäter und Bürger der hiesigen Stadt, Bankier Bühler aus Chicago, einen namhaften Beitrag zur Erwerbung des Häuschens gab. Unsere Stadt hat nun einen überaus schmucken Marktplatz.

Ravensburg. Dieser Tage wurde am Rechen des Wehrkanals, oberhalb der Mönchmühle, das dreijährige Kind des Schutzmannes W. in bewußtlosem Zustand angeschwemmt und konnte dasselbe nach den von den Bewohnern angestellten erfolgreichen Wiederbelebungsversuchen seinen Eltern wieder zugestellt werden.

Steinenthal. Im nahen Walde erhängte sich ein elfjähriger Knabe von hier, welcher wegen Geldverputzens an einem am Sonntag in Steinenthal aufgestellten Karussel von seinen Eltern eine Zurechtweisung erfuhr. Vor der That verschenkte er noch verschiedene Spielsachen an andere Kinder, mit dem Bemerken, daß er derselben nicht mehr bedürfe.

Ulm. Der auf dem hiesigen Rathhaus beschäftigte ehemalige Postsekretär Hagn von hier, der wegen Unterschlagung schon eine Gefängnißstrafe abgesessen hat, unterschlug neuerdings Strafgelder im Betrag von 81 Mark und wurde verhaftet; seiner zahlreichen Familie, die in bitterste Noth gerathen ist, wendet sich die allgemeine Theilnahme zu.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Die Strafkammer verurtheilte den Nagelschmied Jakob Schnaufer wegen mehrfachen Betruges unter Einrechnung einer gegen ihn wegen Diebstahls erkannten Zuchthausstrafe von einem Jahr zu einer Gesammtzuchthausstrafe von zwei Jahren acht Monaten und 1500 Mark Geldstrafe. Schnaufer hatte sich in einer größeren Anzahl von Fällen als Wunderdoktor aufgespielt und seinen Patienten Geldbeträge von 1 bis 2 Mark abgeschwindelt.

Mannheim. Wegen Bandendiebstahls wurden vier Angestellte des hiesigen Getreide-Engrosgeschäfts von Sal. Damon verhaftet. Dieselben sollen im Laufe der letzten fünf Jahre etwa 30,000 leere Getreidesäcke gestohlen und an auswärtige Mühlen verkauft haben.

Pforzheim. Unter dem Verdacht, den großen Brand angelegt zu haben, der kürzlich in Brötzingen insgesammt elf Wohnhäuser und acht Scheunen in Asche legte und 33 Familien mit 159 Köpfen obdachlos machte, sind jetzt nacheinander drei Brötzinger Einwohner in die Untersuchungshaft hierher eingeliefert worden.

Villingen. In Neuhausen hat sich ein 12jähriger Knabe erhängt, angeblich aus Furcht vor einer Strafe, die ihm wegen „Schwänzens" des Religionsunterrichts angedroht war.

CHAPTER XVIII.

About half an hour later Lady Feodora and Sir Antony crept down the stairs, let themselves out of the house, and walked under the trees over the dew-spangled grass towards the high-road and the little railway-station. Feodora Latimar buried many a cherished hope and dream for her beloved cousin's future life and happiness as they walked swiftly under the canopy of green leaves, talking earnestly as they went. She had not known of what sterling stuff her courage was made till that moment. Her dauntless spirit, her determination to comfort him, her eager desire to find hope where, alas, she feared there was no hope, had its beneficial effect upon Antony. His demeanor gradually brightened. He parted from her when they reached the high-road.

"I shall not let you come any farther, Feo," he said firmly. "You have no idea what a little ghost-like creature you are! Indeed you will be ill, dear, if you don't get some rest. Just think of what you have gone through last night, and what you have to do today! To please me, Feo, go and lie down. Don't go to your own room; go to 'Pootles'—she will do you good. Heaven bless her! Why, the very mention of her name makes you look quite different!"

Feo gave a tired little laugh.

"Yes—I will go to 'Pootles,'" she answered; "my baby always does me good, somehow; and, now that I see you are on the road to Gregory, half the trouble seems to have left me. Promise, Tony, to let me hear from you some time to-day; and promise also that you will not leave England without seeing me before you go—promise!"

"I promise!" said Antony, not very steadily.

The goodness of this loving woman was immeasurably sweet to him. Surely, he said to himself, the world could never be utterly dark to him when he lived, as he did live, in the hearts of [illegible] both and Feo and [illegible]

When an incident like the following occurs right here at home it is bound to carry weight with our readers. When so many strange occurrences go the rounds of the press; are published as facts; when the intelligent reader knows they cannot be true, there is no wonder that people become skeptical. On one subject skepticism is rapidly disappearing. This is due to the actual personal experience of our citizens and their public utterances regarding them. The doubter must doubt no more in the face of such evidence as this. The public statement of a reputable citizen, living right here at home one whom you can see every day, leaves no ground for the skeptic to stand on.

Mrs. Wm. H. Ludlow, of 98 Jackson avenue, says:— "I was troubled with systoms of kidney complaint such as backache and a sort of dull pain across my loins for several years. If I sat for any lenght of time and attempted to rise I had a sharp pain in the kidneys. Walking any distance or much standing aggravated the difficulty. I could not rest well at night from the fact that I had to be constantly changing about from one position to another trying to free myself from the pain. I used quite a number of remedies but got no permanent relief. I was prevailed upon to get Doan's Kidney Pills from L. W. Randolph's drug store. In justice to them I must say that they did me a great deal of good. It is seldom that I feel any pain in my back and when I do a few doses of this remedy never fails to relieve me. I know others who have used Doan's Kidney Pills with equally good results. From my experience I can honestly reccommend them to all who suffer from kidney troubles."

my Bertha"? He held his cousin's hand for a long time in parting; his eyes expressed a hundred things that his lips could not utter. Feo nodded her head in answer to his unspoken wishes.

"I shall go over early after breakfast. You shall always have news of her through me, darling," Lady Feo said softly. She kept all anxiety out of her voice as she spoke of Elizabeth, though her heart was heavy with grief over the girl; and she sent him from her finally with her own sunny smile and a pretty audacious message for her husband.

"I am sure Gregory has got into mischief!" she cried. "He always does when I am away! Now good-bye, Tony! And don't forget—before you do anything, you are to eat a big breakfast with Gregory—that is imperative!"

The smile left Feo's face when she was alone; she retraced her steps wearily enough through the grounds. Her heart was heavy with more than grief; there was fear, too—fear of what might happen when those two men met again—fear not so much of what Antony would do, but of the further evil his enemy would try to work. Antony's marriage—and such a marriage!—was nothing less than a tragedy to Feodorowna Latimer. Now that she was by herself, all her eager hope, all her desire to shed a brighter light upon the young man's future, went from her utterly. She had sustained herself marvellously well up to that moment. It was no wonder that from fatigue of mind and body she progressed slowly on her way back to the house. Ill and weary as she felt, however, she shrank from the idea of solitude. There was so much for her to think out and do. The day's amusements would have to be arranged, and Antony's absence explained to Miss Peile and to all the guests. Then there was her visit to Elizabeth. Poor Lady Feo longed, yet dreaded, to see the girl. There was also the odious task of meeting Richard Saville, unless he, too, like Antony, should have determined to leave Speede early. There were indeed a hundred-and-one things Lady Feodora had to think about; and, oddly enough she felt that she could do all her necessary thinking and planning more easily while she sat and watched her baby splash about in the morning bath, and listen to the laughter and pretty baby chatter, than if she were left to herself.

She was very weak from loss of sleep and from the recent great excitement; but an hour in her child's room acted on her like a tonic. It was impossible to withstand the brightness and cheery influence of the little creature, and half the weight of her thoughts seemed to slip from Feo as she chatted and romped with her baby.

It was barely eight o'clock when a note was brought to Lady Feodora. It came, so her maid said, from Mrs. Proctor, and had been brought by her gardener.

Feo guessed the contents before she opened the letter. Mrs. Proctor wrote only a few hurried words to say that she and Elizabeth were leaving Stonebury immediately.

"We are going for a month to Westport," she wrote. "This, I am afraid, will seem like a hurried departure; but, as a matter of fact, I determined only yesterday that I must have my usual annual dose of sea-air; and I feel so fatigued from the heat of the last few days that I have thought it wiser to take myself off without any further delay. I am to give you Elizabeth's dear love; she will write to you from Westport. At present I am keeping her very busy packing our clothes. We shall leave by an early train. I quite long for my child to get the benefit of the invigorating sea-air. I hope Miss Peile and you, dear Lady Feodora, will forgive us for not appearing at your garden party to-day; but I am sure you will be only too glad to hear that I am carrying Elizabeth away for her first introduction to the ocean. I enclose our address, and am

Most sincerely yours,
"ANNE PROCTER."

A great sense of relief came to Feo as she read these words, although tears came too as she realized all that was indirectly conveyed by them. Once again she could see the white anguished face of Elizabeth as it had looked when they parted on the preceding night, and she could easily guess what suffering the past hours must have brought to the girl she held so dear. She did not know what had passed between Antony and Elizabeth, or what share Richard Saville had had in compelling the girl to go away so suddenly, changed and miserable; but she could imagine everything, and, remembering all that that bitter moment held for Elizabeth as well as for Antony, she could not but rejoice that the girl was being treated so considerately and so wisely by Mrs. Proctor, and that she had so true a friend to guard her and give her comfort.

Tears came again as Feo sat down and wrote a few hurried and affectionate words in return to the old schoolmistress.

"Who knows," she added at the end of her note, "but that I may not run down to Westport myself with 'Pootles' in a few days! Should my husband have to go to America—as I firmly believe he will—do not be surprised at seeing me and my baby; and perhaps I shall bring down Aunt Bertha as well. I love Westport, and it would be like a dream to sit on the shore with Elizabeth and watch the waves come rolling in!"

Feo had despatched her note, had kissed her baby and bidden her farewell for a little while, and was back in her own room making some alterations in her toilet, and bracing herself up for all that lay immediately before her, when there came a sharp knock at the door, and, as she turned with an apprehensive start—for she was in the mood to expect and fear anything just now—and answered the summons, the door was pushed open, and Bertha Peile almost stumbled into the room.

One glance at the look of alarm on the usually serene comely face made Feodora Latimar turn deathly pale. She trembled in every limb, and could hardly draw her breath; but, as the elder woman fell into, rather than sat down in, a chair, the power of speech came back to her. She hastened to Miss Peile, and took both her outstretched hands.

"Aunt Bertha, you are ill! What is it, dear? What has happened now?" The last words broke from Feo quite unconsciously.

Bertha Peile clung to Feo for a moment in silence while she battled with her agitation and distress.

"Oh, Feo," she said brokenly, as soon as the words would come coherently—"Feo dear, it is too terrible! I ought not to frighten you like this; and yet you must know. I—I have just come from Richard's room! They came to tell me he was ill. I went at once to see him. Feo dear, he could not move or lift his head; he could not speak to me—he will never speak to me again—he is dead!"

CHAPTER XIX.

Antony stood for a few moments at the small gateway that led from the lower grounds of Speede to the high-road, watching his cousin's girlish figure vanish out of sight. He had so much to harass and excite his mind that things that must have struck him in ordinary circumstances came to him now in a vague blurred sort of way. The wonderful depths of sympathy, of comprehension, and of wisdom that Feo had shown during the past hour or so would have amazed him, had his mind been free to grasp everything clearly. He was conscious indeed of being overwhelmingly grateful to Feo for her goodness to him. He had always known he was very dear to her, but it had remained for this hour to show him how real and deep her love was.

The heart of Antony Peile thrilled as he stood there in the lonely country road, with the summer morn awakening around him. If he had loved Elizabeth before, he worshipped her now! The grief of that hour had beaten down the shy sweet reserve of girlhood; she had been a woman in that moment of openly confessed love, of passionate declaration of faith and trust and belief in his honor. He brushed his eyes hurriedly with his hand. The sunshine was blurred and dark for a moment with his tears.

"Good-bye, love," he said hoarsely to himself—"my love till death, though I shall never see you again!"

He turned and hurried on his way. He dared not let himself linger—the temptation to go to her was so terribly strong. He yearned to know how matters were with her that morning; he trembled at the thought of the suffering he had brought to her heart, suffering which he might never lessen or put an end to. When all the flood of his thought of and for her was once set free, it would not be safe for him to linger; so he hurried away from the place where she was, and he did not even look back as he went.

Antony's thoughts were indeed bitter with mortification as well as sorrow as he strode along the dusty high-road in the early morning sunlight. He took a short cut to the station, and was passing in through a small gateway, when he came to a stand-still. A man slouching along painfully was just in front of him, evidently bent for the pathway that ran for some distance beside the line. Antony recognized the figure at once. It was the man whom he had seen in the village, and to whom he had given work at Speede two days before, much against the wish of Miss Peile.

He frowned slightly as he realized this, and, acting on an impulse which he was never quite able to understand or explain, except that it struck him as odd that the man should be so far from Speede at that early hour, he went quickly down the grassy path after the slouching figure and called to the man to stop.

"Where are you going?" Antony inquired, as the other obeyed him at once. "Aren't you the man that begged for work the day before yesterday? Couldn't they find something for you to do? I told them to give you work, and some clothes, too," Antony added, taking particular notice of the man's appearance. He was just as he had been when he first saw him—his clothes soiled and old, his whole aspect that of an artisan who had been very ill.

The man stared blankly for a moment at Sir Antony, then, seeing who it was that had stopped him, he colored faintly.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said—and his voice, though common in tone, was certainly not the voice of one of the lowest class—indeed his speech was strangely at variance with his appearance—"I didn't recognize who it was at first."

Antony scrutinized the man sharply. It was only too evident that he was weak and ill. He remembered then that, when they had spoken in the village, the man had said that he had just come out of a hospital.

"Where are you going?" he asked again. "And why won't you stay at Speede? A week of good food and fresh air would have made another man of you. I hope my people did not treat you badly?"

The man leaned heavily against the fence—he had scarcely strength to stand.

"The servants aren't as charitable as the master," he said bitterly, yet quietly. "Servants have cute eyes—they know a gaol-bird when they see one!"

Antony frowned slightly.

"You told me you had just come out of hospital," he said. Something about the man touched him—not the physical weakness merely, but the tired despairing look in his eyes, the cynical resignation in his voice.

"I told you the truth, sir. I was in Lambeth Workhouse Infirmary ward for one month; I was took ill, and had to go there the very day of my discharge."

"And my servants refuse to let you work with them?"

"They'd have left in a body if I'd stayed on," he said.

"What brought you to Speede? Are you a native of this part? I don't remember you," Antony said, greatly annoyed by what he heard; then, without waiting for an answer, he went on quickly—"Look here—I should like to help you, but I can't go back to the house now; I have to be in London early. Is that where you want to go?" Antony paused for a moment. "Were you going to walk to London?" he then asked; and, as the man nodded his head, he uttered an exclamation of surprise. "Why, you are no more fit to walk than you are to fly! Come along; I'll take you up with me. You can tell me about yourself as we go. I am very sorry my servants have turned you out. If I could, I would return and read the Riot Act to them; but I can't go back just yet." His own trouble came freshly to Antony as he uttered these few significant words. He turned away hurriedly. "Follow me!" he said to the man, who was standing staring after him as though such kindly consideration, such prompt compassion as Antony was showing him, was something incomprehensible to him.

After the first pause, however, he obeyed a second time, and, turning, he followed the young man into the station.

"You can't go along of me," he said hurriedly to Antony, when he rejoined him a moment later—"it ain't possible, sir!"

For answer Antony showed him two third-class tickets.

"I am interested in you," he said simply. "I can see, without your telling me, that you are in a bad way: and, as you preferred walking to London instead of taking some of my spoons"—smiling faintly—"I fancy you are honest. You need not tell me more than you wish. I should like to help you if I can, that's all; and perhaps, if you put your trouble before me, I might be able to help you—at least, a little."

The man turned away suddenly, his wasted face working as from pain.

"I'm not accustomed to being helped," he said roughly; then he relapsed into silence, and Antony seeing his emotion, moved from him and walked slowly up and down the narrow platform till a bell rang and the train appeared in the distance.

The porters appeared somewhat astonished to see Sir Antony Peile entering a third-class carriage in the company of such a shabby, doubtful-looking individual; but both Antony and Miss Peile had long since set the village social regulations at defiance, and therefore the incident did not excite as much surprise as it might have done. Except for some workingmen and a sprinkling of farmer-like folk, this early train was practically empty.

"Even when trouble is heaviest," he said, almost involuntarily, "one cannot but thank Heaven for such a day as this!"

The man crouching back in his corner again gave vent to his curious, bitter laugh.

"When one has been seven years in prison, one ceases to thank Heaven for anything," he made answer—"even for one's liberty!"

Antony looked at him in silent compassion. Seven years in prison! How awful was the mere idea of prison walls and prison rules in the midst of such a flood of joyous sunshine, of summer splendor! He broke the silence after a moment's pause.

"Seven years!" he repeated. "It is a big gap in a lifetime." He paused again; then, his voice quite gentle, he asked, "What was it that sent you to prison?"

The man looked at Antony.

"I was accused and found guilty of forgery," he said. His breath came more quickly as he added the words, "But I was innocent!"

Antony believed him. There was that in his face which seemed to speak of deep mental anguish. It was the face of one who had been cruelly wronged. Beside so heavy a burden of trouble Antony's own sorrow seemed to subside into a secondary place.

"Tell me more," he said. "Remember, I said just now I should like to help you, I say it again. I am sure you have gone through some terrible suffering. If you will let me help you, I shall be glad."

"Thank you," returned the man, with a certain quiet dignity, and then was silent for a little space, while the train rushed on, now between high banks of grassy earth, now through a short tunnel, anon through wide smiling fields, with orchards of sun-kissed apples and patches of gorgeous poppies, making bright gleams of color in the setting of summer green. "Just now, sir," he said, suddenly breaking the silence, "you asked me why I came to this part of the world—whether I belonged to it—what business, in short, could have brought me to the place. May I answer your question by asking you one myself?"

IT WAS HIS FATE.

"It's very evident that I have come down in the world—I am a working man, but I'm not the average kind of working man, I'll swear," said Archibald resolutely, as he drew on a pair of made-to-order jeans trousers which contrasted strangely with the several other costly suits decorating the bare garret walls.

He began to think of how little use his fifteen years of careful school training had been to him in his struggle for existence. He pictured himself in his recent search for work, going from door to door asking for employment, and not knowing what on earth he should do if any were offered him.

His father had died in New York and left him penniless in San Francisco, or nearly so for a man of his habits.

Archibald, naturally unpractical, had been rendered doubly helpless by a seven-year college course and the settled conviction that he would never have to work for a living.

The five hundred dollars which the estate yielded went no further than his father's blessing. Archibald had used the former to finish his education by a trip around the world, but owing to an over-indulgence in curios he had found himself stranded in San Francisco, and if the position of plumber's cub had not been vacant he could hardly have seen anything ahead but starvation.

Just then he heard footsteps upon the outside staircase, leading to his garret. A glance through a broken pane of glass disclosed Polly, the laundry girl. She would probably come here.

"They're deucedly accommodating about my wash," he said to himself. "I owe them for two months back. I bet that girl pays for it out of her own pocket."

In the midst of his perplexities Archibald had fallen in love without intending it.

Polly lodged in the same tenement; she had seen him ascending and descending the long outside staircase and had marked his troubled and discouraged mien.

Casually, at the "Plumbers' Rag," and later at the "Laundry Hop," she had become acquainted with Archibald.

Polly had now visited all the other tenants; she would be here in a minute.

The room was in a sad plight. Archibald hastily donned a tennis jacket, parted his hair with his long, slim fingers, and made the bed.

A knock and she entered. Archie tendered her the soap box, but she sat down on the edge of her basket and begged him to keep his "chair."

They fell to chatting lightly about any and everything, and Archibald presently forgot to feel out of place; he even became hilarious, but a question of Polly's brought him suddenly to himself,—

"Why won't you go to the 'Working Ladies' Hop?'"

"I shouldn't enjoy it."

"But you go to the 'Plumbers' Rag?'"

"Yes, I do; my business requires it and the boys demand it."

"Well, it wouldn't hurt you to come to the hop. Do you know what the boys call you at the shop?"

"The dude plumber. I take it as a compliment."

"You needn't think the 'Working Ladies' Hop' isn't proper. Nothing but ice cream and cake—lights out at two o'clock. There, now, take your ticket and we'll look for you."

"This is drawing rapidly to a crisis," Archibald thought, as he stood mediatively holding a dance-hall ticket in his hand, while the sound of Polly's quickly descending steps upon the stairs echoed through the garret. "But what of my Eastern relatives? Well, there's not much argument there."

His eye lit upon his last telegram from them. It said:

"Archie, you'll have to scratch for yourself, now."

This is what the financier of the family had wrote when he sent for ready money.

"I've about half decided to let the girl have her way," he said, as he tore the yellow dispatch to fragments.

* * * * * * *

That night the tall, frame tenement went up in flames. Archibald stood at the top of the stairs, watching the others making frantic efforts to escape.

"Why are they so anxious to save their miserable lives?" he thought.

Just then the volumes of smoke rolled away; he saw that the long, iron bannister was still intact, and decided to slide to the second story. He found the feat an easy one.

At the second landing someone was pounding violently at a door which opened inward. The knob was gone. Archibald threw his full weight against it and broke the lock.

"How stupid of me not to think it was your room!"

But Polly was too badly frightened to speak even after they had reached a place of safety.

In a few days, however, she was as bright and buoyant as ever, and in some mysterious way which will never be told by either, Archibald felt it was time to surrender.

"I'm going to start a steam laundry of my own. I've saved the money up. All I want is a man."

In all seriousness Archibald suggested,—

"Why don't you get a Chinaman?"

It didn't sound half so brutal until it was spoken, and then there was only one way to apologize. Archie was the man needed, and he gave his consent.

ROESEL'S LIFE PROLONGED.

Case of Farmer Pitts's Murderer Taken to the United States Supreme Court.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Mills and Charles W. Runyon, both of whom favored the ganting of the franchise on the present conditions.

At this period Mr. Barrows made a few remarks. He said that the members of the Council were elected as the servants of the people, and for the three years he had been in the Council he was of the opinion that there have been fewer men in the Council that have been actuated by politics than at any other time. Continuing he said: "On June 6th last we received an application from the Plainfield Street Railway Company for an extension in the eastern end of the city through Second street. We denied that application for the reason that the property owners along the street urged us not to grant the same. Since then there have been twelve meetings, nine public hearings and ten meetings of the street committee. Up to three weeks ago no one appeared before this Council to guide the members in their actions in this matter. The street committee has night after night met and tried to frame a suitable ordinance. We remedied many difficulties in the old ordinance, such as requiring street sprinkling, etc., and we were of the opinion that a suitable ordinance had been drafted. The local papers have misrepresented us and have not told all. There are but two men in my district who object to granting the present ordinance and they are both here tonight. We are willing to give any section of the city the trolley, but we cannot force the company to locate their trolley. We want to let the people know where we stand on this question. The First ward people here tonight deserve consideration first in this matter in preference to other sections of the city."

Mr. Buckle stated that during the evening he had not heard anything that had changed his mind. He considered that the First ward people have a right to first say, but it must be remembered, said Mr. Buckle, that it takes two to make a bargain.

Mr. VanHerwerden remarked that the Plainfield Street Railway Company gave the city last year the very large sum of $480.50 and the taxes this year would be higher than ever, for the reason that the city has been giving away valuable franchises for mere nothing.

Mr Riker then went on to say that his company had given Plainfield last year $1,853 34 in taxes and had expended $1,740.02, including macadamizing. He said that it would cost the company $500,000 to build the trolley line from here to Elizabeth, and they could not afford to accept a limited franchise.

This concluded the hearing, and when Mr. Barrows moved that further hearing be adjourned to Monday evening, Nov. 7th, Mr. Riker asked to have the company's application returned. He was told that he would have to present his request in writing. In the meantime while Mr. Riker was doing this Mr. Barrows moved that the Council adjourn.

Subsequently, however, Mr. Barrows had the motion to adjourn reconsidered, and the notice of withdrawl was presented to the Council. It was signed by Mr. Riker and Thomas Nevins, president of the street railway company, who was present at the hearing. Inasmuch as the ordinance under consideration had only been read for information to the Council and the people, all that the street railway company need do, to have it considered further, is to renew their application, which is but the work of a minute, and can be done at the next Council meeting if they so decide.

PLAY GROUNDS FOR THE POOR CHILDREN.

Philanthropic Subject Discussed by Progressive Women.

WHAT NEWARK HAS DONE.

MRS. VANWINKLE DESCRIBED THE WORK IN THAT CITY.

Local Town Improvement Association Would Have Play Grounds Established in This City—Mrs. Malli Gave a Verbal Report of Work of Association for the Ensuing Year—Those Who Assisted

There was an interesting meeting of the Town Improvement Association in the large hall of the Y. M. C. A. building yesterday afternoon, when the members discussed the subject of play grounds for poor children. The president, Mrs. Malli, was present and read a number of articles from well-known newspapers regarding the success of play grounds for children in many of the largest cities of this country. The idea originated in Berlin, but now Philadelphia contributes $3,000 a year for the support of these grounds in that city. Brooklyn, New York, Chicago, as well as Newark, each have such institutions. In many of the cities mentioned kindergarten departments have been established and instructors are employed to look after and teach the children.

Mrs. VanWinkle, of Newark, who is interested in the work in that city, was present at the meeting and gave the members some valuable suggestions along the line of work suggested by the topic. She said that the Board of Works of Newark had given nine lots to be used as play grounds, and they are all successfully carried on. She said that the chief of police in her city does not approve of women doing anything but to stay at home, and she advised the members to look out for the chief of police.

Mrs. VanWinkle told those present that if they would like to see something real interesting they should visit her city some Saturday evening. It is as good as a circus, the speaker said. She told the members something regarding the cost of maintaining play grounds and about many other things in detail.

The other part of the meeting was devoted to a verbal report by Mrs. Malli of the work of last year. She told about the work of placing cans about the city, of the work done at the city park, and also about the work of offering prizes to those who have the best kept back yards. Among those who have contributed benches for the city park are the following: Mrs. Babcock, Mrs. O. T. Waring, Alexander Gilbert, Mason W. Tyler, Rowland Cox and Marion Ackerman. Miss Kenyon, Miss Isabella Tweedy and Mayor Fisk, as well as many others, have contributed money for grass guards at the park.

Mrs. Malli read a short article regarding the curfew bell and an informal discussion followed. The subjects introduced at the meeting will be considered by the members and reported upon later. The members are strongly impressed with the idea that play grounds for poor children can be established in this city with profit.

WORK ON THE STREETS.

Improvements on Belvidere Avenue Were Finished Yesterday.

As the fall advances and cold weather approaches, there is a rapid finishing up of the work on the streets so as to leave them in as good condition as possible when winter sets in.

Street Commissioner Gavett's men finished Belvidere avenue yesterday, and will begin on South avenue and macadamize the block between Belvidere and Woodland avenues along the street railway tracks. When this is done all the macadamizing will be finished for this year except on Central avenue beyond Randolph road, where the gutters will be macadamized at the property owners' expense.

There is also a little grading to be done near the corner of Spooner avenue and West Fourth street, where the gutter will have to be lowered so as to carry away the water.

To Speak On Purity Movement.

Aaron M. Powell, of this city, president of the American Purity Alliance, will address the members and friends of the executive committee of that organization at the United Charities building, New York, Tuesday, on the late London Congress of the International Federation for the Abolition of State Regulation of Vice and the present outlook of the purity movement in Europe and America. Mr. Powell has only recently returned from Europe where he attended the Congress.

HYMEN AMONG GERMANS

FIRST MARRIAGE CELEBRATED IN SAENGERBUND HALL.

Miss Teresa Prim and Henry Myer the Happy Couple to Be Wedded—A Social Time Followed Ceremony.

Miss Teresa Prim, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Prim, of Bound Brook, and Henry Myer, of the borough, have the honor of being the first couple to be married in Saengerbund Hall. The happy event took place last night at 9 o'clock in the presence of a large company of friends and relatives. The hall was artistically decorated for the occasion by Frederick Paasch.

Long before the appointed hour the guests arrived and enjoyed a social time among themselves. Just previous to the marriage the guests arranged their seats near the stage and prepared for the approach of the bridal couple. The wedding march was played by Prof. Wendall's orchestra.

The bride, accompanied by Augustus Mobus, entered the hall first. She was gowned in a blue cloth trimmed with yellow silk and lace. Then came two flower girls, Elvira Hoerster and Florrie Scheelein, dressed in white. They were followed by Miss Anna Kunzleman, in a gown of dark colored cloth trimmed with lace, and accompaning her was the groom, Henry Meyer. When the party reached the stage they were met by Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, who performed the ceremony according to the form of the church of which he is pastor. The marriage was performed with a ring and the bride was given away by Mr. Mobus.

Following the ceremony, the singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein rendered several selections under the direction of Prof. Eichhorn, of Elizabeth. During this time congratulations and rice were showered upon the happy couple by all present.

The rest of the evening was devoted to a general good time, during which dancing was a feature. A supper was served in the basement of the hall, and the members of the Ladies' Circle of the society assisted in receiving and helping the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Myer received a large collection of gifts, useful as well as ornamental. The Gesang and Turn Verein presented a handsome clock, while the Ladies' Circle gave an entire dinner set of china. Other valuable gifts were also received.

Mrs. Myer was a member for two years of Mrs. Hoerster's family on Somerset street. She is very popular among a large circle of friends. Her husband is in the employ of the Plainfield Street Railway Company as motorman on one of the cars. The couple will go to housekeeping at once on Regent street, where a furnished house awaits their occupancy.

FAKIRS IN RAHWAY.

Worked Themselves Off as Representatives of W. Warren Rowley.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Rahway, October 26.—There are a number of Rahway business men who discovered Monday that they had been victimized by two strangers. They found it out on the arrival of G. Warren Rowley, who makes it a business to get up Rowley's framed business directories all through the Eastern States.

Last year Rowley made a Rahway directory and hung copies in the post-office and leading hotels. It was handsomely framed and was very complete. A week ago two men who registered at the Wilson House as O. S. Nichols and Mr. Morgan, of New York, made a circuit of the business men and represented themselves to be Rowley's agents and asked for renewals of the advertisements. They collected over $100 and then brought out a directory very cheaply printed and vastly inferior to the old one. It was so cheap looking that that the postmaster and hotel keepers refused to allow them to remain on the walls of their establishments.

Monday the real Mr. Rowley showed up and then the business men found that the alleged representatives were fakirs. Rowley is now getting up a business directory like the old one.

Sold at Private Sale

Meeker Brothers did not offer their lots on Hillside and Highland avenues at auction yesterday, but they sold five at private sale. F. L. Martin bought two on Hillside avenue. P. B. Macintyre bought one on Hillside avenue, and F. W. Perry bought two on the corner of Hillside and Highland avenues. The valuable business property on East Front street was not sold at auction yesterday, as advertised, but two different persons are figuring with the owners with a view of purchasing the property.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB ENTERTAIN.

First of a Series of Monthly Entertainments by That Organization.

A feature of the winter at the Young Women's Club on Madison avenue will be the monthly entertainments, the first of which was held in the club rooms last evening. The entertainment was particularly for the members but there were a number of others present as well.

The programme was a very entertaining one and well enjoyed by those who heard it. It included vocal solos by Miss Hyatt and Miss Katheryn Glen, recitations by Miss Enda Burr and Miss Hoagland, mandolin solos by Wickham Beekman, and piano solos by Master VanArsdale.

After the programme was completed, a social time was enjoyed during which refreshments were served. Mrs. L. H. Bigelow, Jr., exercised a general supervision over the whole affair, which was arranged by a committee composed of Mrs. William Gray, chairman, Miss Fanny Hayden, Miss Mathilde Moraller and Miss Nellie Kreger.

ENDEAVORERS STRIVE FOR BETTER RESULTS.

Union County Members Held a Conference Yesterday.

E. E. ANTHONY'S REMARKS.

HE DISCUSSED THE SUBJECT OF EVANGELISTIC WORK.

In the Afternoon an Interesting Session for the Junior Workers was Held—Officers Elected—An Open Parliament in the Evening—Mr. Anthony Told How Evangelistic Work Should be Done.

Christian Endeavorers from all over Union county gathered in the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon and last night to engage in open parliament, discussions and addresses and thus promote the Endeavor work in this county preparatory for the fall and winter. The afternoon session was given over to the Junior workers, who listened to papers and addresses, enjoyed a couple of social hours at supper, then gathered in the large hall where members of the entire union gathered and took part in two open parliaments.

At the afternoon session Miss Bogart, of Roselle, read a paper on "Enthusiasm in Junior work;" Mrs. Henry Manson, of Plainfield, one on "How to Interest the Mothers," and C. Routzahn spoke on "What to do with the Boys."

The election of officers resulted as follows: For president, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, of Plainfield; vice president, F. G. Williams, of Rahway; secretary, Miss Baumgartner, of Rahway; treasurer, Miss Bogart, of Roselle.

During the meeting Miss Minnie G. Morse sang two solos, accompanying herself upon the autoharp.

On the platform in the evening were Rev. Mr. Braker, of Scotch Plains; F. G. Williams, of Rahway, president of the Union county union; E. E. Anthony, Mrs. W. Lowry and Miss Florence G. Hawkins. Rev. A. I. Martine, of Dunellen, led the singing and Clifford Braider presided at the piano.

The devotional exercices were in charge of Rev. Mr. Braker, and then Mr. Williams announced that the programme committee had decided upon two open parliaments for the evening, one upon Bible study and evangelistic work led by E. E. Anthony. The attendance at the evening session was large, and endeavorers were present from Westfield, New Market, Dunellen, Washingtonville, Metuchen and perhaps from every society in Union county, and the responses to the querries put by the leaders were prompt.

A good practical way in which the young people can do evangelistic work, Mr. Anthony said, was to go out and invite others to come out to church. Some one suggested that they go into those homes where the people cannot get out and carry the word of God. Several other suggestions on the same line were also made.

Mrs. W. S. Lowry had a few words to say about the junior work of the society, the most important work, she claimed, of any in connection with the Christian Endeavor.

Mr. Anthony gave a little talk on "Finance," as the leader called it. Mr. Anthony was called upon to make these few remarks before taking up the collection because he is blessed with the ability to place before the union in such a clear but pleasant way that the pocketbooks and purses open of their own free will and pour the coppers and silver upon the plates. The offering was large.

The lookout and prayer meeting conference was led by Miss Florence G. Hawkins. There was quite a number of people in the audience who were members of one or both of these committees. A few suggestions made by Miss Hawkins, that the meetings begin on time, that they open with prayer, that the leaders pray, that all the societies encourage sentence prayers, were considered good. The closing exercises, a consecration service, was conducted by Rev. Mr. Martine.

The Washingtonville society won the banner for having the largest percentage of members present. The Washingtonville society consists of twenty four members, twenty-two of whom were out. Marconier, with six members, had five present, and Warren chapel society, with thirty-six members, had eighteen out.

The entertainment opened with an overture, rendered by Emil Adolphi, of New York. The rest of the programme included bird warbling and imitations by Miss Ella Gertrude Gustam, of New York, several selections by the Nonpariel Banjo Trio, from New York, a vocal solo, by E. C. Holt Apgar, of Trenton, was down to speak on "Why We Work for the Order."

He was unable to be present and his place was taken by Vice-Regent Lightfoot, of Westfield. Mr. Lightfoot apologized for taking the place of a greater attraction, said a few funny things and ended with a short talk on the benefits to be derived from membership in the Royal Arcanum.

The entertainment was given under the direction of Horace I. Bowne, of Hoboken, chairman of the State committee on work of the order. He appeared twice, giving some humorous stories and jokes and then a recitation, 'Knee Deep in June," by James Whitcomb Riley. S. C. WALLER IS NOT GUILTY.

ACQUITTED OF CHARGE OF ROBBING EAST MILLSTONE DEPOT.

The Trial Has Been Going On for a Week and Excited Great Interest—Shine and Wright Declared Guilty

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, October 26.—Justice of the Peace William N. Waller, of East Millstone, who was indicted for robbing the Pennsylvania Railroad station at that place, was yesterday acquitted of the charge. The two men who were indicted and tried with him on the same charge, Thomas Shine and Thomas Wright, were found guilty.

The trial has occupied the Somerset Court since Tuesday of last week. "Jerry" Washington, a colored resident of Millstone, was indicted with the others, but he turned State's evidence and the indictment against him was nolle prossed. The case has attracted much interest. Prosecutor Dungan was assisted by Joseph M. Noonan, former Assistant Prosecutor of Hudson county, and by former Judge Cowenhoven, of New Brunswick. The defendants were represented by former Prosecutor William V. Steele, Alvah A. Clark and George W. Anderson.

According to the prosecution, the defendants bound and gagged Henry Jones, the night watchman at the station, the morning of September 17th, and then blew open the safe. Some days after the assault Jones died suddenly. The evidence that the State could produce was largely circumstantial.

The jury, after remaining out all night, arrived at a verdict early in the morning.

NO CHANCE TO EVADE THE LAW.

Men Accused of Murder Will Be Indicted in Two Counties.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Oct. 26—The dispute as to where Warren Streeter and Joseph Spencer, Jr., shall be arraigned for trial upon charges of assaulting Wm. Daubney, who was killed near Bound Brook the night of Oct. 15th, has not yet been settled. Prosecutor Voorhees, of Middlesex county, and Prosecutor Dungan, of Somerset county, have agreed to have the accused men indicted by the Grand Juries of both counties.

Then the accused will be placed on trial in Middlesex county. There is doubt as to where they should be tried, because, apparently, the dead man was assaulted in Middlesex, a few feet from the dividing line, and then crawled across the county line into Somerset, where he died.

Should counsel for the men question the jurisdiction of the Middlesex court and be successful, the case in Middlesex will be dropped and Prosecutor Dungan will move the trial in Somerset. To prove Middlesex has no jurisdiction the defense will have to prove that Somerset should try the case.

PARK CLUB PRESIDENT RESIGNS.

George P. Dupee Resigns and Mr. Hegeman is Chosen in His Place.

A meeting of the Park Club was held last evening and the resignation of George P. Dupee as president of the club was received with deep regret by the members. Mr. Dupee felt obliged to resign owing to the fact that his business would not permit his giving a sufficient amount of his time to the office. The club accepted Mr. Dupee's resignation, and unanimously elected former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., as president of the club. Mr. Hegeman is one of the charter members of the club, and has served as an officer and member faithfully for many years. He will no doubt infuse new life into the club and thus make the future one of great success for all interested.

COULDN'T GET AT HER BANK BOOK.

It Was in a Trunk That Was Attached by a Creditor.

Justice Nash issued an attachment yesterday for D. M. Groendyke against Mrs. Forrest Jones, colored. Mrs. Jones' trunk was attached just as she was ready to leave town, and everything, including a bank book, was packed up. As Mrs. Jones couldn't open the trunk to get at the bank book, because of the attachment, she was in a dilemma, for the woman had enough money in the bank to satisfy the demands.

So Constable Mattox brought Mrs. Jones to Justice Nash, and after a deal of figuring on both sides the matter was finally adjusted.

They were along the line of the late war, the present war and the Revolutionary contest.

Anderson, and John Becker gave several recitations. Comrade Forman, of New Brunswick, was present, and he spoke a few words. PEACE JUBILEE STARTS.

War Vessels Parade for Philadelphians on the Delaware River.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—The peace jubilee is fairly on. The day for the first of the three monster pageants, the naval review on the Delaware river, was ushered in with favorable weather.

From early morning the movements of crowds of citizens and visitors was in the direction of the river front to take passage on the steamers to be in line of procession around the great warships, or to view the scene from the shore.

The war vessels remained at anchor during the demonstration, every one of them gaily trimmed with bunting.

On the arrival of the guest of the day, Secretary of the Navy John D. Long, with his party, from Washington, they were driven to the Pine street wharf and boarded the Rennsalaer yacht May, which was to lad the naval parade.

The vessels faced north, and with the tug James McCauley, the flagship of the fleet, in the lead, the parade started.

The moving fleet proceeded past the anchored war fleet and around the new Japanese cruiser Kasagi, which was lying at anchor just beyond the last of the American naval vessels.

Turning the Kasagi the steamers faced south and again passed the warships on the Philadelphia side of the river. The spectacle was a most inspiring one.

Secretary Long was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Helen Long, his private secretary, Mr. Finney, and Lieutenant Southerland, chief of the naval militia office.

From here the secretary will proceed to Boston to attend a dinner given by the Young Men's Republican Club.

IS IT A TRIFLE?

THAT COMMON TROUBLE, ACID DYSPEPSIA OR SOUR STOMACH.

Now Recognized as a Cause of Serious Disease.

Acid dyspepsia, commonly called heart-burn or sour stomach, is a form of indigestion resulting from fermentation of the food. The stomach being too weak too promptly digest it, the food remains until fermentation begins, filling the stomach with gas and a bitter, sour, burning taste in the mouth is often present. This condition soon becomes chronic and being an every day occurrence is given but little attention. Because dyspepsia is not immediately fatal, many people do nothing for the trouble.

Within a recent period a remedy has been discovered prepared solely to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. It is known as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and is now becoming rapidly used and prescribed as a radical cure for every form of dyspepsia.

Stuart's Dysyepsia Tablets have been placed before the public and are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. It is prepared by the Stuart Chemical Co., Marshall, Mich., and while it promptly and effectually restores a vigorous digestion, at the same time is perfectly harmless and will not injure the most delicate stomach, but on the contrary by giving perfect digestion strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite and makes life worth living.

OLD GLORY OVER CUBA

Stars and Stripes Will Be Raised New Year's Day.

MOVEMENT OF THE TROOPS.

President Tells the Cabinet that He Has Notified Spanish Authorities to that Effect. Cabinet Indorses the Peace Commission. How Cuba May be Occupied.

Washington, Oct. 26.—At the cabinet meeting yesterday the president informed his advisers that the state department had notified the Spanish authorities that the American flag would be raised over Cuba on January 1, and our absolute protectorate over the island would begin on that date.

He stated that this did not mean that the process of evacuation would not begin until that time, nor the occupation of the island by United States troops be postponed, as some supposed.

The work of sending away Spanish troops and placing our soldiers in occupation would go along as originally intended, and as each town or province was evacuated by the Spanish, our soldiers would be placed in possession.

The cabinet approved unanimously the conduct of the peace commission in resisting any atempt to saddle the Cuban debt upon this country.

The greater part of the meeting was devoted to a discussion of the department annual reports.

The president asked the members to have as much data as possible ready for him at the next cabinet meeting so that he may begin work on his annual message as soon as he returns from Philadelphia.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Secretary Alger carried with him to the cabinet meeting a mass of data relating to the evacuation of Cuba by the Spanish troops and to the establishment of camp sites for the occupancy of the American troops.

Colonel Hecker's commission furnished nearly all the information and there were no less than three reports on the subject.

The administration is said to have reached the conclusion that the disposition of such property as cannon in mounts and other fixed properties by the Spanish officials in Havana is a violation of the protocol, and is taking steps to suspend the practice.

The cabinet gave much attention to the Hecker board reports, and it may be regarded as significant that it left still undetermined the question as to whether the United States government should erect piers and other permanent aids to landing troops or should rely upon lighters, such as were used at Santiago for landing the troops on shore.

If the stay of the United States troops in Cuba is to be short, lighters probably would serve all needs; if, on the other hand, a long military occupation is looked forward to, permanent landing structures would be the most economical and serviceable, as the means of keeping the troops supplied with quartermaster and commissary stores and facilitating their movements from one part of the island to another.

There was some talk at the cabinet meeting of the work of the Paris commission, and although it is realized that the situation is not satisfactory, confidence was expressed in the ultimate success of the American contention.

The Spanish commissioners, it was stated, were asking for everything in the hopes of getting something.

Episcopal Council Closes.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The final day's session of the Episcopal triennial council was held yesterday. The resolutions of the Lambeth English conference and the invitation of the Archbishop of Canterbury for the appointment of two bishops by the American church as members of a body to consider questions of importance to the English and American churches, were made the subject of a report by Rev. Dr. Lucius Waterman of New Hampshire, from the committee.

The report advised that no formal action be taken on the invitation. After some discussion the whole subject was laid on the table.

Rev. George Calvin Hall, archdeacon of Wilmington, Del., nominated by the house of bishops for missionary bishop of Koyoto, Japan, failed of election by the deputies yesterday. The highest testimonials were paid to the character of Dr. Hall, but in the opinion of the deputies, his age, 52 years, is a bar to the successful conduct of active work in the new field and to a ready acquisition of the Japanese language.

Spanish Troops Leave Havana.

Havana, Oct. 26.—The French mail steamer Cheribon, chartered by the Spanish Trans-Atlantic Company to assist in the work of transportation, sailed yesterday for Spain with nine hundred troops and seventy-one officers and the families of the latter.

The Notro Damo du Saint sailed yesterday for Gibara, carrying General Luquo, who will embark a number of the trops of the Holguin division.

General Luquo will take $300,000 to pay salaries for two months to those who embark.

Yesterday afternoon Senor Girauta, secretary of the Spanish evacuation commission, delivered two notes to the United States evacuation commissioners at the Hotel Trocha, Vodado.

A Fire Brick Trust the Latest.

Masillon, Ohio, Oct. 26.—William G. Hipp, of the Masillon Fire Brick Company, has secured options on the plant of all the leading fire brick companies of this county and they will soon be purchased and operated as a trust. It is claimed that eastern capital, amounting to $12,0000,000, is behind the scheme.

MARCHAND MUST GO.

No Thought of Giving the French a Foothold.

London, Oct. 26.—An interesting feature of the situation was the appearance yesterday evening on the stump of Lieutenant Winston Churchill, the son of Lady Randolph Churchill, who was formerly Miss Jennie Jerome of New York.

The lieutenant, who has just returned from the Soudan, made an eloquent speech before a crowded house, which included his mother.

After referring to the successful foreign policy of the government, which, he said, had "resulted in cordial relations with the great American republic, which speaks our language and uses our laws," Lieutenant Churchill proceeded to discuss the Fashoda question, and his resolute advice to the government not to yield was received with ringing cheers.

In the course of his remarks the lieutenant said:

"A great military power with which we have lived in friendship has deliberately crossed our path and has put an affront upon us, and it may be only a matter of a few days, or a few hours when we shall be called upon to make a great effort to hold what belongs to us."

The principal interest is centered in the Marquis of Salisbury's addition to the Fashoda correspondence, contained in the publication of the British Blue Book on that subject.

The Conservative newspapers express themselves as being highly pleased with his rejoinder to the French Yellow Book on the same subject. They declare that it dispels the idea spread by the despatch of the French ambassador here, Baron de Courcel, that the British premier was willing to negotiate on the whole question.

But the Liberal and Radical organs still consider that the Marquis of Salisbury's attitude admits of negotiations promising a friendly arrangement.

The entire press, however, scouts the idea of the possession of Fashoda coming within the sphere of the discussion.

The St. James Gazette yesterday afternoon said:

"We are prepared to negotiate the question of the western frontier of the Bahr-el-Ghazal district. But we must control the Nile, both banks and the water sheds, from its source to the sea."

The Globe thinks the Marquis of Salisbury has made it clear that Major Marchand must quit Fashoda without conditions, adding: "Until that is done there can be no discussion of the French claims in Africa."

A DEAD MAN AT THE HELN.

Strange Discovery of a Fireman on an Erie Express Train.

Port Jervis, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Henry Kinsley, 50 years old, an Erie engineer, living at Susquehanna, Pa., was killed in a peculiar manner while running passenger train No. 12 between Binghampton and Susquehanna early yesterday morning.

The distance between the two cities is but twenty-three miles, but the train, with the hand of the dead engineer still grasping the throttle, made it in twenty-six minutes.

The fireman, Walter Cowsgill, who was busy at the furnace, did not know of the engineer's death until near Susquehanna, as the locomotive was of the "Mother Hubbard" class, with the fireman's cab in the rear.

When the speed of the train did not slacken on approaching the station, Cowsgill became alarmed, and running over to the engineer's cab, shouted over the boiler to Kinsley. Receiving no reply, he climbed out on the running board, went around the head of the engine and reached the engineer's side, kicked open the window and entered the cab. He loosened the stiff fingers of the engineer from the throttle, reversed the machinery and applied the air brakes, stopping the train before it had gone many yards past the Susquehanna depot.

Kinsley's body was removed, and it was found that the entire upper part of his skull had been carried away.

It is thought that Kinsley had his head out of the window and was struck by a mail crane at some county station.

Foreign Officials Here.

New York, Oct. 26.—Mr. S. Oi, engineer to the Ministry of Communications of Japan; Mr. T. S. oriye, general manager of the Tokio Carriage and Wagon Works, and also representing the Kiushiu Railway of Japan, and Mr. William Thow, engineer in chief of the New South Wales government railways, who are in this country looking into American methods of building and operating street and steam railroads, yesterday made a trip over the lines of the Brooklyn Heights Railroad, accompanied by the officials of the road and some invited guests.

A long run was then made through Jamaica to the power station, shops and car barn of the road in South Brooklyn luncheon being served on this trip.

Col. Waring Arrives from Cuba.

New York, Oct. 26.—Among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the steamship Yucatan from Cardenas and Havana, were Colonel Waring and G. R. Fowler, British vice consul at Cienfuegos.

Colonel Waring, when seen at Quarantine, was suffering from an attack of malaria. He expects to be well enough to start for Washington today.

The Yucatan brought as cargo six thousand bags of sugar and a large quantity of tobacco, besides cigars and 34 cases of specie.

Became a Yankee Vessel.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 26.—The steamship Tacoma of the Northern Pacific Steamship Company was transferred from British to American registry on Monday, with her home port at Tacoma.

Five thousand people on the ocean dock listened to the speeches. All the other vessels of the line are to follow.

THE THREE GRACES.

Grace Whitely, Grace Lorning and Grace Downlake were known far and wide as the "Three Graces." Grace by name, and possessing grace of form and manner, there was no stigma in the sobriquet. Another strange coincidence was the fact that they were chums, and lived at 15, 17 and 19 St. Valentine avenue. They belonged to the same "smart" set, and worshipped in the same sanctuary.

One day, recently, Grace Downlake rushed into No. 17 and found her friend Grace Lorning busy over a new recipe for making cake. Miss Lorning had already made several mistakes in compounding the ingredients, and when Miss Downlake bounced into the kitchen with, "Oh, Grace, love, I want you to go right down town with me to look at a new fancy in dress goods!" Miss Lorning threw up her hands in dismay, and exclaimed, "Grace Downlake, you're a mean thing; you've made me spoil this delicious cake—I mean, it would have been delicious—by scaring me into putting in the yolk of an egg in place of a lump of butter!"

It was the end of cake making in that house that day—unless the cook may have plunged the conglomeration into a pan and baked it for the coachman, against whom she had a standing grudge.

Grace Whitely gave me a history of the trip the next day. "Why," she said, "we went to Hahne & Co.'s, Newark. I had no idea that such a splendid assortment of dress fabrics could be found outside of New York. Long after we bought our dresses we lingered in discussing the beautiful display. Hahne's is a lovely place to buy everything." Then she showed me her shopping list, and I give my readers an exact copy of what each girl said of her new suit.

Grace Whitely: "An all-wool camel's hair, fifty inches wide, rough effect, in a lovely cadet blue. I know I'll look stunning in it. I paid only 85 cents a yard."

Grace Lorning: "A suit in bayadere stripe, ruby shade, three-tone effect, and forty-five inches wide. If I don't cut a dash, I'll change my name. The price was low; I paid only 75c a yard."

Grace Downlake: "I think 79c a yard was real low for my duchesse satin. It's all silk, too, and twenty inches wide. It's a perfectly sweet shade of brown. When I get it on, I'll make all the other girls envious."

WILD TIMES IN PARIS

Stormy Scenes at the Opening of the Chamber of Deputies.

MINISTER OF WAR RESIGNS

Vast Crowds Gather in the Place de la Concorde. Police Unable to Restore Order in the Streets. Premier Brisson Appeals to the Chamber for Support for the Civil Power and Demands an Adjournment.

Paris, Oct. 26.—Vast crowds gathered in the Place de la oncorde at 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and began a violent demonstration.

The police, who were on the alert, and in strong force, charged upon the crowd and several persons were injured.

A number of the crowd were arrested, including one of the editors of Libre Parole.

The popular demonstrations are becoming more violent. The mob has burned several kiosks. The police continue to make arrests, but it has no effect in subduing the disorder.

A crowd led by M. Guerin, president of the Anti-Semitic League, made an attack upon the police with loaded sticks, nea rthe Obelisk.

M. Le Proust, commissioner of police, was seriously wounded.

The opening of the session of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday was the occasion of a good deal of public excitement. At least 100,000 persons assembled in the Place de la Concorde shouting "Long live the army," "Down with traitors," etc., and vastly more interest was displayed in the Dreyfus case than in the Fashoda affair.

The Nationalist deputies were loudly applauded as they made their appearance.

The floor and galleries were crowded with deputies when the chamber was called to order at 2.15 o'clock.

M. Paul Derouiede, Revisionist, first secured recognition and ascended the Tribune. He declared that it was necessary for the ministry to put a stop to the unhappy differences which now divided the people.

General Chanoine, minister of war, mounted the Tribune to reply. He said that Derouiede and his friends were cevidently prepared to take the ministry in their own hands. For his part, he declared, he was happy to announce his resignation of the war portfolio.

Premier Brisson then took the Tribune and in a forcible speech appealed to the chamber for support in maintaining the supremacy of the civil power.

General Chanoine, in announcing his resignation, repeated the declaration of his predecessor General Zurlinden, that Dreyfus was guilty.

M. Brisson protested against the manner of General Chanoine's resignation, declaring it to be contrary to all precedent. He said that General Chanoine, at the session of the cabinet council in the morning had not disclosed his intention to resign and had accepted with his colleagues the policy of revision by the court of cassation.

M. Brisson demanded an adjournment of the chamber in order to enable him to consult with his colleagues, and the sitting was suspended amid great excitement.

Later M. Brisson went to the Elysee, presumably to tender to the president the resignation of the cabinet.

General Chanoine evidently resigned upon the impulse of the moment, spurred to furious anger by the taunts of M. Derouiede, whom he literally chased from the Tribune.

While this was going on scenes of disorder and violence were taking place in all parts of the chamber.

M. Brisson left the Elysee after a prolonged interview with President Faure.

It is probable that M. Brisson will himself temporarily act as minister of war.

The entirely unexpected announcement of the resignation of General Chanoine has produced a profound impression in political circles, where it is believed to presage the early defeat of the ministry.

The chamber by a majority of thirteen passed a vote of confidence sustaining the Brisson ministry.

The vote of confidence comprised the government's order of the day affirming the supremacy of the civil power over the military and adjourning interpellations until Thursday.

Century and a Quarter Old.

Salinas, Cal., Oct. 26.—Pardo Lucero, whose age was shown by records of the missions of Los Angeles and Seledad to be 125 years, is dead at the county hospital.

He came from Sonora, Mexico, and for the last seventy-five years was well known in this part of the state.

He worked as a sheep herder for David Jacks, the Monterey millionaire, for forty years.

Dynamite for a Reformer.

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 26.—An apparent attempt was made at 1.10 a. m. yesterday to murder James Pendill, an enthusiastic anti-saloon man, and incidentally his entire family, by blowing up the house with dynamite.

The charge was not heavy enough to wreck the house. Pendill and his family escaped. There is no clew to the culprit.

Transports for Manila.

San rancisco, Oct. 26.—According to orders from division headquarters, the transport Indiana will sail for Manila to-day, and on Thursday the steamer Ohio will depart with the remaining battalions of the Washington volunteers.

The Maria Teresa Coming.

New York, Oct. 26.—The officials of the Merritt-Chapman Wrecking Company are informed that the Maria Teresa, the flagship of Admiral Cervera, will start north the latter part of this week.

WELL CARED FOR

Wisconsin, Alabama and Tennessee Officers Before Investigating Board.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 26.—Dr. R. L. Boss of Washington, D. C., was the first witness examined yesterday morning by the war investigation commission. He was appointed a surgeon of volunteers and attached himself to the First infantry while in the trenches before Santiago.

Dr. Boss related that medical supplies were short, and he frankly admitted that, being a civilian, it took him several days to discover just how to get his medicines from the supply depot.

There were a few days when the troops were on short rations, and suitable food articles for the sick were had only by "rustling" for them.

Dr. Boss said he came north from Cuba with the Fourth infantry. Ninety-three of the regiment were on the regular sick roll, and the others were all broken up.

They travelled on the Seneca on the second trip and had plenty of ham mocks, medical and food supplies There were no deaths on the voyage. They landed at New York and the Seneca was pronounced to be in the best sanitary condition.

The soldiers were sent to the detention camp, many of them being able to walk. A few were compelled to drop out, probably half a dozen.

The detention hospital was in splendid condition, said Dr. Boss.

Dr. Connor again referred to the question of medical supplies, and asked if the witness could give any reason why the Red Cross could get supplies and the government could not.

"I suppose it was lack of transports," he replied.

"Then whose fault was it?"

"I don't know."

"How much effort was made by the chief surgeons of the corps to get supplies?"

"Major Kilbourne made every effort. He would send after supplies and divide with me what he could. From what he gave me I infer that he did not get all that he asked for, because my requisitions could not be fully filled."

Lieutenant F. F. Reese, acting commissary of the Fourth Wisconsin volunteers, made a statement representing his regiment to have been well cared for.

THE PART FRANCE PLAYED.

Yellow Book Issued in Paris Showing What Cambon Did.

Paris, Oct. 26.—The French Yellow Book dealing with the part France took in the Spanish-American war, was published yesterday.

It comprises seventeen documents, and consists of a dry record of the exchange of dispatches with Madrid and Washington while arrangements were being made for the mediation of France.

M. Cambon, the French ambassador at Washington, it is shown, cabled on August 4 that the United States had accepted Spain's proposal that the peace negotiations be held at Paris, saying that President McKinley considered the United States government thereby gave the Spanish government a mark of its good will and to France a token of its confidence.

Another dispatch from M. Cambon, dated August 13, announces the signing of the protocol and adds that President McKinley had warmly thanked him for France's good offices, expressing satisfaction at seeing that the negotiations would continue at Paris. To this M. Cambon replied that he was very pleased at the confidence President McKinley displayed in the French government and its representative, M. Delcasse, the French minister of foreign affairs, cabled on August 13 that he highly appreciated these thanks, which, he added, were striking proof that the "White House had never for one moment misunderstood the high motives which inspired our conduct."

Secretary Day, in a dispatch dated August 15, addressed to M. Cambon, announced that a suspension of hostilities had been ordered and expressed satisfaction at the fact that M. Cambon and France had contributed to this happy result.

To Protect the Harbor.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The annual report of Brigadier General John M. Wilson, chief of engineers, U. S. A., has been made to the secretary of war. In consequence of the war with Spain that portion of the report relating to fortifications is interesting. Upon this point Gen. Wilson says:

"While no hostile attacks were made upon our coasts during the war with Spain the operations of the American fleet in the coasts of Cuba and Porto Rico have amply demonstrated the value of coast defences, including shore batteries and submarine mines, in resisting naval attacks. One other important deduction may also be drawn from the results of the war, the great value and efficiency of the rapid fire gun."

The estimates for the next year are: Gun and mortar batteries, $4,410,000, purchase of land for fortifications $300,000; protection, preservation and repair of fortifications, $100,000; preparation of plans for fortifications, $5,000; sea walls and embankments, $2,500; torpedoes for harbor defence, for the purchase of submarine mines and necessary appliances to operate them, for closing the channels leading to our principal sea ports, for needful casements, cable galleries, etc., to render it possible to operate submarine mines, and for continuing torpedo experi-

To Sell Rich Gold Lands.

Denver, Col., Oct. 26.—George Crawford has left for New York to conclude the sale of one thousand acres of mineral land on South mountain, Grand county, to an English syndicate for $2,500,000.

This property includes mines at Summitville, formerly owned by Senator Bowen, which have produced over $3,000,000 gold. A railroad is to be built to the mines.

Mr. Crawford is also closing a sale of mines at Twin lakes, near Leadville, for $500,000.

Du Bosc's Claim Shelved.

Ottawa, Oct. 26.—It is stated in official circles that the claim of Senor du Bosc, the Spanish spy, for $100,000 damages for his expulsion from Canada, was not referred to the Dominion government.

LIMITS FOR FILIPINOS

Insurgents Must Not Come Within Certain Bounds.

DEWEY LAYS DOWN LAW

Complete Withdrawal of the Insurgents from Manila. No Trouble Anticipated. Dewey Demands that Aguinaldo Exchange Spanish Prisoners and Will Seize the Insurgent's Fleet Unless the Order is Obeyed.

Manila, Oct. 26.—Army officers informed of the Filipino situation last night that they were practassured that the insurgents make no trouble about withdrawcompletely from Manila.

Orders for their withdrawal came from Malalos on Sunday evening and reached the insurgent commanders on Monday, and the troops had until last night to get out.

The line beyond which they must go begins at Bocana de Vista and extends to Lico, thence to the Chinese hospital, thence through block houses 4, 5, 6 and 7 to San Juan river at the water works bridge, thence down the San Juan river to the estuary Tripa de Gallina at block house 11, thence across outside of Paco to the same estuary at block house 12, thence outside of block house 13 to the road opposite block house 14, thence outside of block house 14 and the Spanish trenches to Maitubig.

The negotiations for the exchange of the Spanish and Filipino prisoners drag along slowly, Aguinaldo being preoccupied with the withdrawal of the insurgents from Manila.

e told Paterno, the Filipino negotiator, that he was anxious to get rid of the prisoners if the Spanish would promise to release all the political exiles.

M. Andre, the Belgian consul, is very hopeful of the success of the negotiations, which will be resumed as soon as the difficulties with the Americans are settled.

General Otis and Admiral Dewey are heartily in favor of the proposed exchange.

Aguinaldo sent his representative, Tavera, on Saturday to ask Admiral Dewey to release the insurgent launches and also the steamboat Abbie, which brought arms for the insurgents recently.

Dewey refused to do so, and told Tavera that he would seize the insurgent steamboat Filipinas wherever he found her.

The insurgents have four steamboats, the Filipinas, Don Francisco, Taal and Barog.

Admiral Dewey Monday wrote to M. Andre, saying that unless the insurgents agreed to exchange prisoners with the Spanishh he would seize all four of these vessels.

Big Car Concern Dissolves.

New York, Oct. 26.—Justice Cohen of the supreme court yesterday appointed Albert A. Wilcox and Louis Stern temporary receivers for the John Stephenson Car Company, limited, on application of Charles A. Davis, A. Lawrence Phillips, Leander M. De Lamater and Bertram P. Flint, a majority of its directors, for a voluntary dissolution of the company.

The company has its offices at 47 East Twenty-seventh street. The assets are $1,175,776.

The application for the receivership was made by Sullivan & Cromwell, attorneys for the company.

The John Stephenson Company is one of the largest in this country. It made all the cars now on the Broadway road and has had many big contracts all over the country.

At the office of the company's counsel it was said that the liabilities amounted to $700,000. These were chiefly contracted in the construction of an immense factory at Bay Way, N. J. It was believed that the company will be reorganized.

Train Wrecks Fire Engine.

Bridgeport, Oct. 26.—While responding to the second alarm of the fire in the Nonpareil cork factory on Housatonic avenue yesterday morning, John Kampf, driver of Engine No. 6, was killed by the 11.50 New Haven express at the Seaview avenue grade crossing. The horses had just crossed the tracks when the locomotive struck the fire engine, and the driver was instantly killed.

The fire engine was completely demolished and the fragments strewn along the tracks for one hundred feet. Captain Henry Kampf was on the rear of the fire engine and jumped in time to save his life.

President Invited to Atlanta.

Washington, Oct. 26.—A committee from Atlanta, Ga., called at the White House yesterday and invited President McKinley to attend a peace jubilee in that city.

The president stated that he would be unable to leave Washington before December 15.

The committee thereupon informed him that the celebration would be fixed at that date.

London Market Depressed.

London, Oct. 26.—The Stock Exchange market opened depressed throughout. Consols continued to decline, and at 11.15 had lost 1 1-2 from Monday's closing price.

At 11.30, however, they had recovered 1-2. American securities were flat and Spanish fell 3-4.

Sloan Riding at Newmarket.

A New German Harbor.

London, Oct. 26.—A dispatch from Berlin to the Financial News says that the Hamburg senate proposes to construct a new harbor for the Hamburg-American liners, the cost of which is estimated at 20,600,000 marks.

Street Railway a Paying Investment.

One point that Mr. Riker, of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, laid especial stress upon in his statement to the Common Council Monday night was that the road was not a paying investment. For a time his whole effort seemed to be to make it appear that as the street railway company stock holders had not made anything for themselves thus far in the operation of the road, the Council ought to take pity on them and grant a franchise in perpetuity for the extension of the line to the eastern limits of the city to provide the connecting link with a through county line.

When Mr. Riker says that the stockholders of the street railway company have not received one cent of dividends from the operation of the cars for the past six years, he probably knows what he is talking about. But when he says that the street railway company is not and has not been a paying investment, he states something that is not so from the standpoint that the people should look at it.

The use of the franchise that the people granted has produced revenue and profit enough to pay five per cent. interest on the $100,000 bonds that the company has sold to someone. If it was the misfortune of the stockholders in the Plainfield Street Railway Company that they were not equipped with sufficient capital to build and put the road in operation, that is certainly not the fault of the city. But as long as the road has made enough to pay the interest on the bonds that were sold to furnish funds with which to build it, it is a paying investment.

Mr. Riker and his partners succeeded in selling those bonds in Wall street because the buyers were convinced that the amount of traffic that the road would secure from the rights the city had granted would be ample security for the immediate payment of interest and the final redemption of the bonds. Mr. Riker does not attempt to say that the business of the road as it is now operated is not sufficient to do this.

Just let us suppose that Mr. Riker, Mr. Nevins, Mr. Serrell and the other gentlemen composing the stockholders of the street railway company, had not found it necessary to sell any bonds at all, but instead had put up out of their own pockets the $100,000 in cash—or at least, 97½ per cent of it, for which bonds were sold. In that event, instead of paying out five per cent interest on that sum to Wall street bankers, they would be distributing among themselves the interest that they are now paying to the bond holders.

Assuredly, the road is paying interest on someone's investment of $100,000—or 97 1-2 per cent of it—and if that investment is not the personal cash of the stockholders of the company it does not alter the fact that the road is a paying one just the same.

In our humble opinion we do not think that when the city of Plainfield granted a franchise, upon which the favored ones could go into the money market and secure $97,500 with that for security, it is anything but gilt-edged.

However, Mr. Riker and his partners seem to think that because Plainfield has given them a franchise on which they were able to borrow $97,500, and to operate it so that they could pay the interest on that sum from the profits of the enterprise, that they are now perfectly justified in saying that that great public right is not an asset that is worth considering the value of in determining to what extent the city shall go further in the same direction.

A NEW STYLE OF "L" ROAD.

Germany has solved the problem of an overhead railway. The illustration shows a section of the line between Elberfeld and Barmen. It follows the Wipper river and thus saves the expense of securing rights of way. The cars will accommodate sixty passengers each and the speed will be about twenty-five miles an hour.

Elizabeth will be in a veritable whirlpool of politics tomorrow when both the Republican and Democratic county conventions will be held in that city. All the contradictory eddies that are surging and tossing around in various parts of the county today will sweep in upon the expectant Elizabethians tomorrow and it is not unlikely that several men will experience a feeling that promises of politicians are not what they seem.

Former President Cleveland says that his place "in Princeton is at home and not at a political meeting." Yes, come to think of it, Grover has got plenty of little Clevelands to look after. If he succeeds in bringing them up in the path of true citizenship he doubtless considers he will have plenty to do without trying to convert some of the older Jerseymen.

With all the political honors and emoluments, present and prospective, that Union county, and especially Elizabeth, Republicans possess, the G. O. P. of this section has got to hump itself on election day and get there with both feet, so to speak. Any other result will certainly disturb the other Republican sections that have been left out in the cold.

Mr. Voorhees invades a strong Democratic county today in addressing the voters of Middlesex. The Democrats are putting great dependence in the hopes of seeing Middlesex line up with a rousing old Democratic majority on election day, and Mr. Voorhees' efforts today may not be in vain.

Chairman Gourley, of the Democratic State committee, is sanguine of victory. He says he is positive that the Democrats will carry Essex, and as goes Essex, so goes the State, you know. Mr. Gourley's remarks will encourage Democrats, but will not discourage Republicans.

The new grounds of the Hillside Golf Club, of Plainfield, N. J., lie just beyond a cemetery on the outskirts of that town. The clubhouse is therefore usually spoken of as "The Home Beyond the Grave."—Feminine News and Views in Evening Sun.

More properly it should be the gay above the grave.

Candidate Crane is swinging around the circle in Somerset county this afternoon. He is scheduled to speak in Somerville this afternoon. He has got Democratic weather with him.

The primaries for the election of delegates to the Democratic county convention, to be held at Elizabeth to morrow afternoon, will be held in the various wards of this city tonight.

Trenton people are enjoying gas at fifty cents per thousand feet. That is what competition will do. It is a pity that Plainfield cannot experience the same thing.

The ticklish question for Union county Republicans always is, "Will Elizabeth do as much for a Plainfield candidate as it will for an Elizabeth one?"

If anyone knows who the Democrats are going to nominate at the county convention tomorrow, they are certainly keeping it very quiet.

Plainfield will present a solid front at the Republican county convention tomorrow for the nomination of Ernest R. Ackerman for Senator.

Until the county nominations are made tomorrow, the local campaign will not be in full force.

Elizabeth is agitating better streets. It needs them.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"McFadden's Row of Flats," as interpreted by a specially selected company of stars, will be the attraction at Stillman Music Hall Saturday night. One glimpse of the authors' names will be a guarantee of the genuineness of all claims. The scenes are the pen sketches of that famous caricaturist, R. F. Outcault; the book by the author of "Chimmie Fadden," E. W. Townsend; and the comedy by Glen McDonough, author of "The Prodigal Father." The superior scenery by Hart & McDonald, of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York city, who have prepared every production of that classical playhouse with scenic effects for several seasons past; while that master hand, Dazien, the celebrated Parisian costumer, has furnished the costumes; facts which must bear sufficient weight to insure a production second to none. The scenes are laid in New York city, with everything true to life. New and special novelties will be introduced during the action of the comedy by well known artists.

* * * *

One of the biggest hits in the theatrical line is "The Sleeping City," that is booked for an early appearance at Stillman Music Hall. It is a delightful story, pleasantly told and beautifully acted by a well-selected company of thoroughly efficient players. One of the big features is a marvelous escape from Sing Sing. The scenic effects are elaborate, and the entire entertainment cannot fail to please the most exacting critic.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

There is on exhibition in the show window of J. Fred MacDonald's grocery store a piece of the old cannon that exploded in front of the North Avenue station in 1861. The relic was given to Mr. MacDonald and he had it cleaned and painted and placed in his window. There are many in this city who remember the explosion that burst the cannon and this relic will be looked upon with a great deal of interest.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

During the fall and winter months at the large, roomy houses in the country and the suburbs of the big cities, house parties are all the rage, and at these merry gatherings many a happy hour is spent which is remembered for long years after. Now that athletics and outdoor sports are indulged in to such an extent by both sexes there are no end of amusements to entertain the young people, and with bicycling, golf and long walks throughout the surrounding country, together with sleighing and skating during the winter, many pleasant hours are whiled away until night falls when dancing and all manner of gay entertainments are in order.

The proper amount of clothing to bring with one to an affair of this sort is what generally troubles the mind of the feminine visitor. A stylish tailor-made suit for travelling is indispensable, and one short skirt is a necessity. Then there must be a pretty evening gown, a becoming house dress and a dressing gown or lounging robe for the seclusion of one's own room. The proper amount of dainty lingerie is always included and shoes and slippers for the different occasions are also necessary.

At these gatherings many handsome creations of the dressmaker's art are first brought to view, but perhaps the most exquisite handiwork is seen in the lovely robes donned by the feminine portion of the gay party when they gather together in the afternoon in the room of one of the guests and gayly gossip and chatter over their cups of afternoon tea.

Light weight woolen goods, such as challie and fine cashmere, silk and other clinging materials which lend themselves to the graceful folds which are so desirable in gowns of this description are usually employed, while the colors are of the daintiest.

A lovely model, in a soft silk of a very delicate green tint, is made princesse fashion with the upper portion cut square in the neck and bordered with wide cream colored lace, which also forms epaulets over the shoulders and extends in stole like ends on either side of the front to the foot of the skirt. The back has a full Watteau pleat which merges into a short train. The flowing sleeves reaching just to the elbow are slashed part way and filled in with ruffles of dainty lace.

Another equally effective gown is of an artistic shade of blue cashmere trimmed with white silk and lace and worn over a petticoat of cream colored silk. This frock is made to fasten down the front and is belted in at the waistline with a jeweled ceinture of blue velvet. Soft jabots of lace adorn the upper portion of the garment, which has full elbow sleeves finished with lace ruffles. The skirt made with a short train opens in front over the silk petticoat and is elaborately adorned with lace ruffles, applied in festoons.

A beautiful tea gown fashioned by a sweli couturiere, is carried out in rich old rose brocade, trimmed with real lace. This garment is made to blouse slightly at the waistline, where it is belted with a girdle of black velvet. The neck cut in a V in front has handsomely embroidered revers on both sides, and a high roll collar finishes the back of the neck, extending up above the ears. Lace ruffles adorn the full sleeves. The skirt hanging in rich, soft folds is unadorned save for two milliner's folds of rose colored satin which finishes the foot of the skirt, one overlapping the other.

With gowns of this description slippers and hosiery of the daintiest style and color are worn, sometimes matching the robe, or if preferred of a contrasting color. A pair of rose colored, hand embroidered silk stockings, with satin slippers of the same shade accompanies the embroidered tea gown described above.

But aside from these gowns of comfort and ease, we must turn our thoughts to other things, and the gowns designed for church and visiting are so beautiful in material and make that they certainly deserve a few moments' notice. One decidedly chic and stylish church gowa recently turned out by a swell dressmaker for a young and stately society bud is certainly worthy of mention. The material employed is a beautiful fawn colored satin faced cloth, combined with velvet of a darker shade.

The skirt patterned after the latest model is mounted over a gored foundation skirt of taffeta, made separately, and is adorned with bands of velvet, outlined with fawn colored satin folds. Velvet bands also trim the tight-fitting corsage and the vest and collar are made of cream white Liberty satin, trimmed with shirred puffs of silk muslin. The close-fitting sleeves are finished at the top with a small puff. A picture hat of brown velvet to match the bands accompanies this gown, and is adorned with black ostrich feathers and soft folds of white Liberty satin.

Blue Serge Suit.

The tight fitting corsage has undoubtedly come to stay and for the woman with a good figure is an extremely becoming style.

A stylish suit of cadet blue serge has the corsage made double breasted Eton style, rounded at the sides and back and pointed in front, and adorned with two rows of jewelled buttons. Two tiny revers of embroidered satin adorn the top which opens in rather an odd fashion over a vest of cream colored silk with stock and tie of black satin. The lower part of the sleeve is tight fitting and the upper part is laid in folds. The hat to match is of cadet blue velvet, a dainty turban like affair with a jaunty black wing in the front.

Very old people shorten in stature as they increase in years.

To Fatten a Scraggy Neck.

If there be a general absence of flesh on the body, careful dieting will do all that is required. As many as five meals a day may be indulged in; but they must be taken at regular hours, allowing sufficient time for digestion in between. Plenty of milk, milk-pudding, eggs, bread, cakes, sweet fruits, and all kinds of vegetables, meat well cooked, and fish should be partaken of till signs of improvement are visible; then care must be taken that one does not err in the other direction and become stout. When trying to put on flesh, avoid everything acid, take plenty of warm baths, and sleep and rest as much as possible.

But if it be only the neck and shoulders which are scraggy, and more flesh is not required or desirable on the rest of the body, a different method must be pursued. Cod-liver oil can be easily taken in a little cold water, with a pinch of salt afterwards to remove the taste. The neck and shoulders must be bathed in warm water before retiring for the night, and olive or sweet oil be well rubbed in. In the morning, after bathing, rub gently and in a circular direction for about ten minutes, followed by ten minutes' exercise with dumb-bells. Singing lessons always greatly improve the shape of the throat, and this has a great deal to do with breathing properly. Take a deep breath, and hold it as long as possible. Keep the neck always well and warmly covered.

Bag for Opera Glasses.

A pretty bag for opera glasses is made of cream colored satin, lined elaborately trimmed with lace. The bottom is made over a firm round piece of card-board, measuring five inches in diameter, and is covered inside and outside and seamed together at the edge. The satin for the sides and top is eighteen inches long and six inches deep.

The dainty design is worked on the lower part of the bag with silk and beads. Ten rings are sewn on the bag about an inch above the embroidery and pale pink satin ribbon is run through these both ways so that the ends will draw up the bag.

Women Are Growing.

Athletics have revolutionized woman's figure. They have increased the measurements of the ideal feminine several inches. The absence of corsets has had something to do with the matter also, but not to the extent of athletics.

If the Venus of Milo were reduced to life-size she would measure:

Height, 5ft. 8¾in.
Weight, if a living woman, 12st. 21b.
Neck, 13½in.
Waist, 31in.

Here is a description of the size and weight of what might be called an ideal type of modern girl. She is a young woman of the leisured class who is devoted to athletics, swimming and bicycling being the two branches of sport in which she is most interested. Her measurements are:

Weight, 11st. 6lb.
Neck, 14in.
Arm, 13in.

See how these measurements compare with the Milo and differ from the fashionable wasp-waisted figure of five years ago! Then the average woman prided herself on wearing a 12¼in. collar and a 20in. corset, "laced to meet" over a bust of 36in., and with an arm of 12in.

Grape Cure.

Every autumn revives the discussion of the therapeutic value of grapes, and discovers anew the grape-cure enthusiasts. It is satisfactory to know, at least, that the delicious fruit is certainly one of the most wholesome, even while its properties as a cure-all may be doubted. In the matter of a fruit diet, an authority asserts that one meal a day exclusively of good fruit is more effective than the same quantity taken with other food.

Lavender Fashionable.

In France the old-fashioned lavender has come back into favor. The plant itself used to be considered the emblem of affection, and it is certainly associated in our minds with sweetness and freshness. Many of the best Parisian flowers are scented with it, as well as sachets, while any number of bottles of the perfume are being sold.

The use this past season by ladies of men's weight foot gear has met with great favor. The women who have long held the belief that their feet were too tender for any but kid glove shoes have found that the stout soles and uppers, made on generous lasts, were at once the best protection and the most comfortable wear.

Gebweiler. In der Nähe des Thierenbacher Meierhofes wurde neulich Abends eine Dame aus Mülhausen, die sich zur Kur auf dem Luftkurort Sankt Anna aufhielt, von einem Strolch überfallen, der goldenen Uhr und des baaren Geldes von über 100 Mark beraubt und außerdem mißhandelt. Unter den Kurgästen hat dieser Vorfall große Aufregung hervorgerufen, so daß manche vorzogen, den Ort zu verlassen.

Oesterreich.

Wien. Als der Urheber eines kürzlich bei dem Kaufmann Innhauser verübten Diebstahls von 420 Gulden wurde der früher dort angestellte Kommis Richard Schenk ermittelt. Bei der Haussuchung fand man das gestohlene Geld in Silbergulden, ferner ein Sparkassenbuch auf eine Einlage von 1075 Gulden vor. Schenk hat, während er bei Innhauser angestellt war, wiederholt Beträge aus der Geldlade gestohlen und war nach seiner Entlassung wiederholt, und zwar fünf Mal, im Geschäftslokale eingebrochen.—Die seit Jahren leidende Advokatenswittwe Neumann hat sich in ihrem Schlafzimmer mittelst eines Strickes erhängt. Frau Neumann wurde wohl einige Minuten später aufgefunden und man brachte sie wieder in's Leben zurück, doch nach wenigen Stunden ist die Lebensmüde gestorben.

Bregenz. Im Kloster Mehrerau ist das Oekonomiegebäude in einer Länge von etwa 100 Metern bis auf die Mauern niedergebrannt. Binnen zehn Minuten hatte das Feuer den ganzen Dachstuhl ergriffen. Der Schaden ist ein ganz bedeutender, da unter Anderem circa 6000 Centner Heu verbrannten. Leider ereignete sich auch ein Unfall: ein Feuerwehrmann wurde durch einen Balken von der Mauer geschleudert und liegt jetzt gelähmt im Kloster.

Graz. Im Gebäude des hiesigen Strafgerichts stieß der Grundbesitzer und Schustermeister Johann Friedl aus Eibiswald der Bäuerin Marie Lanz, welche in einer Strafverhandlung als Zeugin gegen ihn aussagte, sein Taschenmesser in die Brust, so daß sie tödtlich verletzt zusammenstürzte. Dem Mörder gelang es, aus dem Gerichtsgebäude zu entkommen.

Krakau. In Stanislau wurden Graf Konstanty Korytowski, Baron Josef Brunicki und Graf Edmund Potocki wegen betrügerischer Manipulationen bei Gutskäufen, ersterer auch wegen Wechselfälschungen verhaftet.

Schweiz.

Bern. Das physiologische Institut der Universität Bern läßt gegenwärtig auf der Trace der Brienz-Rothhornbahn Experimente anstellen über den Einfluß des Bergsteigens auf den Stoffumsatz im menschlichen Körper. Frühere auf anderen Bergbahnlinien im Berner Oberland vorgenommene Versuche scheiterten an dem häufigen Wechsel der Gefälle, während die fast konstante Steigung von 25 Prozent auf der Brienz-Rothhornbahn der Untersuchung sehr zu Statten kommt. Die Resultate der Versuche, die von Herrn Professor Kronecker geleitet werden, sollen das Maß der Arbeit beim Bergsteigen festsetzen, um daraus Schlüsse auf dessen Zuträglichkeit zu ziehen. Auch dürfte hierdurch eventuelle Klarheit über das Wesen der sogenannten Bergkrankheit geschaffen werden.

Basel. Bei einem Neubau im Dorfe Rieben stürzte, in Folge von Verwendung mangelhaften Baumaterials, die Giebelmauer ein und begrub sieben Mann, von denen fünf getödtet und zwei schwer verletzt wurden. Der Parlier wurde in Untersuchungshaft genommen. Von den zwei Verletzten wurde der eine erst am anderen Morgen in der Nähe der Unglücksstelle gefunden. Er war vom Gerüste gesprungen, hatte sich den Fuß verstaucht, aber noch die Kraft gehabt, sich in einen Busch zu schleppen, wo er vor Schreck sprachlos wurde, weshalb er nicht im Stande war, um Hilfe zu rufen.

is it you want to know?"

He paused for a moment.

"It's about Mr. Saville, sir," he said. Then with deliberation, yet with a voice that was broken with emotion—"What relation is he to you?"

Antony's face grew suddenly red. The mere mention now of Saville's name was enough to bring a rush of blood to his face, but, coming as it did from this strange man, this broken-down wanderer, this self-confessed discharged prisoner, it struck upon his ear with a new force. He could not answer easily for some minutes. The train dashed around a bend and slackened at a station before Antony could speak, so difficult was it for him yet to discuss Saville indifferently.

"There is only a distant relationship between us," he answered, vaguely conscious that his voice was changed. "Why do you ask? What is Mr. Saville to you?"

As though touched by some sudden evil influence, the whole expression of the man's face altered. His eyes had a fire of rage, of ungovernable passion and hatred in their sunken depths.

"He is the man who has ruined my whole life!" he said hoarsely. "He is a liar, a traitor, a black-hearted scoundrel!" The cynicism, the weariness, the resignation were gone; but, as the man's eyes rested upon Antony's face, from which every scrap of color had suddenly faded, he drew back in his corner, weak, quivering, breathless. "I ask your pardon, sir," he said faintly. "I ought to have remembered. You've been good to me— and no doubt you think well of him, as all the world does!"

Antony sat with his arms crossed over his breast. The spirit of resentment, the anguished cry of bitter wrong that had rung out so fiercely touched him sharply. It was the story of his own blighted life that he had heard in those fierce broken words. He spoke after a long silence. The man was looking out of the window. The excitement had passed from his face and manner; he had a gray look that told of exhaustion and intense physical weakness. He started on hearing Antony's voice; his eyes expressed nothing but kindliness as he looked at the young man.

"You needn't think about me," Antony said. "I want you to speak right out. A little while ago I think I should have killed you if you had said such words about my—about Mr. Saville; but now things are changed. I should prefer to know all."

Obeying something in the tone of Antony's voice, rather than his words, the man went on—

"I came to your house to find him. I have been looking for him for the last three weeks—in fact, since they let me out of the infirmary. I have had great difficulty in tracing him. I went to his rooms, but was told he was abroad. I didn't believe it; but, though I waited and watched, I could never catch a glimpse of him. Then I remembered I had heard years ago that he used to live with you at Speede, and I walked from London. I've no friends now, and no money. Life, sir, ain't the easiest thing in the world for a fellow straight out of gaol!" His tone was full of bitterness again. "Yes—I walked all the way, sleeping where I could, eating what I could get, only struggling on, hoping to find that Heaven had been good to me at last, and that I might have the satisfaction of meeting him and speaking to him face to face as he'd never been spoke to before!"

The man had to pause for breath; but Antony made no remark. With the dull old pain at his heart, he sat waiting for what was to come.

"Now you know, sir, why it was I begged for work when you offered me money. The feeling had grown and grown on me that I should sooner or later get my chance of seeing him down at your place, though I didn't expect it would have been so soon!"

Antony unfolded his arms. The man's excitement was beginning to affect him.

"And you saw him? You spoke to him?" he said hurriedly.

"Last night, when everybody was enjoying themselves. I heard he had come. Oh, sir," the man cried, almost passionately. "I hope to Heaven you may never feel as I did then! The one thing I had prayed for all these long miserable years was brought to me at last! I was near to him, the man who had ruined me, who had got me put away, knowing I was innocent—the man who had worked with all his might and main to get me convicted—I was to meet him at last! I think I was mad, sir, at that moment! All I could see clearly was that we were to come face to face—that I should cast the truth at him—should let him understand that I'd never rest night nor day till I'd paid him out as he'd paid me! My game wasn't to murder him"—the man gave a bitter laugh—"it wasn't his blood I wanted; it was to make him suffer—to let him feel, if I could, what it was to be shamed, ruined, deserted, as I am! Oh, it's no pretty story for Mr. Saville, great clever swell as he is, the story of Edward Sandford's conviction, and his own double-dealing in the business! There's nothing you grand folk hate like scandal! Well"—he had worked himself up to a frenzy now—"I tell you, as I told him last night when we met suddenly, I'm not going to spare him! I'm going to take my story to the biggest person I can find! The world's made for the rich, we know; but I think even a poor wretch like me can make it pretty hot for a blackguard like him, if I go the right way to work! He cursed me last night, and said he'd heard as I'd died in prison. Then he told me to do my worst; but I see him change for all that! He went white as a sheet, and he trembled where he stood; and I believe, if I'd have waited to give him the chance, he'd have strangled the life out of me under those trees!"

Antony sat listening in horror. The story was so hideous, so evil, so terrible a revelation of the worst, the basest side of life that it made him feel faint. What more was he to hear of the blackness of this man's heart and life—this man whom he had held so dear? He was bewildered by the swiftness with which one mental shock followed another. He sat staring at the poor panting creature opposite to him, who, he felt intuitively, had been a bright, hopeful, perhaps handsome man seven years before, and who was now so reduced, so mentally and physically wrecked by the working of a treacherous enemy. He leaned forward and stretched out his hands involuntarily.

"What you have told me is awful—horrible! How you must have suffered!" he said, in a choking voice. "Yet"— the old loyal eagerness broke through his husky voice—" yet may it not be possible that you have been mistaken? I know now that he is a hard man— that he has great faults; but he has lived on intimate terms with me—he has seemed so wise, so good. I want to hear all your story before I judge him. You have suffered, and you are bitter because of your suffering. Who would not be bitter after seven years of imprisonment? But there may be some mistake; there must be——" Antony paused, then went on quickly. "On what grounds do you base this awful accusation? He was not in your sphere of life. I have never heard him mention your name. How could he be your enemy, then? What was it that led him to do this thing you said he did? What could he gain by getting you convicted?"

The man looked into Antony's haggard young face. There was a new expression in his eyes now—they seemed to burn as with some strange fire.

"Oh, Mr. Saville had good reason for what he did! He's never the man to act without reason—mind you that always, sir!" His manner changed—he drew nearer to Antony. "I was not alone when this trouble came so unexpectedly. I had been married a few months. My wife was a girl; she was very beautiful." His eyes had a glitter as of madness in them. "You shall hear all my story; you'll find that even seven years of gaol hasn't made me a liar. I was married. People said at the time I was a fool to marry as I did—me, only a bookkeeper in a draper's shop, and she a girl with no parents, no money—nothing except her beautiful face, her pretty voice! She was a singer in a music-hall when I met her first, sir." His voice had an odd note of defiance in it—of defiance that must have been strong years before, when wise staid friends no doubt had tried to check his folly. "But she was very young—just a slip of a girl. I never knew rightly anything about her birth or where she come from; I just fell down and worshipped her, sir. She was so beautiful, and so clever, too—clever enough for six girls! I'll not weary you with what I had to go through afore I married her. I'll come to the trouble. There had been a lot of mystery about little robberies from my firm. The thief could not be traced; but one day a cheque for a hundred and fifty pounds was paid out of the shop; and then come the row. The cheque was forged—clumsily done, too. It had passed through my department—it was put down to me!" The man's voice sank now to a husky whisper. "It had been done in my house; I took the blame! My girl seemed like mad when she see the trouble she'd brought on me. I've never understood to this day what led her to do such a thing; but then, I suppose, I never understood anything about her. It was for vanity perhaps, for she loved finery, and it was a poor sort of home I could give her, and perhaps it was some one in her past life as egged her on. I've thought since as some one she knew must have had a hand in all the other robberies as had gone on. Anyhow, she confessed to me that she did the forgery, and it was put on me. The firm was furious with me—they had me took up at once."

The man drew back into his corner—the train had stopped for tickets to be collected. As it moved on again, he continued—

"It was my girl who thought of Mr. Saville; she said she'd heard he was such a great man, and she said she'd make him take up my defence. She was like a scared thing when she saw what might have come to her if I hadn't stood up in her stead. She said she'd open her heart to this big lawyer. She seemed to know of him very well, and she talked me round into letting her go and put the case in his hands. She knew how to play me!" They were passing through the dark arches of the station-entrance now; the pale face gleamed uncannily in the shadows. "Up to the last," said Sanford, in the same hoarse whisper, "I had hope. The evidence against me was purely circumstantial; there was nothing to bring the forgery right home to me. My long years of good character was all in my favor. Mr. Saville pretended that the prosecution hadn't a leg to stand on. He knew well enough I was prepared to go to death for my girl's sake; but he buoyed me up with the hope as nothing would never come out against her, even when I was cleared. He never intended to have me cleared, sir. On the very morning of the trial he deserted me. He threw up the case—said, had he known everything, he would never have took it up—declined to call witnesses; and the prosecution had it all their own way, for"—the bitter voice trembled—"what lawyer, do you think, would come forward and defend me after a great man like Mr. Saville had declared so openly there was no defence? I was carried out of court unconscious. It was not until several weeks after my conviction that I was told of my mother's death and my wife's desertion. My home had been sold up, and she had gone no one knew where; but I knew!" the man said, in a terribly even voice. "I knew where she had gone, and why this man had so foully betrayed me after having led me to hope, after having had the full clear truth laid before him! Ay—I knew, sir! Had I been patient in prison I should have been out a couple of years before my full time. They talk of patience to a man with a bleeding heart!" Sandford cried, with indescribable pathos. "Oh, Heaven—what I suffered, remembering all—my poor mother—my lost life—my broken faith!" He sank forward, with his head in his hands.

The train stopped with a jerk; Antony put his hand upon the bowed shoulder of the man in front of him.

"Don't give way!" he said hoarsely—he was almost breaking down himself. "You have gone through much—enough to have killed you; but hold up a little longer, man! You must come with me. I must know more of this horrible story. I am going to take a trouble of my own to a staunch good friend; we will talk over your trouble too. Only Heaven knows whether I can help to give you another chance of happiness; but, if there is any justice or fairness in the world, I shall not rest till you are righted. See— we are in London now. Rouse yourself! Trust me—I will not fail you. For all the wrong this man has done you I will try to atone. Come!"

Antony half lifted the weak shabby figure from the carriage and across the platform to a hansom; and, as he got in after the man, he gave the address of Gregory Latimar, and they were driven sharply out of the station, away towards Lady Feo's dainty little home in Mayfair.

On motion of Freeholder Farrell received and placed on file.

The agreement with the Elizabeth City Horse Railroad Co. for construction, etc., of trolley road, was presented. Freeholder Roll said that the county road committee had conferred with said company relative to the placing of macadam or of Belgian blocks alongside of the rails of tracks of said company, and would recommend that part "b" of section 1 provide in part as follows: "And the said company shall also, at its own expense, pave with telford a strip one foot wide and seven inches deep on the outside of each outer rail; four inches on the bottom to be of chips, two and one half inches of three-quarter stone, and one-half inch dust, and shall maintain said pavement."

Some discussion ensued, and it was finally ordered on roll call, by unanimous vote that the agreement, including the recommendation as to part "b," be accepted and placed on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Freeholder Roll, chairman of the county road committee, reported that the committee, in accordance with a motion adopted at the last meeting of the board, had fixed the compensation of the clerk of the board, secretary to Mr. Keron, which latter gentlemen had been heretofore appointed to negotiate for purchase of property on Westfield avenue, at $5 per day.

Freeholder Higgins reported that the committee on bridge, Fourth avenue, at Roselle had examined into the matter, and were of the opinion that a bridge was needed at that point; the committee would present the following resolution as their recommendation, viz: Resolved, That a brick arch and stone bridge be built over the small stream at Fourth avenue, Roselle, to cost not exceeding $300.

Freeholder Brucklacher moved that the report be received, and the resolutions therein contained adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by unanimous vote.

NEW BUSINESS.

By Freeholder Wahl:

Resolved, That the road petitioned for by the citizens of the township of New Providence, beginning at the west end of the Union county road, at the intersection of Springfield avenue and the road leading to Plainfield, known as South street, and extending westerly to the dividing line between Union and Morris counties at Townley bridge, is, in the opinion of this board, of sufficient general importance to warrant the expenditure of the county and State moneys necessary for the improvement thereof, and the expense thereof will not be an unnecessary public burden, and be it further

Resolved, That the work on said road be commenced in the early part of the spring of 1899.

Freeholder Roll moved the adoption of the resolution.

Freeholder Farrell moved, in view of the fact that the resolution did not contemplate beginning work until next spring, that the same be laid over until next meeting, which was so ordered.

By Freeholder Higgins:

Resolved, That the bill of W. T. Kirk, for iron bridge in the township of Linden, be paid when same is properly audited by committee. Contract, $759.

Freeholdr Farrell moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll-call it was unanimously adopted.

On motion of Freeholder Roll the Board went into executive session.

On resuming open session the following resolution was presented, viz:

HISTORY OF TWO BLACK DIAMONDS.

One-Time Spanish Crown Jewels in Possession of an American.

Just now, when everything concerning Spain is of more or less interest, a couple of one-time jewels of the Spanish crown attract more than usual attention. They are two wonderful black pearls, which, originally coming from the far East, have found their way to America by way of the Spanish crown. It was a good many years ago, when Spain was a powerful nation, that the jewels were placed in the crown. Perhaps black pearls, which seem an appropriate emblem for the proud and haughty Dons, are not their lucky stones. At any rate they remained in the possession of the royal family for 300 years, but in the meantime the Spanish heads that wore the crowns had been proverbially uneasy, and the fortunes of the country were not as bright as they had been.

One king, perhaps a little more superstitious than the others, had the dark gems removed from the crown to make room for stones of more cheerful appearance. It was after that that Napoleon's troops invaded the country and a Spanish officer of the royal troops, displaying great gallantry, was rewarded with the

SPORTING.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

Nathan E. Lewis, tackle and centre on the Stevens Institute eleven, will play with the Plainfield team on election day.

It is now certain that "Shorty" Milne will play with the Plainfield team on election day against the San Remos of the New York Athletic Club. They are old rivals and "Shorty" is particularly anxious to play against them.

Taylor, who scored the only touchdown made in the Dunellen Scotch Plains game Saturday afternoon, is a Plainfield boy and a member of the Alis team. While waiting for that team to organize, Taylor has been playing with the Dunellen eleven and is consequently in good practice.

The candidates for the Plainfield team met on the Westervelt avenue practice grounds last evening for their first practice for the election day game. The number of candidates who turned out was surprisingly large and there is every prospect of a strong team for the game. Ed Brown showed up and decided that he would play after all. Couch, captain of the New Jersey Athletic Club eleven, has applied and will probably play tackle. He weighs 192 pounds and is a very fas man. Harry L. McGee was elected captain of the team. The line will be the strongest part and is very satisfactory to all. Behind the line there is some uncertainty as how the different positions are to be filled. McGee will be full back and Smith will play one of the halves. Freeman has decided not to play, and so Erickson and Darling are both being tried at quarter.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Tomorrow night Physical Director Heywood, of the Y. M. C. A., will grade the young men in the evening classes for regular work. After this new men entering the classes can always find a place, and will be put in where they belong.

Last night was one of the busiest in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium that Physical Director Heywood has ever experienced. The largest number of pupils, 30, were on the floor that night, more than have taken part in the exercises on a regular class night since Mr. Heywood came here.

BASKET BALL.

The regular basket ball team, of the Y. M. C. A., held their last practice last night in the gymnasium before going to New York tonight and playing the Young Men's Institute team. This team is one of the best teams that come to Plainfield, and they are all gentlemanly, courteous fellows, who play a smooth, clean game. Instead of playing the return game on election day, as first intended, the first game in town will be played Monday, November 7th.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

There is still great interest manifested in bowling at the Park Club, and the candidates for the team practice nearly every night. Last night there were four 200 scores made. Laurens VanBuren made two and Clarence L. Murphy one.

The Philadelphia Jubilee.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Philadelphia, Pa., October 26.—A heavy downpour of rain began here soon after 5 o'clock this morning, and at 10 o'clock shows no signs of cessation. As a result, the Peace Jubilee committee announced at 10 o'clock the postponement of the "Civic Day" parade until Friday. The indications are that the weather tomorrow will be clear, and that no postponement of the military parade will be necessary.

—In such a large stock of goods as carried by Woodbull & Martin, there is always a certain amount that becomes soiled and damaged to a certain extent. It is against their policy to work off shop worn goods unless at a low price. That is just what they are doing with a lot of ladies muslin underwear. See there advertisement in today's Press.

Frisbee's Narrow Escape.

As Royal Blue line train No. 509 passed through this city yesterday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock a piece of a rod, with two heavy bolts on, weighing two pounds, flew from one of the trucks and narrowly escaped hitting Mail Messenger Frisbee. It struck the end of a trunk, indenting it. If the iron had struck Frisbee it would have seriously hurt him.

Sixty Japanese Drowned.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Kobe, Japan, October 26.—The Japanese steamer Mijagala was sunk today almost immediately after having been in collison with the Japanese steamer Kinshiu-Maru. Sixty Japanese were drowned.

Discussed Borough Finances.

Mayor Wilson and the finance committee of the Borough Council held a meeting last evening and discussed matters that will be introduced at the next meeting of the Council Friday evening, November 4th.

Horse Subsisted on Timber.

Nevada, Mo., Oct. 26.—A remarkable case of long life without food or drink has been developed here when a horse supposed to have been stolen from E. T. Letton of this county on the night of September 25, was found alive in one of the stalls at the fair grounds. It had gotten loose from its owner and strayed into the fair grounds, where it was shut in a stall by one of the fair managers, who supposed it belonged to people camped there.

When found it had eaten out the pine timber in reach and, though greatly emaciated, was able to walk. It had subsisted thirty days without food or drink.

Girl Strikers on a Rampage.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Oct. 26.—The one hundred and fifty girl strikers in the American ereal Company's plant visited the mill yesterday and demanded an answer from Manager McDonough to their request for an increase of pay. He refused their demand.

The girls visited the wrapping room and overturned chairs, emptied paste pots, threw brushes out of the windows, spilled oatmeal over everything and scared half out of their wits the few girls who had been employed to take their places.

Wants Cubans to Resist Us.

Havana, Oct. 26.—The Cuban general, Jose Martel, has issued a proclamation, addressed to the people of Cuba, demanding "Cuba for the Cubans."

The proclamation ends by urging all Cubans to resist the landing of American troops by force.

A New York Post Office Robbed.

Cortland, N. Y., Oct. 26.—The postoffice at McGrawville, three miles east of here, was broken into and robbed yesterday morning.

The door of the safe was blown off and $600 worth of stamps and $60 in cash taken by the thieves. There is no clew to the robbers.

MAY PROVE DEAR GAME.

CONFLICT OF GAME LAWS IN NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY.

J. Harry Green Brought Prohibited Game in New Jersey and May Possibly be Severely Punished For It

J. Harry Green, of the borough, has just returned from New York State, where he has been spending a short time hunting. As the law in that State allows rabbits to be hunted Mr. Green felt very proud of the fact that he was able to capture six while away. While he was returning to Plainfield he made no attempt to conceal his game. Unfortunately while coming out from New York on the train he was seen by a member of the Game Protective Association. The matter was reported to Freeholder Lutkins, and he in turn reported the matter to Game Warden Sebring. The latter now has the matter under advisement. According to the New Jersey game laws a person is punishable if found with prohibited game in his possession.

An effort is being made to have Mr. Green held responsible for four rabbits instead of six. In case this is done the fine would be about $65, which is pretty dear hunting. Mr. Green is one of the borough's best citizens and has made no attempt to evade the law. He simply did not know the law in detail regarding hunting. Game Warden Sebring has not yet decided just what he will do, but no doubt leniency will be exercised in his case.

MISS KNOX NOW MRS. OUGHTON.

The Girl Called Out of School to Become a Bride.

The announcement was made in New Brunswick yesterday of the marriage Wednesday of last week of Miss Amelia Knox, daughter of Mrs. Henrietta Knox, to Frank Oughton.

The young woman is eighteen years old, and the young man is nineteen. The bride was a member of the "A" class in the Livingston Avenue High School, and would have been graduated next June.

Wednesday last, while Miss Knox was in a class-room, a messenger took to her a note. Pleading a suitable excuse, she put on her hat and left the school.

Her affection for young Oughton had been known to her classmates, and a rumor of her marriage circulated. Her mother admitted yesterday that the report was true. Mr. and Mrs. Oughton are on their wedding trip.

VOORHEES TO BE HEARD.

He Will Probably Come to Plainfield November 3d.

Hon. Roger Murray stated to a Press reporter today that he had received assurances from the Republican State committee that Mr. Voorhees would come to Plainfield November 3d to deliver a campaign speech. He will be accompanied by Congressman Fowler. The occasion will be a time for a great demonstration by the G. O. P. Music Hall will be secured for the occasion.

Accepting Favors an Art.

There are a great many friendships ruined by the unwillingness on one side or the other to accept favors. Two school girl friends united by many congenial ties are forced apart because the poorer one foolishly thinks that she should make some return for the pretty gifts, the party invitations, the tickets to concerts or matinees which her friend loves to remember her with. She knows that she is unable to make any return, so refuses the good times, and by doing so not only deprives her friend of the keenest delight, but herself of many opportunities for pleasure, and the family circle at home of the recital of the fresh and novel experience which contact with the world outside of her home would surely bring her.

Favors are of many sorts. It sometimes happens that a wealthy woman may wish to send a girl to college, to help her in her music, to encourage her in her desire for an art education; she may give her books, take her out with her and give her opportunities for hearing great artists. When a girl has such favors offered her she should accept them gracefully and with a clear conscience. The favors are not all on one side; her bright face and enthusiastic appreciation mean much to the woman who is fortunate enough to be able to dispense favors.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Drink a Man Needs.

An average man requires fifty-nine ounces of food per diem. He needs thirty-seven ounces of water for drinking, and in breathing he absorbs thirty ounces of oxygen. He eats as much water as he drinks, so much of that fluid being contained in various foods.

In order to supply fuel for running the body-machine, and to make up for waste tissue, he ought to swallow daily the equivalent of twenty ounces of bread, three ounces of potatoes, one ounce of butter, and one quart of water. The body is mostly water. The body of a man weighing 154 pounds contains ninety-six pounds, or forty-six quarters, of water.

"De trouble 'bout advice," said Uncle Eben, is dat de man who has made a sho-nuff success in life is gin'rally too busy ter stop an' give lessons."—Washington Star.

FORGOT TO TAKE HIS BRIDE.

True Story of an Absent-Minded Man's Wedding Day.

Here is a "true story" of an absent-minded man to whom it "came handy" to forget. Said one of his friends: "I could sit right here on this nail keg from now till the Connecticut river turns round and runs up stream an' tell you about the different things I know Hank forgot, first an' last; but I'll only mention one instance, an' that happened at the time Hank got married.

"You see, Hank knew his failin' as well as anybody, an' he was mortal afraid he would forgit about givin' the minister his fee, so he kep' his mind glued right to that, an' completely forgot everything else.

"He was to be married in the evenin' at the parsonage, an' when he went round there, all by himself, at the ap'inted time an' meandered into the parlor an' told the dominie to go ahead with the splicin', the good man looked up, sort o' puzzled and surprised like, an' said:

"'Haven't you—er—forgotten suthin', Mr. Hobbs?'

"'No,' said Hank, still thinkin' of the fee. 'I've got it right here in my vest pocket. Might as well pay you now as any time.'

"'Why, bless you, my friend, I wasn't thinkin' of the fee,' said the parson. Time enough for that after I earn it! but—er—noticed you'd forgotten the bride, an'—"

"'By jimminy!' says Hank, glancin' round, 'so I have. Mighty glad you spoke of it! I was almost sure I'd forgotten somethin', but I couldn't think what it was.'

"He grabbed his hat and went off on a jump after his intended. He got back before the dominie closed up the parsonage for the night, but it was a close shave, an' when the story got out 'twas a long while afore folks quit askin' Hank if he'd forgot anything lately."—Harper's Magazine.

ANOTHER HISTORIC STORY GONE.

The Famous Circle in Chillon Castle is Not Authentic.

Another familiar legend has been relegated to the limbo of the untrue, and it is a question if there will be anything left for the next generation to pin its faith to. This time it is the "Prisoner of Chillon," beloved of and quoted by every school girl. In the cell where the "Prisoner" languished so long there was shown a circle worn in the stones by his feet in walking round and round a pillar to which he was chained. M. Vuillet, one of the members of the grand council of Vaud, was horrified to find that, in repaving the cell, "Chemin de Bonivard," one of the souvenirs and attractions of the country had disappeared. He brought the matter before the council, and was chagrined to learn that the famous track had not been made by the captive whom Byron had made famous but had been industriously scraped by successive keepers at Chillon, who, for exhibiting it had received large pour boires from sympathetic and sentimental tourists.—Critic.

Why Elephants Fear a Mouse.

It seems incredible that so small and harmless an animal as a mouse is able to frighten an elephant out of his senses. One little mouse in the hay on which they are feeding will stampede an entire herd. In their native land there are little animals, known as chacanas, which feed on a small, sour berry of which elephants are very fond. They live in settlements, something after the manner of prairie dogs, under the berry bushes. When feeding, the elephants trample the little towns, and the chacanas, in their fright, run up the tubes of the elephants' trunks. Their long, sharp claws catch in the flesh and cannot be ejected. The more violently the monster blows through its coiled trunk the more firmly the hooked claws of the little animal become imbedded in the flesh. Inflammation and death are the result. In captivity the elephants think they are in danger of the deadly chacanas when they see a mouse.—New York Sun.

Denounced Her Son as a Deserter.

Talk of the Spartan mother! She was not in it with Mrs. Maroney of New Haven, who soundly thrashed a son and had him arrested for deserting from the volunteer service. When the war broke out John Maroney of New Haven joined a battery. Like many other volunteer soldiers he did not get to the front, and finally, when the war ended, he resolved to quit the service. Maroney left camp without leave and made his way to his home. Mrs. Maroney, whose husband fought through the civil war, knew something of martial affairs and closely questioned her son. She discovered that he had deserted, and her wrath arose. Young Maroney ran out of the house, but his mother caught him in the yard and belabored him with a clothspole. Finally she dragged him to a police station and turned him over to the captain as a deserter.

Now They Pay the Bridesmaids.

For some time it has been the habit at New York weddings to pay the bridesmaids with jingling coin. "Bridesmaidship" in this way becomes a business. At one wedding there were no less than fifteen bridesmaids, who were all punctually paid. Besides the beautiful toilets, given by the bride's father, they each received $30 for appearing in the wedding train. There are young ladies who accept as much as $100 for their "office of honor."

One woman who is much sought after for her beauty, has appeared as bridesmaid at more than two hundred weddings, and has in a short time amassed quite a little fortune, besides many costly presents she received.

NO MAN INDISPENSABLE.

A Limit to the Value of Even the Valuable Man's Services.

"It's a mistake for a man to think he's indispensable," said Mr. Nozzleby, "for no man is. Men are valuable, and they may easily make themselves very valuable, but when a man comes to think the business can't get along without him, or can't get along as well as it does, which amounts to the same thing, why, he's wrong, that's all. More than one man has found that out when he has set his valuation too high. And it is very probable that when he began to dwell on his own value his value in reality began to decline; it is certain that one of the things that contributed most to increase his value was his forgetfulness of himself.

"As a matter of fact a man's interests, if he is really a superior man, up to a certain point, and that a high point, too, will take care of themselves, or rather other people will take care of them if he will supply the motive. There is a fixed low price for the run of people of average ability, but none for the man of really superior ability, that is, if he is a 100 per cent. man, which is to say not only of high ability but perfect forgetfulness of self and absolute devotion to business. Any break or flaw or lack in these qualities anywhere knocks a man's value down wonderfully. Nothing less than the whole will do, but that will command a price anywhere and everywhere.

"Still no man is indispensable; it isn't in the nature of things that he should be. No matter who dies, the world keeps on turning just the same, and it would be just the same with the business if you should go out of it."—New York Sun.

JOKE HABIT IRRESISTABLE.

This Man Simply Had to Make Light of the Most Serious of Things.

"The coolest man I ever knew," began the drummer from Milwaukee, "was not a soldier at all, and very likely would have run like a scared sheep if ever he had been under fire. For all that, he never let anything surprise him. He seemed to make it the chief object of his life to crack a joke on every occasion that other people thought serious. He was the ordinary city knockabout—called himself a real estate dealer, I believe, though I doubt if he ever sold a foot of land in his life.

"Well, one day John Jimson—that was his name—dropped dead in his office. At least, he seemed to be dead. The doctor called it heart disease and made out the death certificate accordingly. We all went to his funeral for he was liked by everybody, and a good many commented on the natural, smiling expression of the corpse.

"Just as the undertaker was about to close the coffin the corpse raised its head slightly and said very faintly but smiling and distinct: "One moment, please.'

"You can bet there was a great sensation and a scurrying to get him out of the coffin when we realized that he had only been in a trance. As we lifted him up he smiled again very cheerfully and whispered: 'I was only going to suggest, Mr. Undertaker, that you ought to send your bill to the doctor who granted a death certificate and not to my poor family.'"—Buffalo Express.

SHE ROUNDS UP HOBOES.

A Woman Who is an Expert in Persuading Tramps to Work.

Mrs. S. J. Atwood calls herself the "Hobo Hustler of the West," and there is possibly no other woman in the world who holds a similar position.

Her business is to gather up all the idle laborers she can find and put them to work on the Union Pacific Railroad in Colorado, Wyoming and other Western sections. She has been employed by the Union Pacific in this capacity for the past twelve years, and the company finds her services indispensable.

Mrs. Atwood has been in the business so long that she says she can tell by looking at a man whether or not he will make a good hand. When she sees one who suits her taste she approaches him without hesitation and asks him how he would like the position she has to offer. It only requires the work of about a minute for the terms to be arranged, and the man is escorted to some corner where others she has engaged have been congregated.

Mrs. Atwood has no place she calls her home, but she usually makes Denver her headquarters. Most of her time is spent between Denver and Portland, Ore.

The "hobo hustler" is a little woman agout 30 years of age. She has short curly hair that is as black as night. She walks with an agile step and always has a pleasing smile for even the toughest hobo.—Kansas City World.

Origin of Chinese Opium Smoking.

Although opium has existed as a medicine in China for over a thousand years, the curse of opium smoking has only been known on any considerable scale for less than one hundred and fifty years, and then it spread from the coast inland, the import steadily increasing, first in the hands of the Portuguese, but from 1773 in the hands of the British. This view of the matter supports the ordinary anti-opium contention, which is that opium is almost invariably spoken of as Yang-yen—i. e., "foreign smoke (or tobacco)," and not by its Chinese name and that the habit of opium smoking, with all its attendant evils, came from across the seas and was introduced by foreigners.—Contemporary Review.

GREAT G. O. P. FIGHT IS NOW IN PROGRESS.

A FUNNY DUMMY BALLOT.

DESIGNED TO SHOW ELIZABETH'S GRAB-ALL PROCLIVITIES.

Hundreds of Ackerman Buttons Have Been Distributed—Plainfield Delegates Hold a Caucus to Find Out Exactly What is to be Done—Codding Confident of Much Support—Cross Men Hopeful.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, October 27—The supporters of Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, for the Senatorial nomination are here in full force today and are bending every effort to have him win. The Plainfield politicians are making an effective demonstration in favor of their favorite. Hundreds of buttons bearing his picture have been distributed, and a number of other devices promulgated to secure support for him. One of the most novel devices appeared upon the scene soon after the delegates commenced to arrive this morning. It was a dummy ballot, as follows:

REGULAR

Republican Ticket.

For Governor,
ELIZABETH.
For Congress,
ELIZABETH.
For State Senator,
ELIZABETH?
For Member of Assembly,
ELIZABETH.
ELIZABETH.
PLAINFIELD.
For Coroner,
ELIZABETH.

The big, bold type in which Elizabeth appears brought out conspicuously from Plainfield's standpoint the zealousnes of the county seat's for their own town. Though the ticket is funny in a way, it conveys in cold type just what the Plainfielders have been arguing right along—that Elizabeth wanted everything.

At 2:30 o'clock this afternoon the delegates from Plainfield gathered in the Freeholders room in the county court house, where they are now in session, as this despatch is sent, determing just what they shall do when the convention convenes. The leaders do not propose to have any hitch whatever if it can be helped, and when the delegates come out of the caucus it is expected that each and everyone will know just where they are at.

The local supporters of former Judge Cross for the Republican nomination for State Senator were given a cold chill by news that missionaries in the interest of Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, had been at work among the Rahway delegates trying to convert them from Cross to Ackerman. The Ackerman men used the argument that by Rahway supporting the Plainfield candidate this time, that city next year would support County Clerk Howard for renomination, but if Rahway went back on Ackerman, then Plainfield would have a candidate for County Clerk next year.

This talk has had its effect, and now it is openly declared that there are Ackerman men in the Rahway delegation. City Clerk Ryno, of Rahway, came to Elizabeth wearing an Ackerman button in his coat, to the surprise of the Cross managers in this city. He is not, however, a delegate to the convention.

Such clever political manipulators as Frank Bergen, Surrogate Parrot and John Kean seem confident, however, of the ultimate success of Cross, while admitting that deals are in progress to try and defeat his nomination. They claim, however, these movements are being closely watched, and will all be, in due time, checkmated.

Nearly all of the county leaders are in town including Charles N. Codding, who says he expects to capture the nomination. Mr. Codding placed his own strength at five wards, and possibly six, in Elizabeth, the townships of Westfield, Cranford, Linden, the borough of Roselle and Springfield, after J. Martin Roll drops out. This would give him a total of about fifty votes. Mr. Cross's friends claim he will have seventy votes sure on the first ballot and probably more. Ackerman's strength is placed at thirty-three, and

MILK BOTTLES MISSED.

COMPTON VAIL ACCUSED OF TAKING PROPERTY NOT HIS OWN.

Patrolman Totten Detected Him in the Act of Taking Bottles That Belonged to Milkman Mellick—Held on Charge.

Compton Vail, a milkman residing at South Plainfield, was ordered to appear before Judge DeMeza this morning to answer to a charge growing out of the theft of milk bottles and tickets owned by various other milkmen in the city, among whom are Messrs. Darby, Highland, Gavin and Mellick. For some time past these milkmen have been missing bottles and tickets and their customers have also complained about the matter.

The case was reported to the police and a detail was deputized to be on the lookout. Patrolman Vanderweg was on the watch in the west end, and Patrolman Totten in the east end. Yesterday morning Patrolman Totten alleged that he caught Milkman Vail taking bottles from the home of Louis Timpson, on East Sixth street, at which place Mellick delivers milk. Next door to Mr. Timpson's Vail delivers milk, and it was while leaving milk at this house that it is said he appropriated the bottles at Mr. Timpson's.

When Vail saw that he was caught he made his escape, and later he was found and ordered to appear in court. He appeared this morning and a charge of disorderly conduct was preferred. He entered a plea of not guilty, and his trial was set down for next week Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

POPULAR COUPLE WED

CEREMONY PERFORMED IN ST. MARY'S CHURCH YESTERDAY.

Thomas Strapp and Katie A. Dorgan the Contracting Parties—Church Prettily Decorated — Reception Followed.

A charming wedding took place yesterday afternoon at St. Mary's church, when Miss Katie A. Dorgan, daughter of Thomas Dorgan, of South Plainfield, was married to Thomas Strapp, of this city. The wedding was at 4 o'clock, and Rev. Father Smyth, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a very large number of relatives and friends from this city, New York, Brooklyn and other places.

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion. The wedding march was played by Miss Smith, organist of the church, and previous to the wedding a selection of classical music was rendered.

The bride wore a gown of creame colored silk en train, trimmed with lace and ribbon. She was married with a veil and she carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Dorgan, who acted as bridemaid. She was gowned in white chiffon, trimmed with lace and yellow satin ribbon, and carried pink carnations. The best man was Mr. Strapp, of New York, a cousin of the groom.

The ceremony was a pretty one and much admired by everyone present. Following it the bridal party returned to the home of the bride at South Plainfield, where a reception was held from 6 o'clock until 10 o'clock. The home was thronged with guests and the happy couple received the best wishes of all for a happy and successful married life. During the evening supper was served and this part of the reception was complete in every particular.

About 10 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Strapp left their friends amid showers of rice and good wishes, for a honeymoon trip to Washington and the south. On their return they will reside at 701 Berckman street, where the groom has furnished a home complete.

The collection of gifts of a useful and ornamental nature received by Mr. and Mrs. Strapp gives strong evidence of their popularity. Next Saturday evening on their return home the employes of the Aluminum Press and Plate Works, where Mr. Strapp holds the position of one of the foremen, will meet at the home of the bride and groom and present them with a handsome chiffonier as an evidence of good will and appreciation.

A DUNELLEN MARRIAGE

MISS LILLIAN STAATS BECOMES THE WIFE OF THOMAS G. ROBINSON

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Oct. 27—One of the most popular and well known young ladies of this borough, Miss Lillian Staats, daughter of ex-Postmaster Peter C. Staats, was married last night to Thomas G. Robinson, of Newark. The ceremony took place at the bride's home on North avenue in the presence of the relatives and near friends of the two parties and was one of the prettiest autumn weddings of the year.

The couple were married at 7 o'clock by Rev. E. S. Jamison, pastor of the Methodist church. The bride and groom stood under a floral bell, in the front of the parlor, and the impressive marriage ceremony of the Methodist church was used. They were united with the ring. After the few brief words which made them one were said, the clergyman stepped aside and the young couple were showered with congratulations and good wishes.

The wedding was noted for its simplicity. The bride and groom were unattended, but her brother, Harry Staats, acted as usher. The bride was attired in a pretty dark blue traveling suit.

The house decorations were very pretty. In the front and back parlors they were green and white while in the dining room pink and green predominated. The table presented an inviting appearance with its snowy cloth and sparkling silver and china. Autumn leaves tastefully arranged added color to the scene.

The bride is one of the best known and best liked young ladies in the borough. She has been employed as assistant in the post office for five years, first with her father for four years, and with the present incumbent one year. The groom is an employee of Backus & Stiles, a large firm of grocers of Newark. Mr. Robinson lived in Plainfield until a couple of years ago, and was employed by R. O. Howell.

The couple were well remembered with presents, most of which were sent to their future home, 281 Belmont avenue, Newark, which is furnished and ready for them when they return from their honeymoon. The groom's employers remembered him in a substantial manner and the members of the "Somerset Club" and the "Diamond Club," of Newark, both of which the groom belongs to, sent something nice. While in Plainfield Mr. Robinson was a member of the fife and drum corps and Guttman's band.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold marquise ring set with diamonds and emeralds. On their return to Newark the couple will be given a reception at the Somerset Club.

After the wedding supper the couple slipped away and drove to Plainfield where they took a train for New York. Today they will go to Philadelphia and spend part of their honeymoon in that city and in Baltimore. Instead of being showered with rice and old shoes on their departure, flowers were thrown at them by the guests.

A PUBLIC DEBATE.

Young People to Discuss a National Problem.

Last week a committee of three from the Plainfield Law Debating Society, Edward Bellis, Hillaire Blatz and William Nash, met a committee from the North Plainfield High School, Miss Crowther, Arthur Smith and Donald McGee, and arranged to hold a public debate on the evening of November 11th in the school house.

The subject of the debate will be "Resolved that the United States should annex the whole of the Philliipine group." There will be ten debaters on a side, and each side will choose one. They have already united in choosing Professor Whiteman, of the school, as the third one.

A Missionary Service.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the First Baptist church will hold a missionary service tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the lecture room of the church. This service will be held under the auspices of the seniors and juniors of the society. At the close of the service a farewell reception will be tendered Miss Julia Shinn, who leaves in a short time for a preparatory school, where she will train for work in the mission fields.

—The case of S. E. Dave, of Lynn, Mass., against Joseph Moon, on a promisory note will come up for trial in Justice Thomas' court Wednesday. Murphy & Blatz represent the plaintiff.

DEMOCRATS MAKING READY FOR A FIGHT.

Party to Be Reorganized in Plainfield Immediately.

FOURTH WARD TAKES LEAD.

COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO UNDERTAKE THE WORK.

Leaders in the Other Wards Will be Interested and a Vigorous Effort Made to Put the Party on a Strong Working Basis—Results of the Primaries Held in the Various Wards.

While the most essential action necessary to be taken at the Democratic primaries last night was the election of delegates to the county convention, being held at Elizabeth this afternoon, the Fourth ward primary took a move that is of greater importance than the transaction of the real business for which the primaries were called. It was the inauguration of a movement for the reorganization of the Democratic party in Plainfield upon a basis that will arouse a greater interest than now prevails in party councils and make the Democrats a power in the local political world.

The subject of reorganizing the party has been quietly discussed among a few of the leaders for the last few days, but nothing definite has been done. Last night M. H. Flynn, who was chairman of the Fourth ward primary, suggested that it was time a step in that direction should be taken. Mr. Flynn suggested that a committee be appointed to confer with like committees from other wards, if appointed last night, to hold an informal meeting within a day or two to decide upon the proper course to pursue. If the other wards did not appoint such committees, then the Fourth ward committee was to take the initiative in the movement and call a meeting of those interested and get the movement underway.

Inasmuch as none but the Fourth ward did take such action, the committee from that ward will now proceed to carry out the ideas of securing a reorganization of the party.

The attendance at the primary in the Third ward last night was encouraging. While it was not as large as it should have been, still it was larger than has been the case in sometime, and shows that there is a good field for the reorganization committee to work upon. Considering the weather the attendance in the other wards was quite good last night. The results were as follows:

FIRST WARD

Notwithstanding the very inclement weather, a large number of voters of the above ward braved the storm and were present last evening at the Democratic primary to elect delegates to the county convention at Elizabeth, that is being held this afternoon. The meeting was called to order by M. J. DeCourcy, who was subsequently made chairman. P. J. McAndrews acted as secretary. The delegates named to represent the ward in the convention were the following: Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, John F. Ammon, John L. Force and Albert Brown. There was no opposition. The delegates will go to the convention unpledged. John Rafferty was elected member of the county executive committee.

SECOND WARD.

The Second ward primary was called to order by James E. Martine at 8 o'clock. Mr. Martine was made chairman and Frank Vosseller secretary. The delegates chosen were William K. McClure and Frank Vosseller. The latter was also elected as a member of the county executive committee. The delegates were not instructed.

THIRD WARD.

There was a great deal of interest manifested at the Third ward primary and a good attendance. E. Birmingham was made chairman, John Moran secretary, J. Hibbits inspector, and George DeRevere judge. The delegates were J. Moran and Frank McInerney, and E. Birmingham was elected to succeed himself as a member of the county executive committee. The delegates were not instructed.

FOURTH WARD.

The Fourth ward primary was held in T. A. B. Hall, and was called to order by M. R. Flynn, who was made chairman. Councilman Elmore D. Moffett was chosen secretary, James Kane judge and Hugh Higgins inspector. The following delegates were nominated and chosen unanimously: E. D. Moffett, Bernard Brady, Clinton Shannon, T. A. McCarty, Michael Higgins and Ira G. Hulbert. Elmore D. Moffett was elected a member of the county executive committee. Fol-

PRETTY HOME WEDDING

NUPTIALS OF SCHOMP-WESTPHAL PERFORMED LAST NIGHT.

House Prettily Decorated for the Occasion—Married Under a Floral Arch —A Bridal Tour to Niagara Falls.

A pretty wedding of last evening was that of Miss Lucy Annie Westphal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Westphal, of 1001 South Second street, to Fred Bloom Schomp, son of Mr. and Mrs Winfield Schomp, of 712 West Front street, which took place at the home of the bride's parents at 7:30 o'clock in the presence of about fifty guests from this city and other nearby points.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and the Episcopal service was used. The bride was gowned in white mousseline de soie over white silk, trimmed with lace and ribbon. She carried a bouquet of bride roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Amy Gee, of Bayonne, who was the bridemaid. Mis Gee wore a gown of white Brussels net over cerise silk, and she carried pink roses. The best man was Albert Schomp, brother of the groom.

The house decorations consisted of chrysanthemums and Japanese by darangeas, and a beautiful arch of cut flowers was arranged in the parlor beneath which the ceremony was performed. The bride was given away in marriage by her father. Miss Mary Graves played the wedding march.

Following the marriage the bride and groom received the hearty congratulations of their relatives and friends present, and were wished long life with success and happiness. A wedding supper was served to the guests during the evening, and about 10 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Schomp left the scene of festivities for a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls. On their return they will reside at the home of the bride's parents for the present. When they left the house last evening they were completely showered with old shoes and rice, and their departure was attended with lots of jollity. The gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Schomp are of a useful as well as ornamental nature, and evidence the high esteem of their many friends.

Mrs. Schomp was for several years the chief operator at the local office of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, where she made warm and personal friends. Mr. Schomp has an exceilent position with William Wilson, the West End grocer.

BUSINESS FAILURE.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Oct. 27.—Wm. H. Turton, under firm name of Turton & Company, came to town about three years ago, buying the business of the late Thomas Cleaver. Business was very good at first, but gradually decreased and this, together with some bad accounts, forced an assignment Tuesday afternoon for the benefit of creditors, one of the heaviest of whom is the First National Bank of Plainfield. He has named Asa Randolph, of Plainfield, as assignee. Mr. Turton hopes to be able to pay dollar for dollar.

DEMOCRATS IN THE RAIN.

BIG DEMONSTRATION IN SOMERVILLE LAST NIGHT.

Despite the Bad Weather Somerset County Democrats Greeted Candidate Crane, Who Made His Best Speech.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, October 27—About 1,000 Democrats of Somerset county turned out last night in a torrent of rain and gave royal welcome to Elvin W. Crane, their candidate for Governor.

Mr. Crane and his party of campaigners were taken in hand by the local county committee, who assembled at the Somerset House. There was a banquet, and among those who partook beside Mr. Crane were C. Meyer Zulick, J. G. Bartine, ex-Senator W. J. Keys, ex-Congressman Alva H. A. Clark, ex Speaker James J. Bergen, and Patrick Convery, Democratic candidate for Congress in the district.

The rain fell heavily all the time, but it did not prevent a parade of several hundred men, headed by two bands, from following behind the carriage in which Mr. Crane was taken to the meeting hall. Along the route to Germania Hall the people cheered the Democratic candidate in a most hearty manner, and at various points fireworks were set off. More than 1,000 men crowded into the body of the hall.

Ex-Senator Keys presided, and the appearance of the candidate was the signal for a great outburst of cheers. Mr. Crane made the best speech he has yet delivered. Judge Bartine, James J. Bergen, ex-Congressman Clark, and Candidate Convery also spoke.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

DISTRICT CONVENTION TO BE HELD IN WESTFIELD TOMORROW.

A Number of Plainfielders Will Take an Active Part in the Exercises—Three Sessions Will be Held There

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, October 27.—The third annual convention of the Elizabeth district Epworth League will take place in the Methodist church, tomorrow, and the indications point to a large attendance. The morning session begins at 10 o'clock when devotional exercises will be conducted by Rev. G. W. Smith, D. D., of Plainfield. Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the church, will deliver the address, welcoming the delegates, and Rev. J. B. J. Rhoades, of Denville, the acting president, will give the response.

After lunch has been served by the Westfield League the afternoon session will begin at 2 o'clock. Frank E. Binns, of Elizabeth, will lead the song service, and Harry McGee, of Plainfield, will conduct the devotional exercises. Miss Clementine Yates, of Plainfield, will conduct the parliamentery drill, and Mrs. E. S. A. Barkelew, of East Orange, will deliver a talk on "Systematic Giving."

The evening session will be held at 7:30 and a song service will precede it, led by C. N. Elorham, of Westfield. W. H. Davies, of Westfield, will conduct the devotional exercises. The principle address of the evening will be delivered by Rev. Stephen J. Herden, associate editor of The Christian Advocate. Mrs. G. W. Gardner, of Plainfield, will render a vocal solo, and there will be music by the Westfield League orchestra. After the meeting there will be a short devotional meeting led by Edgar B. Moore, of Elizabeth, and it is desired that all who can will attend.

ANOTHER NEW CHURCH.

A Second Church of Christ Will Probably be Organized.

It is quite likely that a Second Church of Christ will be organized tomorrow evening at the home of Henry VanMiddlesworth, of Elmwood place. A meeting of those who have left the First Church of Christ was held a few days ago in the vacant house opposite the Armour Beef Company's building on East Third street. At that time B. W. Hand was elected celebrant of the Lord's Table; W. Keeyer was elected treasurer, and Henry VanMiddlesworth was made secretary. The new organization will start with a goodly number of members and for the present meetings will be held at the home of the members.

NO FRICTION WITH COUNTY DEMOCRATS.

Strange Contrast in Two Conventions at Elizabeth.

ALL SEEMS TO BE HARMONY.

SEVERAL NAMES MENTIONED AS POSSIBLE CANDIDATES.

Frederick C Marsh, Alderman Ford and P. J. Ryan Talked of for Senatorial Nominees—Westfield Man May be Named as One of the Assemblymen—Candidate Crane Will Speak.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Oct. 27—The incidents leading up to the Democratic convention, which is to be held in this city this afternoon, are in strange contrast to those of the Republican. While the Republicans are fighting bitterly among themselves as to who is going to secure the Senatorial nomination, the Democrats seem to be pursuing the even tenor of their way in a remarkable manner.

The usual number of prominent county Democrats are about the hotels, county buildings and other public places discussing the probable action of the convention. There is no certainty as this despatch is written as to just who will secure the various nominations that are to be made.

It is hinted that Senator Smith would like to see either former Prosecutor Frederick C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, or Alderman George A. Ford, also of this city, named to make the fight for Foster Voorhees' seat in the upper house of the Legislature. Patrick J. Ryan, president of the Common Council, is also mentioned, and a number of the Elizabeth leaders would like to see him put up, but Mr. Ryan says that he does not want it. Mr. Ryan is especially popular in this city, where he was elected president of the Board of Alderman when the Democratic candidate for Mayor was defeated.

Mr. Marsh is, of course, well-known throughout the county, but the fact that he has been defeated two or three times for public office and that there are even Democrats with whom he is not popular, may prevent his nomination.

Elizabeth will secure two of the Assembly nominations, with one for some other section of the county. Freeholder Mulford Scudder and Town Clerk Irving Roes, of Westfield, are both mentioned for the nomination that will go outside of Elizabeth.

The convention will be called to order by John H. Crowell, chairman of the county executive committee.

Candidate Crane is expected to arrive on the scene after the business of the convention is over and deliver a speech. Col. Snyder, candidate for Congress, will also be present to address the delegates and others who congregate in the Star Theatre, where the convention is to be held.

Although Former Judge W. A. Coddington had been mentioned as a possible aspirant for the Senatorial candidacy, Mr. Coddington stated today that he was not and had not been a candidate.

ELECTED THEIR OFFICERS.

Women's Christian Work Society of Seventh-Day Baptists Choose Leaders.

The annual meeting of the Women's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, was held yesterday afternoon. The officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. George H. Babcock; vice-president, Mrs. A. E. Main; recording secretary, Mrs. A. T. Maxson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Nathan Randolph; treasurer, Mrs. F. A. Dunham.

A nominating committee, consisting of Mrs. A. L. Titsworth, Mrs. I. N. VanSickle and Mrs. H. M. Maxson, was appointed to appoint the committees and this committee will make its report at a meeting to be held next Wednesday. The society talked over some plans for the winter and then adjourned until next week.

For Mission Workers.

Tomorrow evening in the Crescent Avenue church there will be an important meeting of the young people's missionary societies of the First Presbyterian and Crescent Avenue churches. An address will be delivered by Edward F. Reimer, of Princeton Seminary, who is a member of the student volunteer movement for foreign missions, and at one time a leader of the college volunteer band. The address will be followed by a very practical conference with the missionary committees and those interested. At this conference the work of the committees will be thoroughly outlined. Suggestions will be given in detail and the committees will be told what to do and how to do it. A cordial invitation is extended to all interested.

Some cough mixtures smother the cough. But the next breeze fans it into life again.

Better put the cough out.

That is, better go deeper and smother the fires of inflammation. Troches cannot do this. Neither can plain cod-liver oil.

But Scott's Emulsion can. The glycerine soothes and makes comfortable; the hypophosphites give power and stability to the nerves; and the oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues.

The Carter Court Martial.

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 27.—It is stated here on what seems to be good authority that the long trial of Captain Oberlin M. Carter of the United States engineers will come to nothing, and that the whole ground may have to be gone over again.

It is an open secret that the papers in the case have recently been reviewed by ex-Senator George F. Edmunds, whose findings have been transmitted to the president.

It is said that he concludes that the court martial went beyond its authority in taking evidence, and that its whole proceedings were void from a strictly legal point of view.

It will be recalled that Captain Carter's private correspondence was seized and parts of it put in evidence, the judge advocate claiming that when a man became a soldier of the United States he no longer had private rights which were paramount.

According to Senator Edmund's alleged view this finding of the court martial has no standing in law.

Whether the president will accept this view remains to be seen.

The knowing ones say that he will, and that a new case will be made against Carter on the ground that his river and harbor works were fraudulent and wasteful of the federal funds intrusted to him.

Capt. D. M. Peixotto's Death

Washington, Oct. 27.—Details of the death at Guantanamo of Captain D. M. Peixotto, formerly an officer of the seventh regiment of the New York National Guard, who went to Cuba with the Fourth Immunes, have been received at the war department in a telegram from that place.

The dispatch is signed "John D. Twiggs, Jr., Captain Commanding," and says:

"Captain Peixotto was taken sick on October 20, with a typical case of yellow fever and died in a comatose condition on October 24 at 4 p. m. He was partially conscious on the morning of the 24th, but after 10 a. m. became rapidly worse."

Serious Fire at Vancouver.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 27.—The Hastings saw mill was burned yesterday and two hundred and fifty men are out of employment.

This mill was one of the most complete on the Pacific coast, having a capacity of three hundred thousand feet every twenty-four hours, or ninety million feet per annum.

Very valuable machinery was all destroyed, as well as the wharf and the company's mill.

The owners are the Royal City Planing Mill Company, and the loss will amount to several hundred thousand dollars.

Encouraging Report.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 27.—The reports for the year made to State Factory Inspector Leary by his deputies throughout this state show that fifty-two thousand more persons have been employed in the manufactories of this state this year than during 1897.

This is exclusive of the firms which have resumed business with their old forces of employes, and also of those firms which have resumed running on full time after curtailment.

CRISIS IN PEACE WORK

Commissioners Hold a Very Brief Joint Session.

QUESTION OF CUBAN DEBT

Spaniards Say Our Government Mistakes Their Designs. The Commissioners Keep Their Designs Closely Guarded. Will Meet Again at Two O'clock Today.

Paris, Oct. 27.—The joint peace commission met at four o'clock yesterday afternoon and adjourned at 5.15.

The commissioners refused all information regarding the proceedings of the meeting.

Judge Day gave out that he could only say that the commission had adjourned until two o'clock to-day. The correspondent is informed, however, from a good source, that the brevity of the adjournment is indicative of the fact that a serious crisis has arisen. The informant said that it would be a mistake, however, to take an alarmist view of the situation.

The Spanish commissioners left the meeting room at 5.30 o'clock. One of them said that the Spaniards had given the Americans some information respecting the Cuban debt which the latter would consider by the time set for the meeting of the commission today.

It is learned from a good source that the Spaniards think the American government is under a misapprehension respecting Spain's policy.

The Washington government thinks that the government at Madrid wants to dilly daily to gain time, whereas all that the Spanish government desires is to obtain sufficient concessions after the war to enable her to live honestly and pay her debts.

The Spanish commissioners, this informant says, have come to Paris to make a treaty of peace enabling Spain to remain a nation. They wish to avoid the absolute ruin of the country, hence their pertinacity in contesting vital points.

The Spanish commissioners are not greedy. They are willing to make large sacrifices according to the adage "Vae victis" (woe to the vanquished), but naturally hesitate to sign the country's death warrant.

Madrid, Oct. 27.—The resignation of the captain general of Madrid has been accepted, but the retirement of General Correa from the war office has been postponed.

Lieut. Col. Astor Discharged.

Washington, Oct. 27.—The president has directed that Lieutenant Colonel John Jacob Astor, inspector general; Captain Fred Alger, assistant adjutant general, and Captain James H. McMillan, assistant quartermaster, be honorably discharged from the volunteer service, their services being no longer required.

Lieutenant Colonel Astor and Captain McMillan are ordered to proceed to their homes, and the discharges of all the officers will take effect on November 1.

Captain Alger is the son of the secretary of war and Captain McMillan is the son of Senator McMillan of Michigan.

Autumnal Gales and Snow

St. Joseph, Mich., Oct. 27.—The little schooner Jennie Winters arrived here Wednesday morning and by good seamanship managed to enter the harbor, although the waves rolled clear over her.

The schooner Jud, moored at the government dock, broke away and is now lying across the channel. A section of the pier was torn away by the schooner.

Mackinaw City, Mich., Oct. 27.—The heavy gale shifted to the north yesterday morning and increased in violence. It is accompanied by a heavy fall of snow.

But two boats have passed here in twelve hours—one steamboat up at 1.30 o'clock yesterday morning, and one down at 3 o'clock.

On account of the gale their names could not be learned.

Huntsville, Ala., Oct. 27.—A severe storm is raging here and the temperature is unusually low.

Snow fell here yesterday morning, but it melted as soon as it struck the ground. Later in the morning the snow changed to rain. Snow in Alabama in October is unprecedented.

Sixty Japanese Drowned

London Oct. 27.—A dispatch to Lloyds from Kobe says that the Japanese steamship Miyagala has been sunk in collision and sixty Japanese were drowned.

A later dispatch to Lloyds from Kobe says that the vessel with which the Miyagala was in collision was the Japanese steamship Kinshin.

The Miyagala sank almost immediately, carrying down with her sixty of those on board. All of them were Japanese.

Standard Oil Case

Cleveland, O., Oct. 27.—The taking of testimony in the contempt case against the Standard Oil Company will be resumed in this city in a few days, according to Colonel Allan T. Brinsmade, special commissioner in the case.

The hearing was begun at New York and attracted national attention by reason of the examination of John R. Rockefeller.

Lost 350 Sheep Overboard

Liverpool, Oct. 27.—The steamship Norseman, from Montreal Oct 11 for this port, arrived here yesterday.

She reports having experienced heavy weather, in the course of which she lost three hundred and fifty sheep of her cargo.

PHILADELPHIA JUBILEE

The President and Cabinet Are in Attendance.

RAIN CHANGES THE PLANS

The Distinguished Guests Honored by the Union League Last Night. Vice President Hobart and Gen. Miles Also Attend Peace Jubilee. The Civic Parade Postponed to Friday.

Philadelphia, Oct. 27.—President McKinley and party arrived here at noon yesterday.

The special train bearing the president and party over the Pennsylvania Railroad from Washington was composed of two Pullman parlor cars.

The party comprised the president, Mrs. McKinley, Secretary and Mrs. Alger, Secretary and Miss Wilson, Postmaster General Smith, Solicitor General Richards, Secretary to the President Porter, Private Secretary Cortelyou and Major Hopkins.

They were met at the station by a reception committee and escorted to the Bellevue hotel, which will be the home of the party during their visit here.

Mrs. McKinley and the other ladies were taken in charge by a committee of ladies consisting of Mrs. Cornelius Stevenson, Mrs. Governor Hastings, Mrs. Mayor Warwick, and Miss Annie Thompson, daughter of President Thomson of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Vice President and Mrs. Hobart arrived from Washington a half hour earlier than the president and were escorted to the Hotel Stratford, where quarters had been reserved for them.

General and Mrs. Miles also arrived shortly after noon and were taken to the Hotel Walton.

The president remained in his rooms yesterday afternoon. In the evening he was given a reception at the Union League.

Instead of seeing the city in the midst of the enjoyment of its peace celebration the president found all dreary and desolate, and many thousands of visitors and citziens disappointed on account of the interruption of the jubilee exercises in consequence of the rain storm.

The jubilee programme included the civic parade, the greater portion of which it was expected would be witnessed by the president, General Miles and other distinguished visitors, but it had been declared off.

The rededication of Independence Hall, the exercises in connection with which was to have taken place yesterday morning, was postponed until Friday.

A heavy downpour of rain began soon after five o'clock in the morning and at ten o'clock showed no signs of cessation.

As a result, the peace jubilee committee announced the postponement of the civic day parade until Friday.

The indications are that the weather to-day will be clear and that no postponement of the military parade will be necessary.

He Lacks Backbone

McKeesport, Pa., Oct. 27.—There is a man in the hospital in this city who was caught by a fall of slate in a coal mine up the river more than three months ago.

His back was broken, three ribs were cracked, he had a scalp wound and suffered injuries to his arms and legs.

His name is Patrick Knee. He is about fifty years of age. He is possessed of wonderful vitality, as his being game to-day demonstrates. When admitted to the hospital his death was considered a question of a short time.

Dr. Thomas F. Nason was placed in charge of the case. The lower part of Knee's body was completely paralyzed by his injury. The doctor made an attempt to save Knee's life, and an operation was performed. A section of the bones of the back which were broken and pressed against the spinal cord, was removed, and after the operation to the surprise of everybody, the patient began to grow strong and regain his vigor.

Unusual interest was taken in the case because it was a very rare one. Knee is now able to get up. He cannot stand alone as yet, but sits in a wheeled chair and can wheel himself about.

Dr. Nason says it is one of the very few cases on record of recovery from a broken back.

The doctor feels confident Knee will be able to be around again in the course of a short time.

Bureau of American Republics.

Washington, Oct. 27.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the International Union of American Republics here yesterday the term of the provisional director, Frederic Emory, which would have expired on November 1, was indefinitely continued by a unanimous vote.

It is understood that the present management will continue as long as the interests of the bureau seem to require.

The condition of the bureau was pronounced satisfactory and its recent progress warmly approved.

The Paris Sailed Today

New York, Oct. 27.—The American liner Paris, better known during the Spanish war as the auxiliary cruiser Yale, resumed her place as a merchantman when she sailed at ten o'clock yesterday morning for Southampton. Since the expiration of the government charter the Paris has been thoroughly overhauled and painted both inside and out.

The big liner is now practically a new vessel. Captain Watkins being at the present time off on his vacation, the Paris was taken to sea by Captain F. M. Passow of the New York.

State Baptists Convene.

Oneonta, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Two hundred representative clergymen and many prominent members of the Baptist laity are gathered here to attend the New York state Baptist convention. Yesterday's sessions were devoted to a pastors' conference.

Grace Whitely, Grace Lorning and Grace Downlake were known far and wide as the "Three Graces." Grace by name, and possessing grace of form and manner, there was no stigma in the sobriquet. Another strange coincidence was the fact that they were chums, and lived at 15, 17 and 19 St. Valentine avenue. They belonged to the same "smart" set, and worshipped in the same sanctuary.

One day, recently, Grace Downlake rushed into No. 17 and found her friend Grace Lorning busy over a new recipe for making cake. Miss Lorning had already made several mistakes in compounding the ingredients, and when Miss Downlake bounced into the kitchen with, "Oh, Grace, love, I want you to go right down town with me to look at a new fancy in dress goods!" Miss Lorning threw up her hands in dismay, and exclaimed, "Grace Downlake, you're a mean thing; you've made me spoil this delicious cake—I mean, it would have been delicious—by scaring me into putting in the yolk of an egg in place of a lump of butter!"

It was the end of cake making in that house that day—unless the cook may have plunged the conglomeration into a pan and baked it for the coachman, against whom she had a standing grudge.

Grace Whitely gave me a history of the trip the next day. "Why," she said, "we went to Hahne & Co.'s, Newark. I had no idea that such a splendid assortment of dress fabrics could be found outside of New York. Long after we bought our dresses we lingered in discussing the beautiful display. Hahne's is a lovely place to buy everything." Then she showed me her shopping list, and I give my readers an exact copy of what each girl said of her new suit.

Grace Whitely: "An all-wool camel's hair, fifty inches wide, rough effect, in a lovely cadet blue. I know I'll look stunning in it. I paid only 85 cents a yard."

Grace Lorning: "A suit in bayadere stripe, ruby shade, three-tone effect, and forty-five inches wide. If I don't cut a dash, I'll change my name. The price was low; I paid only 75c a yard."

Grace Downlake: "I think 79c a yard was real low for my duchesse satin. It's all silk, too, and twenty inches wide. It's a perfectly sweet shade of brown. When I get it on, I'll make all the other girls envious."

TROOPS OFF FOR MANILA.

The Transports Indiana and Ohio to Sail To-day to Join Dewey

San Francisco, Oct. 27.—The Indiana will sail for Manila to-day with the First and Second battalions of the Kansas regiment on board.

To-day, also, the First and Third battalions of the First Washington will sail on the Ohio.

Colonel Funstan will be in command of the former expedition, and Colonel Wholley of the latter.

The Fifty-first Iowa has been assigned to the Pennsylvania, which vessel will carry all of the regiment.

The Zealandia will be ready to sail Sunday. To this vessel will be assigned the Third battalion of the Kansas regiment, and possibly a battalion of the Tennessee regiment.

With the departure of the Zealandia and Newport there will be left of the Manila troops only about two hundred men, who will be sent there on a small vessel.

A Hospital Ship from Ponce.

Philadelphia, Oct. 27.—The hospital ship Relief has arrived here from Ponce with two hundred and forty-seven sick soldiers on board. It is expected that the soldiers will not be landed until after the peace celebration now being celebrated is over.

There are ninety men who will have to be carried to the hospital on stretchers and one hundred and fifty-seven who can walk.

But one death took place on the ship during the trip, that of Corporal Fred R. Goodhouse of Company G, Third Wiscon regiment, who died on Monday night of heart disease following typhoid fever.

Among those on board was Lieutenant Colonel R. S. Huidekoper, who has been to Porto Rico as chief surgeon, and who has been charged with being responsible for much of the neglect and consequent disease at Chickamauga.

He says that he will testify before the war inquiry commission and that he will then return to Porto Rico.

Discouraged Gold Hunters

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 27.—The party of prospectors headed by Garden of Fresno and the White party of Michigan, comprising fifty persons, has returned here empty handed over the Edmonton trail from the Peace river country, after having travelled through thirteen hundred miles of rough country and having undergone many hardships.

They prospected twenty-eight creeks and rivers, and more than four hundred miles of territory.

They found evidences of gold everywhere, but not anywhere was the metal in sufficient quantities to pay.

The much boomed Peace river country was disappointing.

Jesse James on Trial.

Kansas ity, Oct. 27.—The trial of Jesse James, son of the noted outlaw, for complicity in the Missouri Pacific train robbery at Leeds, was begun here yesterday.

The day was spent in securing a jury. Prominent lawyers have been retained by both sides, a formidable array of witnesses have been subpoenaed and a hard legal contest is expected.

Young James has borne an excellent reputation. Many of the best men in the city have come out in his defence.

Chief of Police Hayes declares that he has evidence sufficient to convict him.

Eighty-fifth Annual Conclave.

Geneva, N. Y., Oct. 27.—The Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of the state of New York, holding its eighty-fifth annual conclave in this city, conferred a distinguished honor last night upon George Nicholson of Brooklyn, in electing him as right eminent grand commander.

But three times previously has this honor been bestowed upon a resident of Brooklyn within the period of the grand commandery's existence, namely, on the late Robert Black, the late Charles Aikman and ex-Assemblyman John H. Bonnington.

Saved from Lockjaw.

Etna, N. J., Oct. 27.—The life of George Willey of this place has been saved by the use of anti-toxin as a cure for lockjaw. He is now in the Hackensack, N. J., hospital, recovering from an attack of tetanus, which was so severe that all hope of his living was given up, and the serum resorted to as a last chance.

Willey cut his finger about two months ago. In about a week he was taken seriously ill. Antitoxin was injected into his brain.

A Caravan Engulfed.

Salonica, European Turkey, Oct. 27.—Terrific storms have swept over Macedonia, doing an enormous amount of damage and causing considerable loss of life.

In one instance a caravan, consisting of forty-seven persons and one hundred horses, was engulfed in the river Galilee and all of them were drowned.

Another New Star.

Boston, Oct. 27.—A new short-period variable star of the Algol type has been observed.

Its discovery was announced by Edwin F. Sawyer at a meeting of the Boston Scientific Society yesterday evening.

Its variation is less than a day and it is of the seventh magnitude.

Asst. Sec. Allen's Daughter Married.

Lowell, Oct. 27.—Mr. Alexander F. Hobbs, superintendent of the Merrimac Print Works, and Miss Louise Allen, daughter of Charles H. Allen, assistant secretary of the navy, were married at noon yesterday at the Allen mansion on Belfe street. Miss Allen was given away by her father.

The Lasters' Strike Ending

Brockton, Mass., Oct. 27.—It is generally agreed that the lasters' strike in this city and the neighboring towns will not last beyond this week, and that the men will all go back to work next Monday, either at the old prices or a very slight increase.

NO MINISTRY IN FRANCE

President Faure Still Undecided as to M. Brisson's Successor.

SAFEGUARDS AGAINST RIOT

M. Delcasse May Keep the Foreign Portfolio. The Excitement is Still Intense at Many Arrests Are Made by the Police. Rumor That France is About to Withdraw from Fashoda.

Paris, Oct. 27.—President Faure was closeted yesterday with MM. Loubet and Deschanel, discussing the ministerial crisis, and afterward had a long interview with M. Delcasse on the foreign situation.

The president later saw the vice presidents of the senate and the chamber of deputies.

M. Deschanel proposed that M. Dupuy or M. Poincare form a new ministry, while M. Loubet urged that the task be entrusted to M. Constans or M. Bibot.

Many of the conservative and moderate newspapers, though recognizing the fact that General Chanoine infringed upon parliamentary rules in the manner of his resignation, maintain that he acted wisely in withdrawing from the cabinet, which one paper observes "seems desirous of disorganizing the army for the benefit of the revisionists and those without a country."

The Petit Journal, in a report of an interview, represents General Chanoine as explaining that his resignation was due to differences between himself and M. Brisson regarding the case of Colonel Picquart.

All of the troops are confined to their barracks. The activity of the police continues and arrests are being made upon the slightest provocation.

The Matin and the Rappel denounce General Chanoine in the strongest of terms, the Rappel saying that if he had received his desserts last evening he would have been lodged within the walls of Mont Valerien.

The references of the press to Fashoda are very meagre, and attract little notice.

The Dreyfus and Socialist organs openly declare that the action of General Chanoine in resigning in the face of an attempt to uphold the civil power is clear proof of the existence of the reported military conspiracy to seize the government.

The newly named nationalist journals are fairly delirious with joy over the downfall of the ministry. The Libre Parole says: "Treason triumphed for three months, but France took her revenge in a single day."

M. Clemenceau, in the columns of the Aurore, on the other hand, declares that he and his fellow fighters in behalf of truth will be killed before they will give up the struggle. They are more confident than ever of the ultimate result.

London, Oct. 27.—A dispatch to the Central News from Paris says that President Faure will ask M. Delcasse to retain the foreign portfolio in view of the Fashoda difficulty.

The Sirdar in France.

Marseilles, Oct. 27.—General Sir Herbert Kitchener, commander-in-chief of the Anglo-Egyptian forces, and Captain Baratier, the special messenger of Major Marchand, arrived here Wednesday from Cairo and proceeded to Paris at 9 o'clock.

A deputation representing the naval and commercial schools presented to Captain Baratier the insignia of the Legion of Honor set with brilliants.

Just previous to the departure of the train a large deputation of the Marseilles Geographical Society, which had also assembled at the station to honor Captain Baratier, saluted Gen. Kitchener.

M. Delibes, president of the society, addressed the Sirdar, saying that from the point of view of geography and civilization they could not fail to applaud him for his remarkable campaign, and they also desired to thank him for the courtesy which he had extended to Major Marchand.

General Kitchener, in reply, spoke in eulogistic terms of Marchand and his followers.

Marchand to Quit Fashoda.

London, Oct. 27.—It was rumored on the Stock Exchange late yesterday afternoon that France had requested Egypt to conduct Major Marchand and his party down the Nile, in consequence of the sufferings of Marchand and his followers at Fashoda from lack of supplies and the climatic conditions.

Death of Oscar F. Knapp.

Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Oscar F. Knapp, senior member of the firm of Knapp, Peck & Thomson, publishers of the Daily Advertiser, died yesterday morning of pneumonia, in his 80th year.

Mr. Knapp had been connected with the Advertiser office, either as foreman or proprietor, for sixty years. The paper was purchased by him and the late George W. Peck in 1840.

Another New Tobacco Company

Albany, Oct. 27.—The International Tobacco Company of New York city was incorporated yesterday with a capital of $150,000 to deal in leaf tobacco and to manufacture and deal in smoking tobacco and merchandise pertaining to the tobacco business.

The directors are Herman Wasserman, Michael Berger and Joseph H. Harris of New York city and J. Edward Stake of Stapleton.

The Kenmore Cannot be Raised Easily

Suez, Oct. 27.—The British steamship Kenmore, from New York September 30 for Japan, which sank at her moorings at this port yesterday, has been examined by divers.

Her forward compartment is full of water and it will be necessary to discharge the cargo in her forehold in order to float and repair her.

Kang Yu Wei in Japan.

Yokohama, Oct. 27.—Kang Yu Wei, the Cantonese reformer, who recently fled from Pekin to escape arrest, has arrived at Kobe on his way to Tokio.

SEIZED BY THE SPANISH.

The American Bark Saranac Mutilated at Iloilo

New York, Oct. 27.—The bark Saranac, which arrived here yesterday from Iloilo, with a cargo of sugar, was seized by the Spanish authorities there on April 26, a few days after the declaration of war between the United States and Spain.

The vessel arrived at Iloilo on April 26 from Newcastle, N. S. W., with a cargo of coal consigned to a British merchant at that port.

The Saranac flew the Stars and Stripes on entering the harbor and was promptly seized by the Spanish authorities.

Captain Bartaby, to his great surprise, was then informed of the outbreak of hostilities. A guard was put on board the vessel for nearly 20 days, when she was finally released.

During the period of her capture the Spanish guards did much to the vessel, cutting away and damaging her upper spars, sails and rigging.

Captain Bartaby said: "I could have avoided the capture of the Saranac had I known she had been sold in New York to go under the British flag while I was on the voyage from Newcastle."

The War Bond Issue.

Washington, Oct. 27.—The treasury department has practically completed the issue of the $200,000,000 of three per cent. bonds authorized at the last session of Congress, and the last of the temporary force of clerks appointed for duty in that connection will be dismissed next Saturday.

Whatever else remains to be done will be handled by the permanent treasury force.

The highest allotment of bonds to any one subscriber will be $4,480.

Subscribers for $4,500 will receive $1,300 each, and possibly a few hundred dollars in addition. The amount, however, will depend upon the result of a suit now pending to compel the secretary to issue to subscribers about $500,000 on subscriptions rejected by the department on the ground that they were irregular.

Quiet Prevails in Manila.

Washington, Oct. 27.—The following cable message was received yesterday from Manila:

Manila, Oct. 26.

To Adjutant General, Washington:

Transport City of Para leaves today for San Francisco via Nagasaki; large mail. Major Whipple, pay; Lieutenant Williams, ordnance, on board. Transports Scandia and Condor still in port. Scandia probably leaves within ten days for San Francisco. Can be utilized for freight purposes. Quiet here, and conditions believed to be improving.

High Prices for Hereford Cattle

Kansas City, Oct. 27.—Stock breeders from every section of the country are attending Armour's sale of Hereford cattle, which is in progress at the Kansas City stock yards.

Fifty head were disposed of at the opening day's sale, and big prices were realized, the average being $414.50 per head.

Some of the notable sales were: True Lass, an imported cow, about three years old, for $1,025; Christmas Rose, an imported cow, about four years old, $1,000; and Kansas Lad, a bull, calved May 10, 1897, $1,000.

Emperor William in Palestine

Haifa, Palestine, Oct. 27.—The Emperor and Empress of Germany arrived here at noon Tuesday and landed during the afternoon. The town was decorated profusely, every house flying German and Turkish flags.

Turkish troops lined the streets and the band of a cavalry regiment played the German anthem as the emperor and empress landed.

After landing, the emperor and empress entered carriages and were driven direct to Mount Carmel, at the foot of which a German-American mission colony is situated.

Seven Thousand Hats.

New York, Oct. 27.—Cases containing seven thousand hats for the police force have been delivered at police headquarters. Not one of these hats contained the union label.

In past years all the police hats were union made. This year the police board gave the contract for the helmets to Spellman, a Tammany man.

Spellman offered to make the hats for ten cents apiece less than was paid in previous years. He did it, but he had the hats made in Connecticut, in non-union shops.

Englishmen Attacked in Pekin

London, Oct. 27.—A dispatch from Pekin to the Central News says that there is a great increase of anti-foreign feeling there, especially against the English.

An attack was made on Sunday upon a party of English railway engineers and native workmen by Chinese soldiers, which resulted in the serious injury of two Englishmen and the death of a Chinese workman.

The whereabouts of eight of the engineers is unknown.

Money Leaving Paris

London, Oct. 27.—The sensational feature of yesterday's markets was the flight of capital from Paris. French exchange on London is up to 25 francs 43 centimes, or ten centimes above the gold export point, showing the rush of money from Paris to London.

It is stated that Russia is withdrawing large sums from France and transferring them to London.

COMING EVENTS.

October 30—I. R. Mount, of New York city, will give an illustrated talk on bicycles at the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4:15 p. m.
October 31—J. Williams Macy in Y. M. C. A. Star Course.

Democrats to Change Their Ways.

In its present unorganized condition the Democratic party in Plainfield can scarcely be called a factor in local politics, but if the movement inaugurated in the Fourth ward last night is carried out to a successful end the Democrats will cut considerable more of a figure than they have in the past few years.

From a Republican standpoint nothing suits that party better than the innocuous desuetude of the Democrats in Plainfield, because it has afforded the G. O. P. an almost uninterrupted political sway in local affairs. But from a Democratic view it has been a cause of regret and criticism for a long time. The Democrats are awakening, however, from their lethargy and will soon be bestirring themselves in a way that will portend serious things for the continued influence of the Republicans in this city.

It is the purpose of the committee, appointed in the Fourth ward primary last night, to arrange a conference with representative Democrats from all the wards within a few days, and while the interest in the State and county campaign is at its height to organize the party on a firmer and more effective footing than now exists. Once this movement is inaugurated and a number of the energetic Democrats interested, it will receive an impetus that will soon accomplish a wonderful rehabilitation of the party machinery.

In Plainfield the city campaign will follow the State election immediately and with the Democrats active and enthused in their own party interests the result will probably be a strong Democratic municipal ticket put in the field. The Democrats consider that the time is ripe to show themselves in a forcible front, and through a city organization they hope to do so.

By the retirement of Rev. Dr. Evarard Kempshall as minister of the First Presbyterian church in Elizabeth, and his announced determination of living in quietude hereafter, one of the most conspicuous clergyman of New Jersey is removed from the field of activity in church affairs. For years Dr. Kempshall has been one of the forcible men of the pulpit in this State. To him as much as any other man belongs the credit of inaugurating the crusade against the disgraceful racing practices of a few years ago in New Jersey. Though not as sensational in his preaching or efforts for the improvement of public weal as Dr. Parkhurst, Dr. Kempshall combines all the earnest combativeness and intelligence of the world-famed divine, and his fight against the vice and gambling that the race tracks brought to New Jersey he was equally as successful as Dr. Parkhurst was in prosecuting the crusade in New York a few years ago.

The Board of Freeholders of Middlesex county yesterday did a commendable thing when they purchased the one remaining toll road in that county, and will abolish the toll gates of ye olden days. The turnpike ran from New Brunswick to Old Bridge, and was owned by the East New Brunswick and New Brunswick Turnpike Company, who some time ago held the road at $11,500, but finally consented to sell it to the county for $3,000. The turnpike had been in bad condition for ten years, and the farmers who were compelled to use it thought it a great imposition that they should have to pay toll to drive over it. The county will improve the road.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER.

John D. Rockefeller, the great Standard Oil magnate, is said to be a hard man to interrogate when he doesn't want to talk. His course on the witness stand in New York during the inquiry to determine if he and his associates are in contempt of court in Ohio did not damage his reputation in this direction.

Elvin W. Crane, the Democratic nominee, will devote today to Union county, speaking at the county convention at Elizabeth this afternoon and appearing at Bayonne and then at Jersey City, Hudson county, in the evening. He will then take the "owl" train to reach Gloucester county early tomorrow morning. Candidate Voorhees and his campaigners will devote today and tonight to Essex county, where he will address several meetings.

The Mayor's office in the borough is now designated by gold lettering on the front window, which can easily be read from the street.—News.

The above item appeared in the News of last evening and is certainly up-to date. The sign spoken of was placed on the window very soon after Mayor Wilson took possession of his office last summer, and, besides, there is only one window in the Mayor's office.

Foster Voorhees has always been a great favorite with the Plainfield Republicans and when he appears here for a speech November 3d, his friends can be expected to give him a great welcome. The meeting will be held in Music Hall and the Republicans will make it the occasion for the expression of all the enthusiasm that they can get together and give vent to at one time.

In reorganizizing the Democratic party in Plainfield and putting it upon a strong footing, a vast amount of energy and perseverance will be required. But there are plenty of Democrats in Plainfield who are still unterrified, and they will do their best to secure an effective party organization.

A tart definition of a diplomat is a person who can successfully substitute a lot of misfit information for the real fact. We wonder if Mr. Biker, of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, would not come under this head.

It has been rumored that Charles Burnett of the Third Ward is a possible candidate for the Mayoralty this year. It is said that he will run on the citizen's ticket.

The Sun heads a report of New York's Republican Gubernatorial candidate's campaign touring, "Roosevelt Up the River." What river? The Salt?

A bright newspaper paragraph defines a Congressman to be a contributor who gets all the space he wants in the Congressional Record.

The political eyes of the State are on Elizabeth today.

Mr. Ackerman's friends are on the anxious seat.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The Rev. J. M. Joyner, pastor of the Second Baptist church, in Roselle is the possessor of a peculiar freak of nature. It is a mouse, which he caught with four others in a trap on last Friday. The little animal was found to have forty perfect toes, there being ten on each foot. It is, with this exception, an ordinary every-day mouse.

A Flourishing Report.

The Disciples of Christ have just concluded their annual convention at Chattanooga, and the following monies was reported as raised by the National, State and District societies: Foreign Christian Missionary Society, $130,925.70; Christian Woman's Board of Missions, $68,235.87; American Christian Missionary Society, $41,345.67; Church Extension Society, $22,637.59; Ministerial relief, $4,455 84; State and district societies, $158,862.03; total, $426,463.60.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The musical farce comedy, "McFadden's Row of Flats," will be seen here Saturday night at the Stillman Music Hall. The theme of the play was taken from the caricatures of the newspaper artist, R. F. Outcault, and the dramatization made by that able journalist, E. W. Townsend, widely known as the creator of the world famed "Chimmie Fadden," whose doings and sayings have been one of the greatest attractions of the press of New York for the past few years. The play will introduce all the characters known to the readers of these sketches, especially that funniest creature of the generation "The Yellow Kid," whose pranks and precocity have been the delight of both old and young.

Don't miss a good thing, but see "The Sleeping City" which is coming soon. It is a great play, replete with original humor, and powerful situations, and the act endings never fail to win vociferous applause. The company is first class in every particular. Elaborate scenic effects give the proper mounting. Bright specialties are introduced and add to the enjoyment of this popular play.

Francis Wilson's impersonation of Napoleon in "The Little Corporal," which is now entering on its sixth week at the Broadway Theatre, New York, is another triumph for Mr. Wilson to add to his long list. In stature and facial make-up the comedian strongly resembles the great general, and when to this is added the well known military garb of Napoleon, his mannerisms, and peculiar style of speaking, the likeness which Mr. Wilson gives of him is remarkable and interesting. There are upward of a dozen fetching songs in "The Little Corporal" and they are without exception, really good, and of a character that will last. The music that Mr. Englander has written for them is above the average. Sometimes this music closely approaches that of grand opera in method and treatment, but the composer has not lost sight of his theme, and the result is an opera that has merits which few of those written for lovers of lighter music possess.

Cut by a Barrel.

This morning while David Angerbauer, bartender at John Rafferty's saloon, was lifting a barrel of whiskey, the barrel slipped and one end of it fell on his right hand with the result of bruising and cutting his hand severely. The injuries were properly treated and Mr. Angerbauer is able to use the hand a little.

PARTNERSHIP INSURANCE.

Hahne & Company Members Insured for a Total of $400,000.

One of the largest transactions ever consummated in Life Insurance in the United States, and undoubtedly the largest credited to the State of New Jersey, was closed last week by The Prudential Insurance Company of America. It was in the shape of an issuance of $400,000 of partnership insurance in favor of four members of the firm of Hahne & Co., proprietors of the Newark department store. The first annual premium of over $13 000 has just been paid and the policies have been delivered.

The persons insured are August Hahne, Albert J. Hahne, Richard Hahne and William H. Kellner, each taking a policy of $100,000 and making the same payable to the firm so that in the event of the death of any one of them, the surviving members will receive from The Prudential $100,000 in cash.

This plan of partnership insurance, according to The Prudential, is growing more popular among business men every day, and this movement on the part of Hahne & Company is a striking example of how an up-to-date firm can protect vast interest in the event of their being assailed by death.

Mr. Marx's New Work.

The Record, a paper published in the interests of the Berkshire Industrial Farm, has the following item in its issue of this month:

It is with great pleasure that we announce that there is to be added to our force of workers George E. Marx, of Plainfield, N. J. A number of years ago Mr. Marx, then known as "Brother Ernest," was an important factor at the B. I. F. Since that time he has spent some time in an institution in the south, and of late has been engaged in work for 4 boys club. We are sure he will be a strong man in the work here. He will bring his wife and two children, and will probably have a room in the Grange cottage.

Take Life Quietly.

The life of a girl in this latter end of the nineteenth century differs considerably from her predecessors of a past age. She enjoys a liberty, both social and domestic, wholly undreamt of by her grandparents, while in a thousand and one ways she possesses an advantage over even her mother's generation.

But the alterations in girl life have changed the home life too, and though the first in many ways is a good thing, the latter is wholly to be deplored. The characteristics of the day have bred the fever of unrest, in the train of which the demon of discontent has entered into the hallowed confines of the home, rendering it to the up-to-date daughter a veritable prison.

Hurry and excitement are the dominant features that characterize the girl of the period; she never has time for anything—little duties are forgotten, little brothers and sisters overlooked, while her mother is worried to death by her nervous, irritable temper. She cannot take life quietly, but rushes up and down stairs as if pursued by a legion of horrors, and knocks at the door and pulls the bell with force enough to rouse the road. Everything belonging to her is chaotic, and her memory is so treacherous that other people are continually blamed for both her omissions and commissions. In short, she is simply a quivering bundle of nerves, and will speedily develop into a fretful woman, dreaded by society at large, and a source of trial to those belonging to her.

My dear girls, will you not take a quiet time and think whether such is likely to be your fate? Perhaps as yet you cannot realize the necessity for taking life quietly and easily, but, believe me, unless you do, the day will surely come when you would willingly sacrifice anything to secure a "real rest." You cannot have and be everything; and all the rush and hurry in the world will only hinder you from achieving even the lowliest ambition.

Try and be quiet, set aside some of those countless engagements that occupy such a large portion of your time, and go into the nursery and study the beauties of child-life; go into the kitchen and learn the ropes of domesticity and culinary art, to fit you for the sacred office of wife; and then, when you emerge from girlhood to woman's estate, you will be fitted to guide the mechanism of a home of your whom self is the supreme ruler of her life and actions. He wants to come home to the loving ministrations of a pair of unselfish hands, who will have his slippers warmed and a cosy chair waiting in readiness for him, while her ears are ever ready to listen to the confidences of the day; and her lips, though sealed as to her own domestic worries, will utter loving, sympathizing words to smooth away all the jarring elements of business.

Such is what every man expects to find in "the one woman," and the girl who would fit herself for the position of wife and mother, must escape from the hurry and excitement of the age, and by taking things quietly, conquer and subjugate self.

New Long Cloaks.

The new long dust-cloaks and redingotes—riding-coats being their original name—are either elaborate or of useful character. For instance, those of figured silk, lined with plain silk, repeating one of the colors on the patterned fabric, and decorated with lace and ribbon, are in one sense more for ornament than use, though they serve to protect the dress beneath. Oftener than not the gown that is thus covered is not designed for view, and is only an excuse for wearing the over-garment, which is, indeed, the piece de resistance of the toilet. The more useful dust cloaks of mohair or even of tussore, in the peculiar creamy brown of the material, trimmed with the popular cloaking lace of the season, are pretty enough to satisfy the most exacting; and the surface of either of these materials is eminently calculated to resist dust. The autumn models are cut with fitted princesse backs and semi-fitting fronts, some of which fasten from throat to skirt hem, others in true redingote fashion, being open to show a portion of the dress beneath.

Handy Steamer Bag.

A steamer bag which was much appreciated by its recipient last summer is simply a rather deep bag of art denim provided with double shirstrings. An embroidered scroll across one side held its designation "For the deck," and when received it held a little Japanese hot-box with a bundle of fuses, a late novel, and a tourist's notebook. Hung on the corner of the steamer-chair for the voyage over and back, it was invaluable as a catch-all for eye-glasses, a newspaper, knitting-work, or what not that otherwise would be slipping about. Through much jaunting ashore the same bag continued its useful offices. So many words over so simple a thing are permissible only to accentuate the fact that it is not the elaborate, many-pocketed, ornamental, and often expensive bag or case that gives the greatest service.

When the holland shades have passed their usefulness as such, they may be denuded of sticks, fringes, and fixtures, and boiled thoroughly to take out the stiffening. After they are reduced to a state of pliability, dried, and ironed, they serve a variety of uses They make, among other things, the best of cleaning, washing, and dusting cloths.

Two or three drops of oil of peppermint mixed with an equal amount of suet, and rubbed over a baby's chest, will give almost instant relief in case of a cold on the lungs, or a cough.

Handsome Street Gown.

It would be hard to enumerate half of the coat and jacket effects which the couturieres are showing. Jacket and coat gowns are extremely modish for fall and winter and are the safest models to choose for gowns that one wishes to wear without a wrap.

A chic costume is made of a tobacco brown rough cloth. The jacket is tight fitting slashed in front with the belt carried through the slashing and fastened in the center of the front. The jacket is lined throughout with satin. It is fastened slightly to one side of the front with fancy buttons and the revers and collar are faced with satin and embroidered in black and silver.

Use Both Hands.

Children should be taught to use both hands; they will find the knowledge useful in after life. Writers' cramp is a thing which can only be cured by rest; the man or woman who must sit down and write for eight or more hours a day, is bound to suffer sooner or later, unless unusually strong. We have muscular bands and nervous connections which are liable to be overstrained and worn out. If a wire used by a telegraph operator gets out of order, he sends his messages over another wire; if the owner of a few horses rides one till he can do no more work, he gives him a rest for a while.

Just so—if a man suffering from cramp in the hand and arm wants to get cured, he must rest. To think of effecting a cure by liniments is nonsense. Nature, and Nature alone, aided perhaps by bathing with cold water, which acts as a tonic, can restore a cramped or tired arm.

Why should not people who have a great deal of writing to do learn to write with both hands? Then, when one needs a rest, the other can go on duty. We shudder and pity a person if we see him using a knife or pair of scissors with the left hand, but we really ought to envy him and strive to do likewise, but at the same time not allow the right hand to get out of practice.

About Babies.

In Ireland a belt of woman's hair is placed about a child to keep harm away.

Garlic, salt, bread and steak are put into the cradle of a new-born baby in Holland.

Roumanian mothers tie red ribbons around the ankles of their children to preserve them from harm, whilst Welsh mothers put a pair of tongs or a knife in the cradle to ensure the safety of their children. This custom is also extant in some parts of England.

In the Vosges, peasant children born at the new moon are supposed to have tongues better hung than others, while those born at the last quarter are supposed to have less tongue but better reasoning powers. A daughter born during the waning moon is always precocious.

At the birth of a child in Lower Brittany the neighboring women take it in charge, wash it, crack its joints, and rub its head with oil to solder the cranium bones. It is then wrapped in a tight bundle, and its lips are anointed with brandy to make it a full Breton.

The Grecian mother, before putting her child in its cradle, turns three times around before the fire whilst singing her favorite song to ward off evil spirits.

The Turkish mother loads her child with amulets as soon as it is born, and a small bit of mud, steeped in hot water prepared by previous charms, is stuck on its forehead.

In Spain the infant's face is swept with a pine-tree bough to bring it good luck.

Queen Wilhemina.

Queen Wilhemina of Holland is a pretty girl with almost golden hair, blue eyes, an oval face, and a bright complexion. She is remarkable for her intelligent and frank expression. She is rather above the middle height, and has a pretty figure. On those occasions when she is seen in public it is always noticed how devoted she is to her mother, and how deferential she is to her, quite sinking the queen in the daughter in her relations towards her parent.

People We Know.

They are Plainfield People and What They Say is of Local Interest.

When an incident like the following occurs right here at home it is bound to carry weight with our readers. When so many strange occurrences go the rounds of the press; are published as facts; when the intelligent reader knows they cannot be true, there is no wonder that people become skeptical. On one subject skepticism is rapidly disappearing. This is due to the actual personal experience of our citizens and their public utterances regarding them. The doubter must doubt no more in the face of such evidence as this. The public statement of a reputable citizen, living right here at home one whom you can see every day, leaves no ground for the skeptic to stand on.

Mrs. Wm. H. Ludlow, of 98 Jackson avenue, says:— "I was troubled with systoms of kidney complaint such as backache and a sort of dull pain across my loins for several years. If I sat for any lenght of time and attempted to rise I had a sharp pain in the kidneys. Walking any distance or much standing aggravated the difficulty. I could not rest well at night from the fact that I had to be constantly changing about from one position to another trying to free myself from the pain. I used quite a number of remedies but got no permanent relief. I was prevailed upon to get Doan's Kidney Pills from L. W. Randolph's drug store. In justice to them I must say that they did me a great deal of good. It is seldom that I feel any pain in my back and when I do a few doses of this remedy never fails to relieve me. I know others who have used Doan's Kidney Pills with equally good results. From my experience I can honestly reccommend them to all who suffer from kidney troubles."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents per box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

XAVERIAN BROTHERS

THEIR PROMINENCE IN THE FIELD OF EDUCATION.

Sketch of the Order—Their Work in the United States—Habit Worn by the Brothers—The Life They Lead. Results of Their Teaching.

In recent years the Xaverian Brothers have become prominent as successful educators of boys and young men. They form one of the religious orders of laymen who devote themselves exclusively to education. The order was founded by Theodore James Ryken M. Bruges, and was approved by Pope Gregory XVI. The founder assumed the name of Brother Francis Xavier. The habit which was adopted by the pioneers of the order and which is still used is a simple black cassock with white collar and belt. Among the first members of the order to make their vows was Brother Alexius, provincial of the order in the United States.

The order was introduced into the United States in 1854, when Bishop Spalding of Louisville secured a colony to work in his diocese. The fruits of their labors in that city are plentiful. Successful business men and numbers of prominent professional men received their collegiate course from the Xaverian Brothers. When Bishop Spalding became archbishop of New York, he secured the valuable services of the brothers for his new field of labor. Baltimore, with reason, now prides herself upon St. Mary's Industrial school, the most efficient institution of its kind in the country. St. James' Home For Working Boys is also under the charge of the brothers. The same order opened a magnificent college on the Frederick road, known as Mount St. Joseph's college, which for commodious buildings, charming surrounding scenery, magnificent grounds and a through course of studies is not excelled.

At the request of different bishops, the Brothers founded schools in Richmond, Va., Lowell and Lawrence, Mass. The normal school where the Brothers undergo a special course preparatory for their work is at Danvers, Mass. The last school opened by the Brothers was at Wheeling. The Right Rev. Bishop Donahue of that diocese secured a colony of Xaverian Brothers under the leadership of Brother Angelus. The wonderful results of one year's teaching is remarked by all classes of people. As a result, the role of the school at the commencement of the second year was almost doubled.

The Brothers lead a community life and possess nothing personally. They make the vows of poverty, chastity and obedience. Their whole life is devoted to the cause of education and their own personal sanctification.

Father Wayrich to Be Assigned to Duty as a Secular Priest.

The Rev. Frederick William Wayrich, C. S. S. R., who was for many years connected with the Church of St. Alphonsus and the Church of the Holy Redeemer, both of New York, has resigned from the Catholic order known officially as the Congregation of the Holy Redeemer. Because the Rev. Father Wayrich is 75 years old and as it is unusual for a priest to resign after having been connected with an order for so long Catholic circles have felt much interested in knowing to what branch of work he would be assigned by Archbishop Corrigan, by whom he has been adopted as a secular priest. The archbishop and the prelates have interested themselves in the priest's case.

Bishop Gabriels of Ogdensburg, who was in New York a few days ago, also called upon the archbishop about the matter, and it was decided to assign the Rev. Father Wayrich to duties which would not overtax his physical abilities, such as chaplain of a convent or assistant rector. The priest has been stationed recently at Buffalo, and one of the reasons assigned for his resignation from the Holy Redeemer order is that he was anxious to return to New York, where he had labored for so many years. There were, he thought, better opportunities for appointment to a place suitable to his age and health as a secular priest than as a member of the order in which he had passed nearly all his life.—New York Sun.

IN OUR NEW TERRITORY.

Archbishop Ireland on the Future Policy of the Church There.

Archbishop Ireland has given the first definite information regarding the policy of the Catholic church in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. It includes approval of the administration plan of leaving the church question out of peace discussions and announces that the church in the islands will conform to new conditions. He says:

"When the dominion of the United States is fully established, the church will come under the same laws that will govern this country and be separated from the state, the same as it is now in America." Whether the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of Cardinal Gibbons shall be extended to cover at least a part of America's new possessions, according to Archbishop Ireland, is still a matter for the holy father to decide, and at present no American prelate knows what will be done. The archbishop declared that the present personnel of the clergy in the islands would be undisturbed. He has been attending the opening exercises at Notre Dame and learned upon his arrival in Chicago that talk of an ecclesiastical commission had been published.

"There will be no commission from America to investigate the church in Cuba, Porto Rico or the Philippines," he said. "Any statement that there will be is false and unfair to the clergy in our new possessions. The Spanish priests will not be requested to retire, for the reason that they, better than any one else, know what is needed under the new conditions and can bring about a change much more easily than any commission that might be appointed. The clergy in the islands is made up of men of intelligence and tact. They will attend to their own work and do it well. None of our priests or bishops could speak the language of the people and would be at a loss to do as much as the men now at the head of the church. You may say that the priests of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines will be in accord with American ideas and progression, and they will be left to bring about the necessary change in their own way, and it will be the best way"—Boston Herald.

CHECKMATING THE DEVIL.

How Paul Morphy Beat His Satanic Majesty at Chess.

On reading the notes in the July number on Paul Morphy's visit to Philadelphia I am reminded of an incident in connection with his visit to Richmond about the same time, which was related to me some years ago by Rev. Mr. H. of that city. I do not remember ever to have seen it in print. Mr. Morphy was Mr. H.'s guest while in the city, and on his arrival was at once attracted by a painting over the mantel, which was a fine copy of a celebrated painting representing a game of chess between a young man and the devil, the stake being the young man's soul.

The artist had most graphically depicted the point in the game where it was apparently the young man's move, and he seemed just to realize the fact that he had lost the game, the agony of despair being shown in every line of his features and attitude, while the devil, from the opposite side of the table, gloated over him with fiendish delight. The position of the game appeared utterly hopeless for the young man, and Mr. H. said he had often set it up and studied it with his chess friends, and all agreed the young man's game was certainly lost.

Mr. Morphy walked up to the picture and studied it for several minutes, when finally, turning to Mr. H., he said, "I can win the game for the young man." Mr. H. was of course astonished and said, "Is it possible?" Mr. Morphy replied, "Get out the men and board and let us look at it." The position was set up, and in a few rapid moves he demonstrated a complete win for the young man, and the devil was checkmated. Rev. Mr. H. was wont to apply the evident and beautiful moral, which I leave to each one of your readers to think over.—R. Munford in American Chess Magazine.

THE POPE'S BURIAL.

His Holiness' Instructions Concerning the Interment of His Body.

Pope Leo XIII held a long conference recently with three of the most prominent cardinals. Many conjectures were made concerning the object of the meeting. The high church officials who composed the conference were Miecislas Ledochowski, prefect of the propaganda and first cardinal priest of the sacred college; Mariano Rampolla, secretary of state, and Francis Satolli, the bosom friend of the pope. These three cardinals are executors of the will of his holiness.

He has given them instructions that his body be buried in the Basilica of St. John Lateran, near the tomb of Innocent III. The pope has designed his own tomb, and it is characteristic of simplicity. The figure of the holy father lies extended vested in his pontifical robes. St. Thomas and St. Francis stand on each side. The tiara, the sign of his supreme office, is held by angels.—Extract From Personal Letter to Rev. Father O. H. Moye of Wheeling.

Why His Early Kiss.

Of Cardinal Angelo de Pietro, who is mentioned as a possible successor to Pope Leo XIII, it is told that he is the son of a shepherd of Enverons, Rome, and is already called the Holy Man. He is 70 years old and was educated for the priesthood by the bishop of his diocese. When he was a simple priest, visiting a certain monastery, an old monk threw himself on his knees and kissed the buckle of Pietro's shoe. The young priest, much taken aback, asked the reason for the demonstration. The monk, raising his eyes heavenward, said, "Father, when you are pope I shall be dead, so I wish now to kiss your holy foot."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Faithful Traitor

CHAPTER XX.

Noon had come in all its sultry magnificence. Outside on the carriage-drive at Speede and on the wide sloping lawn the sun poured down its rays in almost tropical heat. The big old house seemed to have a curious stillness about it. Feo lay back in a low chair in the hall waiting eagerly for her husband's arrival.

Up-stairs, in her own room, Bertha Peile was weeping; the servants crept about noiselessly. There had been a couple of hours of confusion, as all the guests had departed horror-stricken at the news Lady Feodora had to give them. Now all was quiet again—as quiet almost as the chamber of death where Richard Saville lay cold and silent in his last long sleep. Lady Feo was nearly worn out from the excitement of the past most sorrowful and eventful night. Her brain was utterly exhausted. Everything had fallen upon her shoulders. Bertha Peile had simply collapsed beneath the sudden tragedy of the morning. For the moment Feo was spared the duty of speaking about Tony and all that related to his past and his future; but the duty could not be shirked much longer, for, even in the midst of her shock and grief, Miss Peile had made inquiries for her boy, and expressed her surprise at his having left Speede so early and in such haste. There was a moment's respite, however, and Feo had gladly availed herself of it.

It would be many a long day before Gregory's little wife would regain her old sunny insouciance; the events of the past few hours had been of a nature that would have crushed a less courageous woman altogether. A telegram had been dispatched to Gregory as soon as she had recovered strength enough to attend to the business of the moment, and, unless it had chanced to reach the house after husband had gone to the City, he must be with her very shortly.

Feo lay counting the minutes, that had never crept away so slowly before. It was just upon one o'clock when there came the sound of wheels in the avenue outside. It could only be Gregory, or the doctor returning to minister to poor Bertha Peile, to whom the shock of Richard Saville's sudden death had proved very serious. Directions had been left at the entrance-gates that no one was to be allowed to come up to the house save those who had business to transact which could not wait.

Feo went out to the doorway and stood under the awning. She gave a cry of joy as she saw her husband. Her whole appearance was so changed, and her manner was so full of trouble and excitement as she ran towards him and flung herself into his arms, that Gregory was alarmed. He took her back into the shadowy depths of the hall, and held her to his breast for a few moments in silence. To Feo it was like Heaven to be enfolded in his arms once more.

"Oh, Gregory," she said brokenly, "I have never wanted you so much before! I think I should have died if you had not come!"

"It has been altogether too much for you, sweetheart," Gregory said; and he would have carried her there and then up to her room, and silenced all questionings or explanations, but Feo would not hear of it.

"Now you are here, everything seems less terrible. I—will rest by-and-by; and in a day or two I shall take 'Pootles' and join Elizabeth. She went to Westport this morning with Mrs. Proctor. I am afraid she will be terribly shocked when she hears the news. You guessed that my 'accident' meant something serious, I suppose, Gregory?" the little woman said, lowering her voice. "I thought I had better not telegraph the blunt truth. I was afraid for Tony."

Gregory put his wife carefully into a chair and sat down beside her.

"Yes, I guessed that something painful had happened," he answered gravely. "Tony shared my thought. What was it, my darling? Do you feel strong enough to tell me everything?"

"There is little to tell. Baines says he saw Mr. Saville come in from the grounds very late—after everybody had gone to bed. He looked pale and tired, Baines told me, and he asked for some brandy and carried it upstairs to his room. He must have made no effort to undress or go to bed, and he was writing letters, we imagine, when the end came. Doctor Humphreys arrived as quickly as possible—he could give no definite opinion. He ordered the body to be left as it was till he came back. He thinks, of course, death must have been caused by some acute form of heart disease. We shall know for certain to-morrow or next day." Feo kept her hand in her husband's as she hurriedly imparted her news. She added a question before Gregory could say anything. "What about Tony? Will he come down here to-day?"

Gregory Latimar shook his head.

"He is utterly broken down for the moment. I left him at his rooms; he promised to go to bed. Wendon went with me, and he will look after him. Feo, this is an awful business! I can hardly yet believe my ears. It has all happened so suddenly, and is so incomprehensible! You have heard a great deal, but you have not heard all."

Feo's pretty face grew even paler than it was before.

"Not all?" she repeated. "Oh, Gregory, what is there—"

She was checked by her husband's lips and hands.

"I spoke without thinking; but really my brain is topsy turvey. It takes a lot to upset me, as you know, but the story that poor boy brought to me and the second story he had to tell after his own have fairly bewildered me. I could never have believed such things of Saville!" Gregory said hurriedly; then very gravely—"But if all I have heard this morning be true, I cannot but think—incredibly cruel as it seems—that he is better dead than alive." Then, seeing that further suspense would be worse to his wife than further agitation, Gregory gave a brief account of Antony's meeting with the man Sandford, and all that had passed between them in their journey up to town.

Lady Feo said nothing when the recital was finished. This last story of the dead man's evil doing oppressed her almost as much as the knowledge of his wrong to Antony had done. She sat silent for so long that Gregory half feared she was going to faint. At his words of tender solicitude Feo roused herself; she turned and pressed his hands to her heart.

"Oh, Gregory, I have never loved you more—never loved Tony more than I do at this moment! The thought of so much wickedness appals me. It makes your dear, simple, honest goodness too precious for words! Can the strange man's story be true though? Is he honest? What is going to be done? What has become of him?"

Gregory soothed her as gently as he could.

"You must promise me to try not to get too excited, my dear one," he said earnestly, "otherwise I shall be obliged to send you away; and I know it will grieve you to leave me."

"I will not get excited! You must not send me away, Gregory, I want to help you—to help our poor Tony and that poor man. I will not try to think too much about—about the one who has caused such terrible trouble. He is dead. His punishment is not in our hands. Now come with me into the small dining room; you must have some luncheon, and I will eat some too. Poor aunt Bertha is quite prostrated," Lady Feo added softly, as, clinging to her husband's arm, they went from the hall to one of the darkest rooms. "Oh, Gregory, if we might only keep Tony's trouble from her a little while longer! You will tell me all you have advised—all you think Tony ought to do—won't you, darling? We can talk quietly in here; it is cool on this side of the house. Oh, Gregory, the comfort of having you here—the comfort—the comfort!"

Gregory had tears perilously near to his eyes as he looked at his girlish pretty wife and recalled all the words Tony had spoken of her goodness and courage during the past few hours. He made her sit beside him and swallow a few mouthfuls of food. He guessed rightly that she had had nothing to eat all the morning.

"I think, instead of letting you join Elizabeth, I will get you to run across to America with me," he said, after a pause. Before he began the task of attending to the sombre duties of the moment, he wanted to see something of his old Feo take the place of the wan, tear-stained woman beside him.

Feo uttered a little cry.

"Then you will go?" she said eagerly. "I thought you would! I told Tony so. There must be so much to investigate! How do we know what this woman may not have done before the marriage? Such a creature may have had half a dozen husbands. Even if the present matter is made straight, what sort of life is she living now? Why is she content to remain in America at all? That's what I don't understand, Gregory."

Gregory smiled faintly.

"You shall come with us, sweetheart, and investigate the business yourself. It is a terrible tangle! I put all the questions I could think of to Antony, but he was only too sure that she was legally his wife. He was, in fact, so much upset over the other poor chap's charges against Saville that he scarcely seemed to remember his own trouble clearly. The whole of the business has been a shocking blow to Tony," Gregory said very thoughtfully.

Feo, in her turn, insisted upon her husband's having some food; then they began to speak in hushed tones of the dead man, and of what might be in the immediate future. Lady Feo ordered the butler to bring to Gregory the writing case and papers that had been found on the table across which Richard Saville's lifeless body had fallen.

"He evidently intended leaving early in the morning, and as he could not sleep, he filled up the time by writing letters. Poor man!" Feo said involuntarily. "How awful to die alone, and so suddenly, so unprepared! For all his faults, Gregory, I should not care to think he suffered much beforehand. They tell me he looks peaceful. I am glad of that!"

"If he has made a will, I expect it will be found that he has left the whole of the Latimar money to Elizabeth," Gregory said, as they waited for the papers to be brought. "That business of grannie's will, along with Elizabeth's refusal to see him, weighed on his mind enormously, I know. As you say, Feo, one does not care to think of him dying alone and in great suffering. I always liked and respected Dick Saville; it goes against me to have to change my opinion of him now, and yet—"

Baines, the butler, came in noiselessly with the writing case, and also brought the news that Doctor Humphreys had arrived and wished to speak with Mr. Latimar if it were possible.

Gregory rose instantly to accede to the request.

"I will be back in a moment," he said to his wife as he hurried away.

Left to herself, Lady Feo drew the large Russia leather blotting pad across the table towards her; there were a number of papers inside it, also some letters sealed and addressed. Lady Feo just glanced at them—they all had a legal aspect. There was a quantity of Speede note paper, a telegram to his house-keeper announcing his immediate return to town, and a large-sized sheet of letter paper filled on two sides and a half with writing, in the midst of which the pen had evidently slipped, making an unsightly scrawl across the neat caligraphy, and showing that the writer had been fatally seized while in the act of writing this letter.

Lady Feo only glanced at it, and was putting it away almost reverently when a sentence caught her eye. In another moment she had mastered the contents of the letter. She was suddenly seized with a suffocating sensation and was flushed and trembling when the door opened and Gregory came in.

He ran to her on seeing her agitation, and took both her hands in his. It was some moments before Feo could speak, and when she did open her lips, her voice was husky and had lost its usual sweet, clear tones.

"Gregory," she said breathlessly, "look! I did not mean to read this; but it was an open sheet, and when I saw that man's name, I could not refrain from glancing over the contents, and I had done so almost before I knew it! Take it—see what it says!"

Gregory took the paper as requested and went across to the window, the blind of which had been lowered.

"Your last demand is impossible," the letter began. "Instead of returning to England before I give you permission, you will make arrangements to go West immediately you receive this. To-morrow I shall send you a cablegram, so that you will be more or less prepared how to act. The news I shall forward is the absolute truth. Sandford, your husband, is not only alive—he has traced me, and even followed me into the country. I have seen and spoken to him this very night. Your positive knowledge of his death was wrong, you see. He may be a dying man—I think he is, judging by his appearance—but he is certainly a living creature for the moment; and while he lives there is danger in more than one respect. He is half mad and threatens to do all sorts of things. I defied him, and I imagine I am strong enough to crush him, if the worst comes to the worst; but there must be no chance of his coming across you. He is capable of shooting you—assuredly of upsetting everything, and making a tremendous scandal. For that reason you will be wise to leave New York at once. I shall sail for America early next week. There has been a very great change in the position of affairs here, and I cannot count on what may or may not happen at any moment. I am prepared for all eventualities, however; and I don't mean to let myself be beaten by any man when I have made up my mind to—"

Feo stood with clenched hands looking at her husband as he carefully read each neat, almost prettily-formed word.

"Well," she said excitedly as he came to the end, "don't you understand?"

Gregory turned from the window.

"What is it that you understand by this unfinished communication, Feo?" he asked. Gregory Latimar understood life in its ordinary, every-day practical routine, but treachery and tragedy were new experiences to him.

Feo drew a deep breath.

"That letter," she answered, "was intended for that woman—the woman who has married our boy! It was to warn her. Gregory, that poor man's story to Antony is all true. He said he had been robbed of his wife; this letter speaks of her husband Sandford! It is as clear as daylight! The woman whom Tony married is not his wife—could never have been his wife—for she was married already. "Oh," Feo cried clinging once again to her husband's arm and breaking at last into a passion of tears—"oh, Gregory dear, I know I am right. It all appears strange, improbable—what you will—but I know I am right. I felt sure that heaven would not let Tony suffer all his life for having been true to what he thought was his duty! Gregory"—the excited little voice suddenly grew weak and faint—"hold me tight, hold me—I—I can't see! I—"

Feo gave a gasping sigh, and her head fell forward upon her husband's breast. He held her tightly as she had requested, and for a moment he was filled with fear; but the next he was ringing the bell for help, and as he bent over her he felt naught but intense gladness that the mental strain had ended for a spell even in a heavy fainting fit.

GOTTSCHALK'S "LAST HOPE."

Composed in Santiago When Playing to Soothe the Pain of a Sick Friend.

Louis Moreau Gottschalk wrote his immortal "The Last Hope" in Santiago. Originally an improvisation, the composition was subsequently penned by him and became a part of the classical instrumental music of the world. An adaptation of it for the violin and the mandolin was made by Remenyi years after, but not until the Spanish musicians of Santiago had incorporated it into the song literature of their clime and made it, as have other men and women, a part of their own lives, says the Chicago Times-Herald.

Gottschalk's musical tours led him into Mexico and South America. Then he visited Cuba, being passionately fond of its climate. At Santiago he was received by the Spanish grandees with every honor. A nobility of Spain resided there at that time. Soldiers of fortune and fame and women of the proudest blood of Castile and Aragon made Santiago then a greater social center than Havana. Every door was thrown open to Gottschalk. His manners, his blood, his dreams were in close affinity with the rainbow-chasing Spaniard. At one of the homes where he was received he met a Mme. S——, whose full name has never been revealed to the world. The statement has been made that Gottschalk never mentioned her name after the incident occurred which this story relates. This much is known, that she was a victim of an incurable malady and that the improvisations of Gottschalk brought to her tortured mind great relief. He was welcomed to her home, and there, evening after evening, he sat in the Cuban twilight and gave the best of himself to her through the piano. One night in particular he found her extremely restless. Pain seemed to touch every fibre of her body. She knew, as he did not, that the end was near. She said to him while his hands ran idly over the keys:

"My dear Moreau, improvise something; give me something for myself, for my soul."

The prayer of that sad voice was sufficient. From where he sat the musician could see the shadows of night falling over the bay now made famous by Schley and Cervera. The afternoon was fading. He played as those who know the work say he could never have played before, and when the last note was struck "The Last Hope" was a creation.

Gottschalk the next day passed into the interior of the province of Santiago on his concert tour. He was gone but a short time. When he returned, on passing a cathedral in the city he noted a funeral cortege about to depart. He made careless inquiry as to who had died, and the answer was:

"Mme. S——."

A profound melancholy came upon him, during which he committed to manuscript "The Last Hope." Once or twice he played it in public, but memory was too cruel to permit much of this. Upon those who are fond of emotional compositions which seem to speak the language of the soul, the piece fastens itself as something never to be forgotten.

J. WHITCOMB RILEY'S FIRST HIT.

Wrote a Poem "by Poe" and Palmed It on the Public.

James Whitcomb Riley began his career in a newspaper office in Anderson, Ind., by writing humorous rhymes as "advertising locals"—"doggerel" he called them. At the same time he wrote many rhymes with the serious intention of having them, if possible, recognized as poems. But he could not get them published. Even compositions whose worth he had tested—those that "would please people when I'd stand up and read 'em to them"—would be rturnd promptly by every magazine to which he offered them for publication. The Hoosier dialect was too "low down" for the average magazine editor.

Finally, in a freak of boyish indignation—to prove that what editors really wanted was not originality but imitation—he devised the scheme of writing a poem in imitattion of Poe and of palming it off on the public as a real poem of Poe's recently discovered. The scheme was very skillfully planned and very deftly executed and successful beyond anything the clever deviser of it had ever dreamed. From one end of the country to the other "Leonainie" was hailed as a veritable "find," a bit of genius' most genuine ore. Riley had his revenge. He had some trouble, however, in proving that he was not an intentional forger.

He lost his newspaper position, but he immediately got another and a better one—on the Indianapolis Journal. "Come and get pay for your work," said Judge Martindale, the editor. The turn in the tide had come. Soon appeared (in 1883) "The Old Swimmin' Hole and 'Leven More Poems." Indiana recognized her own. The "Hoosier Poet" was acclaimed by his compatriots everywhere. But when in 1886 the volume in prose and verse appeared—"The Boss Girl and Other Stories"—James Whitcomb Riley became a name as well known in one State as in another.—Chicago Record.

Old Man a Cat Fancier.

An old man named Echnier, in San Francisco, has a unique way of earning his living. His business is raising cats, which he puts into stores, warehouses and such places to keep away mice. He receives a certain sum every month for taking care of them. He takes a large basket of meat and a great can of milk with him every morning and feeds from one hundred and fifty to two hundred cats. The cats are raised, trained for a time, and then placed where people wish them, but the old man never sells one of the little animals. He has a queer old house in the center of the busiest portion of the city, and in the little court at the back the cats play.—New York Tribune.

SPORTING.

BASKET BALL.

The Y. M. C. A. basket ball team played their first game of the season last night with the Young Men's Institute team, of New York. The game resulted in a defeat for Plainfield by a score of 31 to 13. Plainfield lined up as follows: E. Moraller, Long, Egan, M. Moraller and Smith. Plainfield could't throw goals, and in this way lost the game. They played well otherwise, and as the season advances will no doubt reach their last year's good standing. Walter L. Long, the captain, was knocked out in the first part of the game. Some one's elbow came in contact with his nose, and as a result the member was broken. He had his nose set, but he will be unable to play again for some time. Bonny, substitute, took Long's place in the game.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

lowing this, Chairman Flynn suggested that some action be taken regarding the re-organization of the party machinery. He thought that the proper thing to do would be the appointment of a committee to confer with like committees from other wards, if such were appointed, and if not then with the chairman of ward primaries, looking to the inauguration of a movement for a better organization. It was moved that the committee be appointed by the chairman, to consist of such a number as he thought best, with the understanding that if like committees were not appointed in other wards that this committee be empowed to take the initiative movement in the re-organization efforts. Mr. Flynn appointed the following: Councilman Elmore D. Moffett, M. R. Flynn, W. W. St. John, James Kane, C A. Shannon, Vincent L. Frazee and George O. Stevens. The primary then adjourned.

Frank Bergen was in conference with John Kean and was quite positive in declaring that Codding would get no votes in Elizabeth outside of those secured for him by John C. Assemblyman Roger Murray, of Plainfield, is here working for Ackerman and distributing the latter's campaign buttons.

BIG REGISTRATION.

In Some Places it Approximates the Record of 1896.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, N. J., Oct. 27.—Reports received at the headquarters of both political parties show that from end to end of the State the registration for the coming election is notably heavy. Every town heard from had an increased registration, and in many the registration approximates that of 1896, which was the heaviest ever recorded in the State.

This city shows an increase of 12,509 over last year, and comes within 994 of the record made in 1896. In Jersey City 36,100 voters registered, against 23,749 in 1897 and 37,099 in 1896. Trenton falls behind 1896 only a few hundred. Elizabeth, with a few districts missing, shows almost a full registration, and many of the districts exceed the records made in them in 1896. In Paterson the same is true. The scattering reports made from the middle of the State indicate that the farmers are all registered. The returns from the south end of the State say the vote there will be very heavy.

Both parties admit the heaviness of the registration is a surprise. But neither is neglecting to claim the advantage.

Historical Society Meeting.

The New Jersey Historical Society held its annual meeting in the society's room, at Newark, yesterday, General William S. Stryker, of Trenton, presiding. These trustees were elected: Senator William M. Johnson, Ernest E. Coe, William R. Weeks and Cyrus Peck.

A copy of General Stryker's book, "The Battles of Trenton and Princeton," was presented to the society by Dr. Austin Scott, president of Rutgers College. Several other gifts were received. Dr. J. Ackerman Coles was elected a trustee to succeed Grover Cleveland, and Charles Bradley, son of the late Associate Justice Bradley, was also elected a trustee. Several historical papers were read.

An Accidental Success.

Once upon a time, so runs the story, there was a man in London who had ventured upon various publishing schemes with but poor success, and was beginning to despair of ever making a fortune, when, by chance, he bethought himself of a huge scrapbook which his wife had compiled of various literary odds and ends that had enchained her fancy. She called her scrapbook "Tit-Bits," and it occurred to her husband that such odds and ends, published in periodical form, might interest other people as well as his wife. The result of this meditation on his part was the appearance of a little penny paper called "Tit-Bits," which proved so popular and gained such a wide circulation that its proprietor felt encouraged to place other literary ventures on the market, and it was not long before he became known as the publisher of a number of extremely popular penny periodicals. He is now a millionaire many times over and a baronet, while his wife, whose scrapbook proved the cornerstone of their prosperity, finds her reward in the title of Lady Newnes.—Munsey's Magazine.

"Do you see that tall girl with the fluffy brown hair, over there?"

"The one with the pink roses in her bodice?"

"Yes. She knows French, German, Latin, and Greek, besides English, and she took the honors of her class when she was graduated, a few weeks ago."

"Pshaw, that can't be right. There must be some mistake. Why, that girl is actually beautiful!"—Cleveland Leader.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

FORD TO MAKE FIGHT FOR THE DEMOCRATS.

Nominated For Senator Without Opposition.

EVERYTHING HARMONIOUS.

ELIZABETH SECURED ONLY ONE ASSEMBLY NOMINEE.

Convention Was an Enthusiastic One—P. J. Ryan Chairman—A Number of Plainfielders Given Convention Honors—Assembly Candidates are Collins, Higgins and Scudder—The Platform.

(By a Staff Representative.)

Elizabeth, October 28.—In a convention that was harmonious without lacking a lively interest in their work, the delegates to the Democratic county convention, held in the Star Theatre, yesterday afternoon, nominated a ticket that is generally conceded to be a strong one in all respects, and chosen geographically so that members of the party throughout the county will lend their best endeavors for its success.

As stated in the despatch to The Daily Press yesterday afternoon, describing the situation up to an early hour in the afternoon, there was little certainity beforehand as to who would be the nominees. The greatest interest, of course, was over the Senatorship. Most of the gossip about the probable nomination seemed to center around the candidacy of Alderman George A. Ford, of Elizabeth, and it was he who was honored with the nomination.

Several names were mentioned for Assemblymen, among them being Irving I. Roes and Mulford Scudder, both of Westfield, Phillip E. Tufts, of Rahway, Louis A. Matha, of Cranford, Francis T. Higgins, of Linden, Capt. D. F. Collins and Capt. George King, of Elizabeth. Nearly all of these gentlemen were around the convention hall in person, and while none were actively engaged in soliciting votes they all admitted their willingness to accept if named by the convention.

Shortly before 3 o'clock John H. Crowell, of Rahway, chairman of the county executive committee, called the convention to order. State Committeeman Peter Egenoff, of Elizabeth, nominated P. J. Ryan, of Elizabeth, for chairman, and he was unanimously chosen. He was escorted to the platform by a committee of which William K. McClure, of Plainfield, was one of the members.

Timothy J. Scott, of Summit, and James Oliver, of Rahway, were named for secretaries and were accepted without opposition. After the call for the convention had been read, Chairman Ryan was authorized to appoint three members each for the convention committee. His selections were as follows: Credentials, Elmore D. Moffett, of Plainfield; William W. Erickson and Samuel D. Redmond.

Resolutions — Josephus Shann, of Rahway; James E. Connoly, of Elizabeth; and James E. Martine, of Plainfield.

Permanent Organization — Andrew P. Hughes, of Elizabeth; William P. Swain, of Summit; W. K. McClure, of Plainfield.

After this a recess of thirty minutes was taken to allow the committees to perform their work, and the delegates scattered and discussed politics in general. Col. E. H. Snyder, of East Orange, the Democratic Congressional candidate in the Eighth district, was in the lobby and most of the delegates were given an opportunity of meeting him.

When the convention reconvened the credential committee announced that there were no contests. The committee on permanent organization recommended that Mr. Ryan be continued as chairman. A list of vice-chairmen was announced, among whom was Edward M. VanBuren, of Plainfield.

Josephus Shann presented the report of the committee on resolutions, which consisted of the following platform:

We, the Union county Democracy, in convention assembled, announce our adherence to the principles of Jefferson, Jackson and Tilden, believing in the widest liberty of the citizen, and the right of self-government. We are opposed to the centralizing tendencies of the government, maintained and fostered by the Republican party, and believe that the home affairs of the different States of our united country can be best attended to by the people of those States. We believe in the opening of trade and commerce with all the peoples of the world, and the adoption into our system of government of such territory as lies contiguous to this continent, thus following the policy adopt by the Democratic party, under which our Nation has expanded from the Atlantic seaboard to the shores of the Pacific Ocean.

In State affairs we denounce the legislation of the last four Republican Legislatures, which has been in the interests of combinations of capital and monopolies, and against the just demands of honest labor.

We demand the enactment of such laws as will give to juries the power to fix the amount of damages to which individuals shall be entitled for injuries caused by the wrongful act of persons or corporations.

We denounce the partisan and unfair legislation which makes a personal registry necessary in the larger cities of the State, while a house-to-house canvass is provided for in the smaller cities and country districts. Such legislation has for its object the disfranchisement of a large number of citizens and voters in this and neighboring counties, and merits the severest condemnation at the hands of the people.

We believe in an economical administration of county affairs, and we denounce schemes, which have for their object the aggrandizement of a few as against the whole community; and we insist that every expenditure of money for county purposes should be carefully scrutinized.

We believe that the county records should be put in such condition that they may be accessible to any person who wishes to consult them; but feel that the amount expended for that purpose should be kept within reasonable bounds.

We favor a fair return from all corporations for any franchise which may be conferred by county or city authorities, and feel that all persons, natural and artificial, ought to contribute fairly to the burden which government imposes.

The last paragraph referring to the use of public franchises shows the astute handiwork of Mr. Martine and was suggested by the recent trolley franchise agitation in Plainfield.

Mr. Martine, who was one of the leaders in the convention, then moved that the convention proceed to the nomination of a Senator. James F. Connoly arose for the Third ward of Elizabeth and nominated George A. Ford. There were no other candidates and Mr. Ford was chosen without opposition.

Councilman Hetfield, of Plainfield, then moved that the nominations for Assembly be commenced. Elizabeth delegates presented two candidates, Captain Collins and Captain King. Rahway named Philip E. Tufts, Cranford Louis A. Matha, Fanwood Irving I. Ross, Linden Francis T. Higgins and Westfield Mulford Scudder.

The vote on the first ballot was as follows: Collins, 91; Scudder, 78; Higgins, 68; Tufts, 61; King, 39; Matha, 1. The nomination of the first three named was then made unanimous. George A. Horning, of Elizabeth, was unanimously nominated for coroner.

A committee, of which Mr. McClure, of Plainfield, was one, was then appointed by the chairman to escort the nominees to the convention hall. In the meantime E. W. Crane, candidate for Governor, who had come into the hall during the recess amid quite an ovation, and had witnessed the proceedings of the convention from one of the boxes, was introduced to the delegates. He gave them a short talk from the box, in which he related the enthusiasm which he had found among Democrats wherever he had gone. He predicted that if the Democrats only presented a united front on election day victory would be theirs.

Soon after the candidates came into the hall and were greeted with vigorous applause. Each one had a few words to say, thanking the convention for the honor bestowed upon them and promising to do their best to be elected, and if elected to serve the people faithfully.

The convention then adjourned.

MIZPAH LODGE HOLDING A FAIR.

Being Held in Old City National Bank Building and is Well Attended.

The members of the sewing circle of Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., are holding a fair this week in the old City National Bank building on East Front street. It was opened yesterday afternoon and will continue afternoons and evenings for the rest of this week. The fair is for the benefit of the sewing circle and is being well patronized. Mrs. Andrew Cox is president of the circle and chairman of the fair committee. Under her direction every member of the circle is contributing in some way toward the success of the fair.

The room is attractively decorated and there are several tables arranged about the room provided with useful articles such as fancy goods, groceries and both plain and fancy aprons. These tables are presided over by different members of the circle.

Among the attractions is an Odd Ladies' quilt bearing the name of every member in Mizpah Lodge. This will be presented to the most popular member of the Lodge and is to be contested for. There are two very handsome dolls, whose names are not known. The person guessing the correct names will be presented with the dolls. There is another quilt made in colors of red and white that is being contested for. Any person receiving the highest number of votes will receive this quilt.

Last evening the fair was well attended and dancing proved to be an attraction. There will be dancing this and tomorrow evening, and other attractions. The refreshment committee has arranged to serve clam chowder every evening in connection with the regular bill of fair.

DEMOCRATS AROUSED.

PARTY REORGANIZATION WILL BE PUSHED VIGOROUSLY.

A Conference of Leaders Will be Held Monday Night to Determine What the Best Course of Action Shall Be.

The work of reorganizing the Democratic party in Plainfield is to be commenced immediately and pushed vigorously at the instance of the committee appointed at the Fourth ward primary Wednesday night.

Councilman Elmore D. Moffett, who was made chairman of the committee appointed at that time, today issued a call for an informal conference at his office on North avenue for next Monday evening, when the chairmen of the other ward primaries will be invited to be present and discuss reorganization plans and appoint a committee of representative Democrats from their wards to co-operate with the Fourth ward committee.

The reorganization idea has struck a popular chord in the minds of all Democrats. All are unanimous in saying that it is a move that is very desirable and should have been undertaken long ago for the best interests of the party.

Though only ten days of the State and county campaign remains, the idea is to get the plans formulated into some definite shape while the Democrats are interested and enthused in the chances of the party for victory.

With the party machinery in methodical shape at the close of the present campaign, the interest locally will receive a great impetus in the campaign leading up to the city election. Particular efforts will be made to interest young men in the movement.

COUNTRY IN A BAD WAY

THAT IS WHAT THE SOCIALIST CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR SAYS.

Matthew Maguire Addressed His Followers in T. A. B. Hall Last Night—Who Was Chairman of the Meeting?

Members of the Socialist Labor party were out in full force last night at the meeting held in T. A. B. Hall and addressed by Matthew Maguire, the nominee for governor of New Jersey on that ticket. There were about 100 men present, consisting principally of the working class, and they listened attentively to all that Mr. Maguire had to say.

The speaker was introduced by a man who confessed his inability to make a speech, so he gave up the platform to Maguire. Who this individual was his constituents evidently desired to keep secret for some unknown reason, for when a Press reporter inquired the chairman's name of a meek faced young man doing duty at the door, he was met with a sneer and the remark, "What difference does that make to you?"

Mr. Maguire devoted some time to describing the organization of the Socialist Labor party and explained that one half of their ten cent dues goes into the State treasury while the other half goes towards national expenses. In this state, he said, it is not difficult to get the names of the candidates on the official ballots, as only 800 signatures are needed, while in some states as many as 12,000 are necessary.

Mr. Maguire claimed that they were up against both of the old parties, and taking ex-Governor Grigg's remarks at a recent convention he picked them to pieces and explained that the country is getting worse each year instead of better, and that when Mr. Griggs says the country is prosperous he alludes to the wealthy class, which comprise only one-half of one per cent of the population of the United States.

Mr. Maguire is a fluent talker and placed his claims before the people in such a clear and perspicious light that those who didn't know what socialism was when they went into the meeting understood it better when they went out.

Says He is Innocent.

In last evening's edition of your paper I see my name used as being arraigned before the City Judge on the charge of stealing my fellow-milkmen's bottles. I wish my friends to know that I am entirely innocent of the charge and at the trial will, I am sure, be able to prove a clear vindication as to my actions on that date.

Very truly,
Compton Vail.

His Friends Came in Unaware.

Last Wednesday evening a pleasant surprise was tendered to William Swick, of Richmond street, by his many friends. Mr. Swick was wholly unaware of the surprise and he enjoyed it all the more. During the evening games, refreshments and a good social time helped to pass the time all too quickly for those present. There was also dancing which was a feature.

ACKERMAN FAILED TO GET THE SENATORSHIP.

Elizabeth Politicians Easily Bested the Plainfielders.

JUDGE CROSS WAS NAMED.

ROGER MURRAY WAS RENOMINATED FOR THE ASSEMBLY.

The Convention Was One of the Most Exciting Ever Held by Union County Republicans—Fight Narrowed Down Between Cross and Ackerman—Councilman Runyon one of the Secretaries.

(By a Staff Representative.)

Elizabeth, October 28.—Yesterday afternoon there was a great gathering here of the G. O. P. men from all over the county, to attend the county convention, at which nominations were to be made for State senator, three assemblymen and coroner. Plainfield was early in the race with a candidate for the senatorial nomination. Ernest R. Ackerman was the choice of Plainfield and her delegation stood solidly by him to the end. The outlook for his nomination had been very bright but, at the last moment, Elizabeth rounded up a sufficient vote from the other parts of the county to secure victory for the Elizabeth candidate, Judge Joseph Cross

The convention met at the Lyceum Theatre, and was called for 3 o'clock, but two hours before that time the delegates began to assemble in the lobby and in front of the theatre.

The Plainfield delegation held a caucus in the Freeholders' rooms at 2:30 o'clock. Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert was chosen chairman of the delegation. It was decided by a unanimous vote that Plainfield should cast its entire thirty-one votes for Mr. Ackerman as long as he remained a candidate.

Just before the convention convened the news went forth that Charles N. Codding had withdrawn from the contest, and that his supporters would be divided among the other candidates. There also came the announcement that Freeholder J. Martin Roll would not make any attempt for the nomination. Former Sheriff George Kyte, of Fanwood, had declined in favor of Mr. Ackerman, and his supporters joined hands with the Plainfield delegation.

The convention was called to order at 3:20 o'clock by Charles N. Codding, chairman of the county executive committee. The Plainfield delegation occupied a prominent place just to the left of the centre aisle. The Plainfield delegates all wore blue and gold badges, on which was advocated their candidate for senator. John W. Clift, of Summit, and William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, were chosen secretaries of the convention. Edward B. Horton, of Cranford, was then elected temporary chairman without opposition. J. W. McMurray, of Plainfield, and Joseph Potter, of Rahway, were appointed a committee to escort the temporary chairman to the stage.

After a brief delay, Chairman Horton announced the makeup of the committees. Plainfield was represented on each one as follows: Credentials, A. H. Lewis; resolutions, F. E. Marsh; permanent organization, George P. Mellick; rules, E. B. Maynard. Frank Allen, of Fanwood, was placed on the committee on permanent organization.

A recess of fifteen minutes was taken in which the committees met and prepared their reports. During the interval, John D. Barr, former president of the Elizabeth Common Council, introduced William N. Runyon, of Plainfield and suggested that Mr. Runyon be asked to sing. There were calls for "Runyon," and the popular young Plainfielder responded with a song.

The committees reported at the close of the recess. The committee on permanent organization reported that the temporary organization should be made permanent. The usual rules were presented, while the credential committee reported that there were no contests. Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, as chairman of the committee on resolutions, read those prepared in which the work of the Republican party was applauded and the Republican candidates praised.

The convention then proceeded to the nomination of a Senatorial candidate. The call was made by wards, boroughs and townships. John D. Barr, for the First ward of Elizabeth, nominated Ernest R. Ackerman. The Third and Fourth wards seconded the nomination. The Fifth ward named Judge Joseph Cross, and the remainder of Elizabeth announced Cross as its candidate.

Alex. Gilbert, as chairman of the Plainfield delegation, made an eloquent speech presenting Mr. Ackerman as Plainfield's candidate and seconding his nomination. The First of Rahway came out for Charles N. Codding. Cranford placed James W. Furgueson in nomination. The chairman of the Cranford delegation made a speech in which he said that Cranford had been attending conventions for many years and had always worked for the benefit of the convention. This year she wanted something herself.

Fanwood seconded Mr. Ackerman's nomination. Linden township announced Cross and Linden borough Ackerman. Mountainside also came out for Ackerman. Roselle endorsed Codding, and Summit and Union Cross. Westfield surprised all by seconding Mr. Ackerman's nomination.

The call for the vote came on the four nominees. By this time it was tacitly understood that Codding was out of the race. Cranford voted for her favorite son and the rest of the delegates were divided between the Plainfield and Elizabeth men. At first it was nip and tuck and no one could say who would win. Then the advocates of Codding all went over to the Cross faction, while Westfield, which had endorsed Ackerman, cast its vote solidly for Cross. At last it was evident that Judge Cross had secured the nomination. Before the call was scarcely completed there was a scramble among some of the small delegations to have their votes changed from Ackerman to Cross. John D. Barr moved Judge Cross's unanimous nomination and Alexander Gilbert, of Plainfield, seconded it. It was carried with great applause.

Robert G. Houston and George A. Squier, of Elizabeth, and Roger F. Murray, of Plainfield, were named for the nominations for the Assembly, and all three were unanimously elected without contest.

For coroner, John M. Randolph, of Rahway, and Frank C. Stutzlen, of the First ward, Elizabeth, were named. A contest ensued, in which the Cross faction supported Randolph, and the friends of Mr. Ackerman stood by the Elizabeth man. The name of the latter being rather difficult to pronounce, there was considerable amusement when most of the delegates favoring him cast their ballot for "Elizabeth." Randolph was finally elected by 88 to 72 votes.

Alex. Gilbert and John D. Barr were appointed a committee to escort the victorious candidates to the theatre and also to bring the Republican candidates for Governor and Congressman.

The ballot for Senator was as follows:

FIRST AUTUMN SOCIABLE.

First Methodist Epworth Leaguers Had a Pleasant Time.

The Epworth League of the First Methodist Episcopal church gave the first autumn sociable last night to introduce their new president and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gee, of Sandford avenue. Mr. Gee was not present, as he did not return from a business trip to Buffalo as soon as he expected, so Mrs. Gee had to do the honors for him.

The church parlor, where the sociable was held, was fitted up to resemble a home, with rugs, easy chairs, couches and lamps, and everyone felt very much at ease. The programme consisted of two vocal solos by Miss Etta Raybert, who was accompanied on the piano by Miss Maude French, and a talk upon the word "Up" by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell. The sociable was well attended, and everyone had a good time. Refreshments were served at the close of the address. The sociable was in charge of the social committee, of which Miss Persis Snodgrass is chairman.

THEIR NINTH RECEPTION.

CYPRESS COMMANDERY, K. T., ENTERTAINED ELABORATELY.

Gave an Exhibition Drill—Entertained Ivanhoe Commandery, of New York—Dancing Enjoyed—Committee in Charge.

The ninth annual reception of Cypress Commandery, No. 6, K. T., was held last evening in the Cycle Academy on Watching avenue, and was attended with great success. It was nearly 10 o'clock before the affair really began, but from that time until 3 o'clock this morning everyone present had a thoroughly good time. About 10:30 o'clock the members of Ivanhoe Commandery, No. 5, of New York, arrived in a body and later there was an exhibition drill between Cypress and Ivanhoe Commanderies.

The great feature of the affair was the dancing. Music was furnished by Prof. Vanderveer, of Elizabeth, and the large floor was well-filled throughout with merry dancers. To those in charge much credit is due for the complete arrangement of all the details. Prof. MacDonald was the floor manager, and he was assisted by Walter Benn.

At midnight supper was served by the committee in charge, after which dancing was continued. Below will be found the names of those who had charge of the reception:

Reception committee—Sir Benj. Johnson, Sir Nathan J. Williams, Sir Jas. A. Saunders, Sir A. W. Brown, Sir Wm. H. Jones, Sir W. J. Douglass. Committee of Arrangements—Nathan Pollard, Richard Yetman, George Vanblake, Chas. Irby, Jos. Brinkley, Wm. Connett, Cyrus Benn, Forrest Jones, John Ward, Joseph Bolden, Henry Freeman and Nathan Cook.

PLANS OF OFFICERS OF TRINITY CHURCH SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Teachers to Meet Every Wednesday to Study the Lessons—Home Department for Those Unable to Attend Sunday-school.

The quarterly meeting and social of the officers and teachers of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school was held last evening in the parlors of the church. There were about fifty persons present and an evening of profit and pleasure was spent by all. The forepart of the evening was devoted to the discussion of plans for the coming winter's work, and two important schemes were adopted.

The first was that every Wednesday evening directly after prayer meeting the officers and teachers of the school are to meet to study the Sunday-school lesson for the following Sabbath and thus prepare themselves to teach it. The second plan is to organize a home department, whereby people who find it impossible to attend Sunday-school may study the lesson from week to week and at the same time contribute something toward the support of the school. For this work a superintendent will be appointed to organize and look after this department.

The Sunday-school finances was discussed and many plans were offered whereby the revenue coming to the school can be increased. Nothing was done in this line, however.

Following the business part of the meeting a social time followed and refreshments were served under the direction of Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. E. E. Anthony and Miss Martha Anthony, the Christian Endeavor Sunday-school committee.

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE WED.

The Ceremony Performed in Newark—Will Reside in Plainfield.

Wednesday evening the home of Mrs. Thomas Ulrich, 69 South Thirteenth street, Newark, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, the contracting parties being her youngest sister, Miss Charlotte E. Crapnell, and Robert H. Keenan, of Plainfield.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. VanHorne, of Newark. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Ida C. Nichols, and Thomas Keenan, a brother of the groom, acted as best man. None but the immediate members of the two families were present.

At 10 o'clock an elaborate wedding supper was served. Later, the young couple took their departure amid an abundance of good wishes from all. The bride received a large number of handsome presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Keenan will reside at 440 East Fifth street, this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Maze Edwards, of West Front street, are on board the training ship Alliance in the East river today, where they have gone to see Mr. Edwards' son, who is on the ship. They expect the young sailor to return home with them for a few days' furlough.

BIG TROLLEY LINE IS NOW PROJECTED.

Philadelphia Will Eventually be the Western Terminus.

CONSOLIDATION TO OCCUR.

ROAD WILL ONLY RUN AS FAR AS TRENTON FOR TIME BEING.

Purchase of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company Has Just Been Completed—Success of the Project Depends on Getting Through Plainfield—A Great Scheme for Capitalists.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, October 28—The purchase of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company by Judge Gottfried Krueger and Andrew and Edward H. Radel has been consummated. The agreement of sale was made last November, and the shares, rolling stock, railway franchises, privileges and other property of the company were to have been transferred May 1st, but the shares were so widely scattered and the other property in such shape that not before last Monday could the transfer be made.

This is a long step in the direction of establishing a great system of trolley roads between Trenton and Elizabeth.

The main line, as projected by the new owners of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, will cross the Raritan at Bound Brook by a bridge now in use. The company will lay rails back to Dunellen, there connecting with the Rikers' street railway, which is to extend between Elizabeth and Dunellen. This will complete the line between Elizabeth and Bound Brook, providing the Rikers get the franchise through Second street in Plainfield.

After crossing the Raritan, at Bound Brook, the new trolley road will strike out for Princeton and Trenton, through the stretch of fine farming country between the Pennsylvania and Philadelphia and Reading Railroads. Already a right of way is being acquired through the farms. Land of a width of thirty feet is being purchased from the Raritan to Trenton. In about a year the right of way will have been secured and the work of construction begun.

This region has no adequate railroad facilities. It has not been tapped by any railroad line between the Millstone Branch of the Pennsylvania and Princeton. The traction company contemplates carrying freight on its line, and in this way the road will be very beneficial to the farmers.

Judge Krueger and the Radel estate now own the New Brunswick road operating between Bound Brook and New Brunswick. The latter city will be connected with the main line by a spur branching from the main line some miles below the Raritan.

When this new trolley system is in operation it will be possible to go all the way from New York to Trenton by trolley. Moreover, Judge Krueger recently had a talk with a representative of a road projected between Trenton and Camden, and all built excepting ten miles. A connection with this road would enable one to go all the way to Philadelphia by trolley.

LIFE IN THE SOUTH.

Mrs. Gielow's Sympathetic Sketches of Negro Characters and Incidents.

A fashionable audience assembled at the Park Club last evening and listened with pleasure to Mrs. Henry J. Gielow, of Greenville, Ala., who entertained with sketches of life in the south on plantation. She gave original character sketches, monologues, poems and cradle songs. Mrs. Gielow was cordially received by all and her impersonation of negro folklore captured her audience. Her recitations throughout evidenced a delicate humor and pathos that was delightful, and bore the great merit of originality. At times her audience was convulsed with laughter, and then again there was a silence during which one could almost hear a pin drop.

Mrs. Gielow stated at the opening that many of her sketches were the result of her personal association with the colored folks of the south, and especially in her own home. She lived in the same town in which Lieut. Hobson was born and lived, and this announcement evoked hearty applause from all. During her stay in this city Mrs. Gielow was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, of Washington Park.

To Lay the Corner Stone.

The corner stone of the new Calvary Baptist church, colored, will probably be laid Sunday afternoon. The building is sufficiently advanced to permit of this.

GOV. TANNER WILL SHOOT.

Tells What He Will Do If He Hears of Any More Mobs Like Virden.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—A special to the Times-Herald from Madison, Ill., says: "I reiterate that I will not tolerate this wholesale importation of foreigners into Illinois. And if I hear that a mob is to be brought into this state, such as was taken into Virden, I care not on what railroad it comes, or for whom, I will meet it at the state line and shoot it to pieces with Gatling guns."

It was the concluding statement in an address largely devoted to defence of his course in the recent mine riots at Virden.

The governor reviewed at great length the causes leading up to the rioting. He held the operators at fault in their dealings with the strikers, and then, reverting to his acts when the crisis came, said:

"When the United States government found it necessary and deemed it just to forbid the importation of foreign labor into this country I felt that I was fully justified in the course I took at Virden. That trouble never would have occurred if the negroes had not been brought here to take the places of white men.

"The importations were representatives of the scum of the country—exconvicts and worthless characters generally—and the state of Illinois should not be made a dumping ground for such reprobates. I do not propose to allow the operators to bring these people here, and I took what I considered and still consider the proper means to prevent it."

Harvard Landmark Doomed.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 28.—The city of Cambridge and Harvard University will shortly lose one of the most interesting landmarks that they possess. The Unitarian church, on the west side of Harvard square, will be torn down within the next year and a new one put up in its stead. The First Unitarian church in Cambridge was built in 1756 on the spot now occupied by Dane Hall. Harvard College paid one-seventh of the expense, and in consequence was permitted to hold its religious and commencement exercises there, and did so for more than seventy years.

The present building was completed in 1833, and the original church was then torn down.

It was in the present church that the two hundredth anniversary of the foundation of Harvard College was celebrated.

A building committee, of which President Eliot is the head, has already collected two-thirds of the funds necessary for the erection of the proposed church.

The Storm in the Lake Region.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—No lives have been reported lost in the storm in this vicinity, but the total damage is estimated at $81,500.

The objects that suffered most were the lake shore promenades and walls. Lincoln Park suffered most in this respect. It will require $35,000 to replace its wrecked ways.

An indication of the fury of the storm is shown by the fact that the official clock in the hydrographic office in the Masonic Temple, was stopped by the vibration of the building. The hands pointed to 6.51.49 when the pendulum ceased to swing.

Lieutenant Wilson says all clocks on the upper floors of high office buildings were similarly affected.

Fatal Railway Accident.

Omaha, Oct. 28.—A rear-end collision on the Union Pacific yesterday resulted in the death of three men and the serious injury of one other.

Those who were killed were Samuel Hindman, engineer; William Raran, fireman; and B. Shannon, brakeman. John Griffin, a fireman, was seriously injured.

An extra freight train was standing on the side track, and the switch being left open, freight No. 27, going at a good rate of speed, crashed into the rear end of the extra. The engine was badly wrecked and four freight cars reduced to kindling wood.

IS IT A TRIFLE?

THAT COMMON TROUBLE, ACID DYSPEPSIA OR SOUR STOMACH.

Now Recognized as a Cause of Serious Disease.

Acid dyspepsia, commonly called heart-burn or sour stomach, is a form of indigestion resulting from fermentation of the food. The stomach being too weak too promptly digest it, the food remains until fermentation begins, filling the stomach with gas and a bitter, sour, burning taste in the mouth is often present. This condition soon becomes chronic and being an every day occurrence is given but little attention. Because dyspepsia is not immediately fatal, many people do nothing for the trouble.

Within a recent period a remedy has been discovered prepared solely to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. It is known as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and is now becoming rapidly used and prescribed as a radical cure for every form of dyspepsia.

Stuart's Dysyepsia Tablets have been placed before the public and are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package. It is prepared by the Stuart Chemical Co., Marshall, Mich., and while it promptly and effectually restores a vigorous digestion, at the same time is perfectly harmless and will not injure the most delicate stomach, but on the contrary by giving perfect digestion strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite and makes life worth living.

REVIEWED BY PRESIDENT

A Favorable Day for Philadelphia's big Celebration. Nearly 30,000 Soldiers Parade, Gen. Miles Led the Procession and Prominent Military and Naval Men in the Line.

Philadelphia, Oct. 28.—There was compensation yesterday for the disappointment in the enforced postponement of the civic parade which had been scheduled for the previous day.

The day opened with a clear sky and bright sunshine and with every possible favorable opportunity for the assembled crowds to witness the great military parade which was the programme for the day in the week's peace jubilee.

From twenty-five thousand to thirty thousand soldiers had reached the city to participate in the grand pageant, and all were promptly at the assigned points of assemblage to take their place in the great procession.

The president and vice president of the United States, with members of the president's cabinet, distinguished army and navy officers and hundreds of thousands of residents of this city and other localities honored the occasion with their presence and with almost the entire populace of the city cheered the soldiers as they moved over the route.

President McKinley, prior to the parade, rode in a carriage over the route of the procession to view the decorations, and was greeted with a continuous ovation.

With General Nelson A. Miles, the head of the United States army, in the lead, the procession started from Broad street and Snyder avenue at 11 o'clock and proceeded north on Broad street to hestnut street, thence east on the latter thoroughfare to Third street.

Going north one block on Third street to Market street, the soldiers marched west on Market to Broad, and then proceeded north on the latter street to York street.

The route covered about seven miles and four hours were occupied in passing a given point.

On Broad street there was a continuous line of stands, which were crowded to their utmost capacity, and the soldiers were greeted with tumultuous cheers throughout the entire line of march.

Music was plentiful throughout the long line of soldiery, and the enthusiasm of the spectators along the route was unbounded.

The decorations were the most profuse ever displayed in the city, scarcely a building being without its covering of red, white and blue bunting and flags. The fronts of many buildings were almost hidden by the national colors.

In the line were many who had battled against the Spaniards on the Cuban hills.

Major General Nelson A. Miles and staff were mounted on the same chargers and wore the same uniforms used in active campaign work.

Following as an escort were Governors Tunnell of Delaware, Hastings of Pennsylvania, Voorhees of New Jersey, Cooke of Connecticut, Lowndes of Maryland, and Tyler of Virginia, with their staffs.

The central figure of the escort was Gen. Joseph Wheeler.

In carriages were Commodore Philip, of the Texas, Captain Bob Evans, commander Mead, of the Marblehead, Lieutenant Commander Richard Wainwright of the Gloucester and Captain Sigsbee.

A feature of the procession was Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson and four of the crew of the Merrimac.

Col. Waring Has Yellow Fever.

New York, Oct. 28.—It was discovered yesterday that Colonel George E. Waring, Jr., who returned in bad health from Cuba last Tuesday, was suffering from yellow fever. He is in his apartment at 175 Second avenue, with his wife, his stepson and a servant, all of whim have been quarantined.

Health Commissioner William T. Jenkins, who made public the nature of the colonel's illness, said last night that he believed the patient would recover, but he was reticent when asked regarding how serious the case was.

Colonel Waring returned from Cuba on the Yucatan, which landed at Pier 17, East River, at the foot of Wall street. At that time he was suffering from a slight indisposition and complained that he had been feeling sick since Sunday night. He was driven to his home, where the next day he became worse.

Nicaragua Canal Project.

Managua, Nicaragua, Oct. 28.—Edward F. Cragin, the Chicago contractor and engineer, with Edward Eyre and Frank S. Washburn, of New York, have made an agree ment with President Zelaya to construct an inter-oceanic canal. Under the terms of the concession they are authorized to negotiate with the Maritime Canal Company, whose concession will lapse next October.

The form of agreement guarantees a release from the incubus of the old company, while making possible a satisfactory arrangement with all parties. The concessionaires represent adequate capital, which, with efficient American engineers and contractors, assures a prompt beginning and an early completion of the canal, in contrast to the inactivity of the Maritime Canal Company for the last ten years.

Government Works Damaged.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 28.—Fishermen arriving at New London report that the recent storms have washed away the extensive new government works which have been going up at Gardiner's Point, near the eastern end of Long Island.

The island is at the entrance of Gardiner's bay and the government had been planning a sea wall for its protection.

OUR BASIS IS ACCEPTED

No Part of the Cuban Debt Will Be Assumed by America.

SPAIN GIVES UP AT LAST

It Had Been Feared That the Question of Cuban Debt Might Result in a Breaking Off of Negotiations. The Cuban Article of the Protocol Stands. Will be Incorporated in Treaty Without Change

Paris, Oct. 28.—The Spanish government, through the peace commissioners of Spain, has accepted the negative view of the United States peace commissioners toward the proposed assumption by the United States of the Cuban debt.

The American commissioners have firmly, but courteously declined to assume for the United States the entire or joint responsibility for the Spanish financial condition.

Senor Montero Rios, the president of the Spanish commission, and his colleagues, with faithful insistence, sought another result, but they have failed to attain it and have finally abandoned the effort and have agreed that the Cuban article of the protocol shall, without conditions, have a place in the ultimate treaty of peace.

The article as it stands in the protocol is substantially as follows:

Article 1. Spain will renounce all claim to all sovereignty over and all rights over the island of Cuba.

Article 2. Spain will cede to the United States the island of Porto Rico and the other islands which are at present under the sovereignty of Spain in the Antilles, as well as an island in the Ladrone Archipelago, to be chosen by the United States.

Article 4. Spain will immediately evacuate Cuba, Porto Rico and the other islands now under Spanish sovereignty in the Antilles. (Rest of article relates to formation of evacuation commission.)

Though through several sessions the Spanish commissioners have had before them the irrevocable presentation of their American colleagues, it was not until Monday that the Americans, from the outset of their refusal to accept the Cuban debt, had meant exactly what they said.

In spite of the fact that the Spanish commissioners have had, as a background of their efforts, doubts of succeeding, their hope of so doing has been so keen and their contention has been so vigorously prosecuted that the final conviction of their inability to win their point brought to the Spaniards such a shock and depression that, consistently with these dispatches at the time, there were grave doubts as to the continuance of the negotiations.

In support of these statements is the fact that Senor Montero Rios, after Monday's session, and on Tuesday last, would have resigned the presidency of the Spanish peace commission had he not believed that his so doing might have grievously shaken, even if it had not unseated, Senor Sagasta's government.

From this standpoint, if for no other reason, Senor Montero Rios retained his position, and at Wednesday's session, acting under the conviction arrived at on Monday, the Spaniards announced that they would forego further argument on the Cuban debt, and agreed that, practically in the terms and absolutely in the spirit of the protocol, the article about Cuba should go forward into the final treaty.

Thus Spain agrees to relinquish sovereignty over and claim to Cuba without other terms or conditions.

The meeting of Wednesday, though short, was long enough to yield these ultimate conclusions, and to witness an understanding that, at the joint session which began at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, a culmination of the details in relation to the matter should be had.

All differences, if any existed, regarding Porto Rico and the selection of the island of Guam were also arranged by mutual understanding and the commissioners found themselves well nigh touching the Philippine question, which will be taken up next week.

Thus progress has been achieved and the Spaniards have also learned to know that the Americans purpose perfecting here a peace treaty if direct methods, patient effort and painstaking consideration on their part can secure that result.

It should be said that the adjustment already accomplished will stand ultimately, unless opposing views and positions developed hereafter shall bring to naught the efforts of the commissioners in the future and at the same time nullify the results already obtained.

Hay Says Negotiations Are Satisfactory.

Washington, Oct. 28.—Secretary of State John Hay is authority for the statement that there is nothing startling in the reported cabinet meeting held in Philadelphia Wednesday night.

In the first place, Secretary Hay says there have been no sensational developments in connection with the peace commission's work at Paris. The commission is proceeding with its work as expeditiously as the Spanish commission will permit. Several routine dispatches were received at the department from Mr. Day, which Mr. Hay thought the president ought to have in extenso. Accordingly Mr. Keller was designated to be the bearer of them to Philadelphia. They related entirely to the proceedings of the commission, and a dispatch received from Commissioner Day states that the commission is making satisfactory progress.

The Bismarck's Quick Trip.

New York, Oct. 28.—Agent Emil L. Boas, the American agent of the Hamburg-American line, received a cable from Cherbourg yesterday announcing the arrival there at 2.35 of the steamer Fuerst Bismarck, after a record breaking trip from Sandy Hook.

The steamer cleared Sandy Hook lightship at 11.20 last Thursday. Her run from port to port was six days, ten hours and fifteen minutes, the fastest time ever made between the two harbors.

The former best record was six days, ten hours and forty-five minutes, which was also held by the Bismarck.

THE THREE GRACES

Grace Whitely, Grace Lorning and Grace Downlake were known far and wide as the "Three Graces." Grace by name, and possessing grace of form and manner, there was no stigma in the sobriquet. Another strange coincidence was the fact that they were chums, and lived at 15, 17 and 19 St. Valentine avenue. They belonged to the same "smart" set, and worshipped in the same sanctuary.

One day, recently, Grace Downlake rushed into No. 17 and found her friend Grace Lorning busy over a new recipe for making cake. Miss Lorning had already made several mistakes in compounding the ingredients, and when Miss Downlake bounced into the kitchen with, "Oh, Grace, love, I want you to go right down town with me to look at a new fancy in dress goods!" Miss Lorning threw up her hands in dismay, and exclaimed, "Grace Downlake, you're a mean thing; you've made me spoil this delicious cake—I mean, it would have been delicious—by scaring me into putting in the yolk of an egg in place of a lump of butter!"

It was the end of cake making in that house that day—unless the cook may have plunged the conglomeration into a pan and baked it for the coachman, against whom she had a standing grudge.

Grace Whitely gave me a history of the trip the next day. "Why," she said, "we went to Hahne & Co.'s, Newark. I had no idea that such a splendid assortment of dress fabrics could be found outside of New York. Long after we bought our dresses we lingered in discussing the beautiful display. Hahne's is a lovely place to buy everything." Then she showed me her shopping list, and I give my readers an exact copy of what each girl said of her new suit.

Grace Whitely: "An all-wool camel's hair, fifty inches wide, rough effect, in a lovely cadet blue. I know I'll look stunning in it. I paid only 85 cents a yard."

Grace Lorning: "A suit in bayadere stripe, ruby shade, three-tone effect, and forty-five inches wide. If I don't cut a dash, I'll change my name. The price was low; I paid only 75c a yard."

Grace Downlake: "I think 79c a yard was real low for my duchesse satin. It's all silk, too, and twenty inches wide. It's a perfectly sweet shade of brown. When I get it on, I'll make all the other girls envious."

THE WAR INQUIRY.

Col. Duffy of the 69th New York Tells of Camp Conditions at Fernandina.

Huntsville, Ala., Oct. 28.—The war investigating commission resumed its sessions yesterday and listened to the testimony of Captain Charles M. Augur, depot quartermaster of the Fourth army corps.

He confirmed the report that there was a railroad congestion at Tampa. Fernandina he thought a good camping place. Captain Augur is now stationed at Huntsville.

Complaint had been made that members of the Sixth cavalry had tentage that is rotten and did not shed the rain.

The commission had been informed that much of this tentage was new, having been issued at Montauk.

General McCook inquired of Captain Aungur from what factory the canvass came.

The witness said that he did not know.

He was told to find out where it was manufactured and give the information to the commission.

Captain Gilbert Cullen, assistant surgeon in the Ohio volunteer infantry, testified that while at Fernandina he made an inspection of the camp, accompanying the medical board appointed by the president to investigate the causes of typhoid fever. He found conditions in some regiments that caused unfavorable comment.

Dr. Connor insisted on his naming the regiments, and the witness replied:

"The Thirty-second Michigan and 157th Indiana."

BUFFALO TO SAIL MONDAY.

She Goes to Manila via Suez Canal With Recruits and Supplies for Dewey.

Washington, Oct. 28.—The navy department has received a letter from Captain Hemphill of the cruiser Buffalo saying that the ship will be ready to sail from New York for Manila next Monday.

It was the opinion of Captain Hemphill some time ago that all arrangements could be completed for the departure by to-day.

In his later letter, however, he said that the final details of the preparation would require the rest of the week for completion, and that if any additional naval stores were to be loaded on the Buffalo for Asiatic stations, the departure of the vessel would be still further delayed.

So far as known no protest has been made by Spain against the dispatch of the Buffalo to Manila, as was done in the case of the Oregon and the Iowa. The ostensible purpose of the Buffalo's trip is merely to carry recruits and supplies to Dewey's fleet, and it has been given out that the cruiser will not remain at the Philippine capital. The Buffalo will go by way of the Suez canal, and the first port of call will be Colombo, Island of Ceylon.

This long run without coaling is made possible by the ship's enormous cruising radius.

Quick Trip from Ponce.

New York, Oct. 28.—The transport Manitoba, Captain Quick, which arrived yesterday from Ponce, P. R., got under way at 6.30 a. m. and proceeded up the bay to an anchorage off Liberty island, where she will await orders before landing her troops.

The Manitoba reached Quarantine at nine o'clock after a record breaking passage of four and a half days, having on board the Third Wisconsin volunteers, under command of Colonel M. T. Moore, and ninety men of various regiments in Porto Rico sent home on furlough. There is no illness on the vessel.

Passengers were Major Stewart of the Second Illinois and Messrs. Maston, Trotter, Mooney, Fenton and McDonald, who were sent to establish a postal service in Porto Rico and report thereon.

They visited eighty different offices in the island and will proceed to Washington to report to the postmaster general.

To Improve Patent Laws.

Washington, Oct. 28.—The patents and trade mark commission appointed by the president to suggest improvements in patent laws in anticipation of their public meeting in this city on November 22, are about to send out a circular letter to all persons interested in inventions and trade marks, related to foreign commerce, which will ask for opinions in regard to what amendments of the United States laws relating to patents and trade marks are desirable for the advancement of foreign commerce and for carrying out the convention of industrial property concluded at Paris, in March, 1883.

The members of the commission are Francis Forbes of New York, P. S. Grosscup, United States district judge of the northern district of Illinois, and A. P. Gurley, assistant commissioner of patents of Washington.

Wants a Share of Sutro's Wealth.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 28.—Mrs. Clara Keuge, alleged contract wife of the late Adolph Sutro, has begun proceedings to obtain a share of the Sutro estate.

Former Judge Van R. Patterson, on behalf of Mrs. Keuge, has filed a petition asking that she be appointed guardian of her two children, known as Adolphus Newton Sutro and Adolphine Charlotte Sutro.

Mrs. Keuge alleges that Sutro was the father of the children, that they have an estate situated in the city and county of San Francisco and that the appointment of a guardian is necessary to protect their interests

The property to which the children are at present entitled consists of a block the estimated value of which is $20,000.

A Paving Brick Combine.

Massilon, Ohio, Oct. 28.—William Hipp, a prime mover in the organization of the so-called paving brick trust, states that the concern is not to be a fire brick, but at paving combine.

It is not the intention to increase the prices, but to prevent their being cut. Those particularly interested are the manufacturers of the Hocking Valley, the Canton district, the Ohio Valley, and the Galesburg, Ill. district.

Mr. Hipp has just returned from the city of New York, where he arranged for the $15,000,000 that will be needed to complete the organization.

DREYFUS CASE CALLED

Court of Cassation Hears Arguments in Support of New Trial.

FAURE NOT ASSASSINATED

The Hearing Unattended by Disturbance. Lieut. Henry's Confession of Forgery the Basis of Presentation. If M. Delcasse Takes the Foreign Office the Cabinet Would be Favorable to Revision.

Paris, Oct. 28.—The court of cassation, which is to decide upon the question of reopening the case of Alfred Dreyfus, the prisoner of Devil's island, who is alleged to have been falsely convicted of selling important military plans to agents of a foreign power, opened at noon yesterday.

The hall was very full of people, but there was no demonstration around the Palace of Justice.

The gates, however, were closed as a matter of precaution, and only ticket holders were admitted.

The few spectators about the palace were kept moving by the police, and inside the building municipal guards were stationed in all the corridors leading to the court room.

Maitre Labori, who was counsel for M. Zola during the latter's famous trial, was seated among the lawyers occupying the first row. Mme. Dreyfus, wife of the prisoner, was provided with a seat in the corner. She was represented by Maitre Mornard.

The Dreyfus appeal case was called immediately after the opening of the court. M. Bard opened the proceedings by referring to the excitement and scandals caused by the case, even before the appeal for a revision of the trial was lodged.

He then reviewed the history of the case from the arrest of Dreyfus and said his condemnation was for one of the crimes which inspire universal horror, and it struck one of those in whom the country had the most confidence.

Continuing, M. Bard spoke of the efforts made to obtain a revision of the case, referred to the denunciation of Major Esterhazy and revived Mme. Dreyfus's appeal for a revision of the case. In so doing M. Bard said this appeal was based on the assumption that the bordereau was written by Major Esterhazy.

He then pointed out that there were suspicious facts which justify the request for the revision. Mme. Dreyfus contended that her husband did not write the bordereau, which all the experts reported he did write. The court, therefore, would have to examine these facts and decide whether a revision was justified.

M. Bard added that the appeal for a revision was decided upon in consequence of the late Lieutenant Colonel Henry's confession that he had forged a document in the case, but M. Bard said that this forgery was committed in 1896, and could not alone be regarded as ground for a revision or for an annulment of the judgment rendered in 1894.

Nevertheless, M. Bard then said, Lieutenant Colonel Henry had committed forgery, his evidence was the most crushing against Dreyfus, and, he continued, the evidence of a forger is open to suspicion.

There was, therefore, the assumption of innocence, based upon fresh fact, which led to the appeal for a revision of the case, and there was also ground to ask whether another new fact has not been brought to light and if Dreyfus was really the author of the bordereau and note written to Major Esterhazy and found in the apartment of Mme. Pays, in which the writer asked what he should do respecting the bordereau.

M. Bard next read Colonel Du Paty de Clam's report of the arrest of Dreyfus, then a captain of French artillery, doing staff duty, in which the colonel said that Dreyfus, while writing to his dictation, "betrayed intense excitement."

"But," M. Bard added, amid the surprise of his hearers, "the photograph taken of this writing does not give the slightest indication that Dreyfus was laboring under excitement."

Dreyfus, M. Bard also said, denied to Colonel Du Paty de Clam that he ever had relations, directly or indirectly, with foreign powers.

Colonel Du Paty de Clam's report further showed that Dreyfus had to write incriminating documents in ten different ways, sitting and standing, with and without gloves, and with ordinary and broad pointed pens.

M. Dupuy for Premier.

Paris, Oct. 28.—President Faure at 9 o'clock last evening asked M. Dupuy to form a cabinet, in succession to the Brisson ministry, which resigned on Tuesday. M. Dupuy has asked until to-day to decide, but he will doubtless accept the task unless unforeseen difficulties arise.

It is thought that the new cabinet will be composed in part as follows:

M. Dupuy—Premier and minister of the interior.

M. de Freycinet—Minister of war.

M. Constane—Minister of justice.

M. Delcasse—Minister of foreign affairs.

M. Ribot—Minister of finance.

M. Bourgeois—Minister of public instruction.

M. Charles Dupuy, who has now been called by President Faure to form a new cabinet, has twice been president of the council of ministers. It was during his second premiership, which lasted from May 26, 1894, to January 14, 1895, that Captain Dreyfus was arrested, tried and convicted.

Want Currency Reform.

Joliet, Oct. 28.—At the Illinois Bankers' Association convention held here resolutions were passed asking the Illinois senators and representatives to urge legislation in Congress looking toward the retirement of the demand issues of the government in such way that no contraction of the currency will result, and asking for currency reform laws under which a "stable, elastic bank currency responsive to the demands of business and commerce redeemable in gold" may be issued.

ALL QUIET AT HAVANA.

The Ways Being Cleared for the Occupation of the Island.

Washington, Oct. 28.—It is said at the state department that there is nothing disquieting in the situation at Havana. The evacuation commissioners are meeting at intervals to suit their convenience, and the needs of the work in hand, Spanish troops are being shipped homeward and the ways being cleared for the occupation of the island by the American garrison at the end of the present year.

The attitude of the insurgents is not a cause for apprehension now more than it has been, and the officials are confident that the sentiment of the better element on the island of Cuba will be effectual in securing for the United States officers who are charged with the administration of the temporary government of Cuba, the cordial support of the vast majority of the Cuban people.

It is conceivable that the end of the war will find some bands of lawless men, perhaps Spaniards as well as Cubans, ravaging remote and unprotected districts, but this is an incident of most wars, and even after our late civil war trouble was encountered in suppressing such lawless elements.

GEN. KITCHENER TALKS.

Praises the Work of Major Marchand and Hopes for Peace.

Paris, Oct. 28.—General Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, who arrived here Wednesday from Marseilles, left yesterday morning, arriving in London in the afternoon.

The Evenement publishes an interview with General Kitchener, in which the ritish officer is quoted as saying:

"I am only a soldier and am ignorant of diplomacy, which is not my business. I hope the diplomatists will succeed in settling the difficulty amicably. I can only praise the rench, particularly Major Marchand, who received me at Fashoda with cvharming cordiality. I shall always retain a pleasant souvenir of that reception.

"The situation is rightly regarded as most critical; but I cannot approve of those who say war is the only solution. A calm, courteous discussion will give a solution acceptable to both nations. I have entire confidence in diplomacy and perhaps my opinion of Major Marchand's exploit may contribute to the result which we all desire."

INDIANS ON THE RAMPAGE.

Shoot Down Citizens in Oregon and Are Pursued by a Posse.

Baker City, Ore., Oct. 28.—Word has been received here by telephone from Canon City, of a shooting affray in which Indians shot and seriously wounded Dave Cuttings and shot the horses from under E. Duncan and F. Mosier. The redskins went to the home of John High, and shot him, but not fatally.

The scene of the trouble is on the south fork of John Day river, about thirty miles southwest of Canon City. A well armed posse from Canon City has taken up the trail and hard fighting is expected, as the Indians are well armed.

Around the World A-Wheel.

New York, Oct. 28.—Mr. and Mrs. Darwin H. McIlraith, who left Chicago on April 10, 1895, on a bicycle trip around the world, arrived in this city yesterday on the Red Star liner Pennland. The one thousand miles lying between this city and Chicago will be covered by the McIlraiths awheel, thus completing their trip around the world.

The cyclists wheeled from Chicago to San Francisco in fifty-two days. Thence they took passage for Japan and rode through that country, China, Burmah, India, Persia, Russia, Austro-Hungary, Germany, France and Great Britain, covering in all thirty thousand miles, not including journeys by boats.

New York, Oct. 28.—Among the passengers who arrived yesterday on the steamer City of Kingston, from Port Antonio, was Rev. John P. Chadwick, chaplain of the United States cruiser Cincinnati.

He came on leave of absence to visit his sister, who is ill. He says his term of sea service is ended, and that he will probably be granted a long leave. Father Chadwick was chaplain of the Maine at the time of the explosion in Havana harbor.

Muster Out of the 71st.

New York, Oct. 28.—The mustering out of the Seventy-first regiment began yesterday. It will take some time to finish the work, possibly not less than two weeks.

The gallant regiment which fought its way up the San Juan hill will resume as the Seventy-first N. G. S. N. Y., upon its mustering out of the volunteer service.

Nearly eleven hundred of this organization assembled in the armory of the Seventy-first regiment.

New Line to Havana.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 28.—A new steamship line will on December 1 be opened between Florida and Havana direct, via the Miami and Florida East Coast Railway.

The steamship Lincoln has been chartered from the Cramps at Philadelphia for this service. She has a good freight and passenger capacity.

This line will be run in opposition to the Plant route via Tampa.

To Punish Chinese Rioters.

Pekin, Oct. 28.—The foreign ministers have demanded the removal from Pekin of the Chinese soldiers who last Sunday attacked a party of English engineers at work on the Hankow-Pekin Railway.

The Tsung-li-Yamen has conceded the demand and ordered the infliction of exemplary punishment upon the offenders.

Military Postal Stations in Cuba.

Washington, Oct. 28.—By order of the postmaster general, military postal stations have been established in Cuba at the following points:

Daiquiri, Guantanamo, Baracoa, San Luis, Manzanillo, Gibara and Holguin.

COMING EVENTS.

October 30—I. R. Mount, of New York city, will give an illustrated talk on bicycles at the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4:15 p. m.
October 31—J. Williams Macy in Y. M. C. A. Star Course.

The Defeat of Mr. Ackerman.

Just what affect the defeat of Ernest R. Ackerman for the Republican Senatorial nomination will have upon the local Republicans remains to be seen. For weeks they have been bending every effort to secure his selection by the county convention, and when Elizabeth promptly came along and gobbled it up on the first ballot with a big show of delegates, it was a crushing blow for Mr. Ackerman's friends. It was useless for them to try and conceal their disappointment and in the subsequent proceedings of the convention, after the Senator had been named, Plainfield took particular pains to show their discomfiture over the result.

Today the local Republicans wear scowls upon their faces, commenting particularly upon what little incentiveness there is for good, earnest work on their part in this campaign. There is still ten days before election for that feeling to wear off, but if it does not disappear rapidly it is practically certain that Plainfield will not come up with such a Republican majority as would have been the case in the event of Mr. Ackerman's selection.

The only consolation that Elizabeth could offer to Plainfield was that it was not their desire to have an Elizaman man named simply because he was from Elizabeth, but because they considered Judge Cross a more available candidate than Mr. Ackerman. Elizabeth Republicans, it seems, feared that the attitude Mr. Ackerman has displayed towards temperance questions would be a great drawback to the success of his candidacy.

Those persons who delight in showing their love and esteem for newly-married couples by showering them with rice and pelting them with cast-off footgear should read of the aftermath incidents of the wedding that took place in Dunellen Wednesday. There the expression of good luck for the bride and groom took the form of throwing bouquets at them. How much better that plan than is the usual seance that the newly-married couple are compelled to go through when they take their departure from their friends. We trust that those who want to give their married friends a good send off in the future will read and profit.

The point is made that the new Senator from Union county will not be a full term Senator, but will only serve the unexpired term of former Acting-Governor Voorhees. Mr. Voorhees was elected in 1896 for three years. His full term successor will be chosen in the fall of next year. The Senator to be chosen a week from next Tuesday will therefore sit only through the joint meeting that is to elect a United States Senator next January.

Isn't it strange, though, that the man whom Plainfield Republicans fought for all they were worth yesterday at the Republican county convention should possess a cognomen that best defined their disposition when they saw the result of their efforts. It certainly was a Cross time for the local G. O. P.

That section of the platform adopted by the Democratic county convention yesterday which refers to corporations being compelled to give a fair return to any city or county granting it privileges, is the last plank in the platform, but it is not the least important by any means.

We wait with breathless suspense to see how our esteemed friend Runyon is going to land, politically, today. He made a good fight for Mr. Ackerman's recognition and it was a bitter pill for him to swallow to see his favorite so easily bested.

Well, Mr. Ackerman kept them guessing for a little while anyway, and if he ever aspires for a county nomination again his opponents cannot say, "Who is Mr. Ackerman, anyway?" They know him now.

To have seen the activity and influence of "Farmer Orator" Martine in the Democratic convention yesterday it didn't seem that he had lost any of his old-time political vigor. As a matter of fact he hasn't.

Don't think that in the hurly-burly of politics that we are forgetting all about the trolley franchise. The trolley franchise, like the Maine, we propose to remember for some time.

It seems that geographical considerations don't go with the Elizabeth Republicans when they have their hearts set on capturing everything in sight.

It took more than a dummy ballot showing up the grab-all proclivities of Elizabeth to scare or make ashamed the politicians of that city.

THE LOSS OF THE MOHEGAN.

It will require a thorough investigation to fix the responsibility for the wrecking of the steamship Mohegan. The spot where she went down has always been known to be exceedingly dangerous. It is a point of rocks known as the Lizard and is on the coast of Cornwall. Captain Richard Griffith went down with his ship.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

A Newark woman told the Town Improvement Association of Plainfield Tuesday that Chief of Police Hopper does not approve of women's doing anything but stay at home, and advised the Plainfield women to look out for their own chief of police. In the report of the meeting as published in the Plainfield papers, it does not appear just what reasons the speaker had for her aspersions upon the gallantry of Chief Hopper, but the latter is entitled to a fair hearing, and no doubt the Police Commissioners will feel called upon to ask him why he he has fallen under the ban of the women.—Newark News.

Struck His Mother.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, Oct. 28.—Gus Roantree, or "Dory" as he was familiary known, was arrested and taken before Squire Storms yesterday on a charge preferred by his mother of striking her. It is said that Roantree was drunk at the time. When the case came to trial the young man's mother went his bail and later withdrew the charge.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

One of the most refreshing entertainments in the farce comedy line is "McFadden's Row of Flats," to be presented at Music Hall tomorrow night. It is just the kind of amusement that suits and pleases all classes of theatre-goers and those who can enjoy a good long laugh. The engagement of this company of clever people should again test the capacity of every theatre where it shall play, and undoubtedly it will, for it is known to be one of the best things touring the country. It possesses an octette of comedians not to be excelled by any traveling company, among whom few are better known than its leading comedian, jolly, eccentric Joe J. Sullivan, undoubtedly one of the funniest funsters in his line on the American stage. He is original in method and creates fun in a way that makes people wonder over his cleverness. Another interesting feature to be seen is the Noss Family, five musical artists, who have won a reputation by years of consistent and earnest effort and are now established as one of the best specialties of the day.

The New York Hoyt's Theatre success, "A Bachelor's Honeymoon," is annuounced for next Wednesday night at the Stillman Music Hall. This clever farce delighted the New York press and public for quite a time last season and is universally esteemed as a quaint and dainty play, sparkling with wholesome humor and wit. Arthur F. Warde, eldest son of the distinguished tragedian Frederick Warde is one of the managers of the company and was in Plainfield yesterday arranging the preliminaries for the date next Wednesday night. "A Bachelor's Honeymoon" is one of the attractions which should draw out our best society this season.

What is said to be one of the strongest of travelling attractions, "The Sleeping City," will soon make its appearance in this city. It is a modern melodrama dealing with New York life after dark, with startling surprises, striking situations and powerful climaxes. Bright specialties are introduced. The company is composed of players who have achieved success. It's worth more than the average difficulty in procuring the price of admission to see this powerful production.

—Dr. MacArthur, of Calvary Baptist church, New York city, is one of those who strongly commends J. Williams Macy, who gives the opening entertainment in the Y. M. C. A. Star Course Monday evening.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, N. J., Oct. 28.—Court Dunellen, Independent Order of Foresters, gave a reception and entertainment Wednesday night in the Lincoln School Hall, to their members and wives. The reception was given in honor of Lewis T. Titsworth, who has been made High Chief Ranger by the High Court. The entertainment consisted of vocal music by a quartette of the Ward Brothers, Robert Carpenter and Fred Haynes; banjo music and piano selections, comical recitations and songs from out of town parties and an address by Mr. Bingham, State organizer of the order. After the entertainment every one adjourned to the basement where the ladies had provided a bountiful collation. The committee in charge were William Wyckoff, John Logan, Arthur Gaston, Charles English and Lewis Snyder.

OWNS FEROCIOUS DOGS.

C. E. EFROS' CANINES CAUSE HIS APPEARANCE IN COURT.

He Possesses Two Monster Mastiffs Who Have Such a Way About Them That the Community is Terrorized.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, October 28—Scotch Plains and Fanwood people have been terrorized for the past year by two big mastiff dogs owned by C. E. Efros, a New York business man, who have killed cats and chickens by the wholesale, and have attacked other canines until neighborhood dogs give the Efros house a wide berth. Once they boldly attacked the team of horses attached to A. D. Beeken's coach, and after knocking one of the steeds to the roadway the coachman had considerable of a fight to drive the ferocious dogs from the scene.

The climax came yesterday when one of the dogs entered the pasture field on the Ball property and viciously attacked a herd of calves that F. K. Clark had pastured there. One of the calves was nearly killed by the mastiff, who would have accomplished the job if a neighbor had not arrived at an opportune time and driven off the monster dog.

Mr. Clark was so indignant over the matter that he appeared before Justice Clark and swore out a warrant against Efros, in tort, charging him with harboring animals that were a menace to the well-being of the community. The case will excite considerable interest in Scotch Plains when it comes to trial.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Oct. 28—The pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. C. Marsh, corner of Walnut street and Lawrence avenue, was the scene of a pretty wedding last evening when their daughter Miss Mildred Pearl Marsh, became the bride of Edwin A. Keegan. The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock under a canopy of American flags and was performed by the Rev. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the Methodist church. The bride was attired in a gown of white silk poplin, trimmed with white chiffon. She entered the room leaning on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by Miss Alice Crosby. The bridemaid was Miss Lizzie Combe, of Bound Brook, who wore a gown of yellow taffeta silk. The best man was Fred Slater, of Rahway, and William Taylor and A. Mosher, of Westfield, acted as ushers. After the wedding a supper was served and Mr. and Mrs. Keegan received the congratulations of their many friends present before leaving for a wedding tour of several weeks. Upon their return they will go to their new residence on Walnut street.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES WITH, COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.—Is. xi: 9. Oct. 30, 1898.

1. "And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse and a branch shall grow out of his roots." The title of our lesson is "Messiah's Kingdom," and if we can only get a somewhat clear idea of what the Scriptures teach concerning this kingdom it will prove a great blessing to us. It clearly has to do with the Son of Jesse, and, according to the golden text, will fill the whole earth. The throne will be the throne of David at Jerusalem, according to Isa. ix, 1, and Jer. iii, 17, and the King will be none other than the Son of David, the Son of Abraham, of Math. i, 1, of whom Gabriel said that He would from David's throne reign over the house of Jacob forever and of His kingdom there should be no end (Luke i, 32, 33).

2. "And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon Him." Counting this expression with the other six in this verse, there is here a sevenfold fullness of the Spirit's power to be manifest in the King, the Messiah. The six are suggestive of His power to discern the nature and difference of things, His power to form right conclusions and to carry out right purposes, His thorough acquaintance with God and sincere adoration of Him. It pleased the Father that in Him all fullness should dwell, all the fullness of the Godhead (Col. i, 19; ii, 9). Full of grace and truth (John i, 14).

3. "And shall make Him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord." Other readings of this sentence are: "His delight shall be in the fear of the Lord" (R. V.); "The fear of the Lord is fragrance to Him" (Del.); "To refresh Him in the fear of Jehovah" (Young). He could say: "I delight to do thy will, O my God! I do always those things that please Him" (Ps. xl, 8; John viii, 29). His conclusions are not formed from what He sees or hears. He knows what is in man.

4. "But with righteousness shall He judge the poor and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth." What a glorious administration of earth's affairs there will be when such a King shall sit on David's throne! Consider Jer. iii, 17, 17; xxiii, 5, 6, and compare Ps. lxxii and let your heart cry verses 18 and 19. But before this kingdom can come or in connection with its coming there must be an overthrow of the wicked one and his associates and followers. This smiting is referred to in Ps. ii, 9; Rev. ii, 26, 27; II Thess. ii, 8; Rev. xvii, 14; xix, 20. It is seen to be at the coming of our Lord in power and glory, and at that time all the saints shall come back with Him (I Thess. iii, 13; iv, 14; Zech. xiv, 5, l. c.).

5. "And righteousness shall be the girdle of His loins and faithfulness the girdle of His reins." A King shall reign in righteousness, and the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect (service) of righteousness, quietness and assurance forever (Isa. xxxii, 1, 17). All His doings are bound up in righteousness and faithfulness, and the fruit is peace. When Jeremiah would reason with God concerning the prosperity of the wicked, he begins by saying, "Righteousness art thou, O Lord, yet" (Jer. xii, 1). When Nehemiah bewails the sins of his people and the consequent judgments of Jehovah, he says, "Howbeit thou are just in all that is brought upon us?" (Neh. ix, 33), and in connection with the pouring out of the vials of God's wrath in the great day of the Lord the testimony is, "Just and true are Thy ways, Thou King of nations" (Rev. xv, 3). We may always be sure that "As for God, His way is perfect" (Ps. xviii, 30).

6-8. "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid." This picture of wild and domestic animals and little children living in peace together will surely be literally fulfilled. As it was in the garden of Eden, and as it was in the ark of Noah, so shall it be in all the earth. There shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor crying, nor pain, for all things on earth shall be made new (Rev. xxi, 4, 5). The creation itself shall be delivered from its bondage, and be made to enjoy the liberty of the glory of the children of God (Isa. lxv, 25; Rom. viii, 21). It is undoubtedly true that some people act like wild beasts, oft roaring like lions or growling like bears or devouring like wolves; that such people both in heathendom and Christendom become by the grace of God like lambs, and that often it is through a little child that God leads them to Himself, but we must not suppose that the salvation of souls is all that we are taught in these words, for it is only by a figure that we find that here. This earth is to be wholly subdued by our Lord Jesus Christ and made like heaven not by the preaching of the gospel as a present, but by the personal reign of our Lord Jesus after He shall return in glory (Rev. xi, 15-19).

9. "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." This statement is found for the first time in Num. xiv, 21, then here, and afterward in Hab. ii, 14. In the first place, it is in connection with the forgiveness of Israel as a nation, and so it is here (see verses 11 to 16), for it is God's plan that through Israel all nations shall be blessed.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Oct. 30. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, The Call of Elisha.

SCRIPTURE READING.—I Kings xix, 19-21.

To be thoroughly effective the work of an Elijah must be followed and continued by that of an Elisha. Undoubtedly the more striking personality and more dramatic incidents belong to the Master. His is a unique figure in all history. No other one like Him stalks across the pathway of kings. Many great prophets and earnest reformers have the ages known, but only one Elijah the Tishbite. Corruption is no stranger in the courts of kings in ancient or in modern times, but the world has had only one Ahab and one Jezebel. For a bulwark against fraud, lust, perjury, slander, impiety and murder such a rugged character as the fiery prophet was needed. But all that master and pupil can do is to delay disaster to the nation, they cannot avert the doom because they cannot eradicate the evil virus of wickedness from the hearts and lives of the people. Jehu can be anointed in place of Ahab, and Hazael in room of Benhadad, and Jezebel's rule may come to a sudden end, but the disease is too deep seated for a speedy cure.

To espouse the cause of the prophet was to incur deep hatred of the rulers and scant love from the people. Elisha was in circumstances of ease if not of affluence, otherwise he could not have had 12 yoke of oxen plowing and could not have afforded a sacrifice so costly as a yoke of oxen for a feast. It was hazardous as well as expensive for him to become servant and successor of Elijah. No brilliant career opened to him if he accepted the call. Scorn, opposition and persecution confronted him. But he was of the stuff of which heroes are made and obeyed the call. His was a temper of mind utterly incomprehensible to the man of the world. It was the mind of Abraham, who heeded God's call. It was of the style of Moses and Caleb and Joshua. It was the mind of Jesus Christ.

Something of this same spirit dwells in all men who prefer honor to honors. It is the spirit of Savonarola, Luther, Knox and Wesley. It is the kingly soul needing no earthly crown and purple, but living the royal life in all places and times. "He arose and went after Elijah and ministered to him."

What Are You Reading?

What one reads forms character as quickly and inevitably as what one eats makes blood and muscle. Care in selection of one's reading is more necessary than care in what one drinks. In the Cuban campaign our troops were warned to drink no water that had not first been boiled. Yellow and typhoid fevers result from drinking marsh water. More deadly are the moral germs in much of literature. Loss of appetite for the pure and helpful, weakness of spiritual life and positive wickedness in many cases can be traced directly to a book, a paper or a magazine article. Fifteen minutes' sleep in a fever swamp will wreck the strongest constitution oftentimes. Fifteen minutes with a bad book has started many a soul on a career of evil.

In food eat only the most nutritious. In books read only the most helpful. Not what you like, but what you need, should be the rule of selection. Fiction of some kinds has a helpful influence. To read all fiction is a serious mistake. Travel, history, biography, science, poetry, all should have a share of attention. Every one should read the great masterpieces of the world's best literature. Read for information, for facts and principles, read to know human nature, physical nature and the Divine nature. Read to know the world you live in, to know yourself and to make a world in which to live hereafter, a broader, fuller, deeper, sweeter life.

Taste and Relish.

These are not the same, but are closely related—in fact, are twin sisters. They grow strong together and grow beautiful and helpful or ugly and hurtful according to the food given them. So many have no hearty relish for religious work, were never gifted in speech, in prayer, in visiting the sick, in giving of money or time or anything to others, have no relish for Bible study or company of religious persons. What is the trouble? A very simple thing. They never cultivated the taste for the pure, the good, the godly. They preferred the taste of self indulgence to that of self denial and have cultivated it till there can be no relish for the other.

Taste is to be cultivated. Most tastes are acquired, few good ones are instinctive. One has to learn what is good by a variety of tests, then he learns the taste of it. At first it may not be specially agreeable, but it is wholesome. Eat till the taste be formed rightly, then comes relish. After that the taste can be trusted to help guide in selection of the good things, and "good digestion waits on appetite."

One of the most pernicious falsities is the idea that pleasantness is a test of goodness. Not all poison is bitter or sour. Many things sweet are harmful. Taste is to be trusted as a guide only when rightly educated.

Brothers.

Oh, Englishmen, in hope and creed,
In blood and tongue, our brothers!
We, too, are heirs of Runnymede,
And Shakespeare's fame and Cromwell's deed
Are not alone our mother's.

"Thicker than water" in one rill,
Through centuries of story
Our Saxon blood has flowed, and still
We share with you its good and ill,
The shadow and the glory.

Joint heirs and kinfolk, leagues of wave
Nor length of years can part us.
Your right is ours to shrine and grave,
The common freehold of the brave,
The gift of saints and martyrs.

Our very sins and follies teach
Our kindred frail and human.
We carp at faults with bitter speech
The while, for one unshared by each,
We have a score in common.

—J. G. Whittier.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Oct. 30. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—"Helpfulness."—Ex. xvii, 8-13; Gal. vi, 1-5.

We are dependent, independent and interdependent in this life. We depend upon God, we act independently for ourselves, and we also depend upon one another for much in life. "No man liveth to himself." He is dependent for much upon those who are about him in life. This mutual dependence is illustrated in the first topical reference. This is the story of the defeat of the Amalekites at Rephidim. God made success depend upon intercessory prayer. While Moses held up his hand Israel prevailed, but, when he let down his hand, Amalek. But Moses' hands became weary, and then Aaron and Hur held them up. Moses was dependent upon them for help. They were dependent upon Moses, after God, for success. Success or failure was as important to one as to another, and by their united action they brought success. By refusing to help one another they would have brought defeat upon all. We are thus mutually dependent upon one another in all the relations of life. In the home, in the Endeavor society, in the church, in society, in the business world, we need the help of one another, and in helping others we help ourselves, as Aaron and Hur benefited themselves in holding up the arms of Moses.

It is not only good policy to help one another in life, but it is also a religious duty. "Bear ye one another's burden" is the command of Paul. "Be willing to lay down your lives for the brethren" is the practical command of Christ, and in helping one another we thus fulfill the law of Christ.

We are to help one another in bearing all the burdens of life—its sorrows, its infirmities, its errors and its sins. The object of helping others to bear their sins is that they may be reclaimed. "If a brother be overtaken by a fault, ye that are spiritual restore such a one in the spirit of meekness." Restoration is the object of all helpfulness. Another incentive for this kind of helpfulness is our own liability to sin, "Considering thyself lest thou also be tempted," and being tempted presumably fall. We are least willing to help men bear their sins and errors. It is easier to give food to the hungry and clothing to the naked than it is to give a helping hand to a sinful, fallen brother, but Christianity demands that we shall do all three.

Nothing will bring greater happiness and greater blessing into our own lives than to cultivate the habit of helping others. It is more blessed to help than to be helped.

Bible Readings.—Deut. i, 34-38; iii, 28; II Sam. xi, 25; II Chron. xxix, 34; xxxi, 1-4; Ps. xxxiii, 20; xlvi, 1; Acts xxvi, 22; I Cor. xii, 28; II Cor. i, 11; viii, 1-8; Phil. iv, 18; II Tim. i, 16-18; Heb. iv, 16.

Time For Bible Reading.

A class of persons who profess to love the Bible excuse their neglect of it by saying that they have no time for Bible reading. But is there any person in this land who cannot command the time to read a chapter from the Scriptures every day? It may be doubted whether there is such a person. There are many who cannot do this and at the same time do all that they desire to do in other directions. But that is not a reason for neglecting the Bible. Our Bible reading should be one of the first duties of every day. A good rule is to read nothing else until we have read a portion of the Scriptures. If we adopt this rule, and rigidly adhere to it, we shall never lack the time to read at least a few verses from the Bible. This can be done at home and it can be done abroad; it can be done on a journey. The man of the world can read his newspapers on the cars. If we are as much interested in the Bible as he is in the daily news, we shall be able to read a chapter on a railroad train. And if it is always in mind we shall find no day too short to read a lesson from the Scriptures.—National Presbyterian.

From Presumptuous Sins.

There is a good old prayer in the Bible to be kept from presumptuous sins. It is well for men in business to repeat it when the temptations to run hazardous risks are so abundant. The most disgraceful fall I ever witnessed in a prominent church member arose from his own presumption that he could safely use a small part of a trust fund committed to him and would certainly replace it. Instead of replacing it he took more, and he soon found himself on a toboggan slide that carried him down to destruction. Venturing on God may be a noble act of faith; venturing on self is often an act of fatal folly. A good rule is never to do what we cannot conscientiously ask God to prosper, and never to go where we cannot ask our Master to go with us.—Evangelist.

God.

A fire mist and a planet,
A crystal and a cell,
A jellyfish and a saurian
And caves where the cavemen dwell,
Then a sense of law and beauty
And a face turned from the clod—
Some call it evolution,
And others call it God.

A haze on the far horizon,
The infinite, tender sky;
The ripe, rich tints of the cornfields,
And the wild geese sailing high,
And all over upland and lowland
The charm of the goldenrod—
Some of us call it autumn,
And others call it God.

Like the tides on a crescent seabeach
When the moon is new and thin,
Into our hearts high yearnings
Come welling and surging in,
Come from the mystic ocean,
Whose rim no foot has trod—
Some of us call it longing;
Others call it God.

A picket from on duty,
A mother starved for her brood,
Socrates drinking the hemlock
And Jesus on the rood,
The million who, humble and nameless,
The straight, hard pathway trod—
Some call it consecration,
And others call it God.

—W. H. Carruth in Christian Register.

A Faithful Traitor

CHAPTER XXI., AND LAST.

The waves were rusing in, forced more quickly landward by the strong south wind. The long reach of moss-covered rocks that extended in places for nearly a mile upon the shore of the little seaside village of Westport was fast being covered by the big white-capped waves. From where she sat, in the shelter of an old disused boat, Elizabeth watched the jagged tops of the rocks she now knew so well disappear gradually beneath the mass of rolling water. Sometimes the waves would recede swiftly, and the dark rocks with their swirling draperies of seaweed would stand out clearly for an instant; then back would come the great volume of water with a roar and a furious dashing of foam and cloud-like spray, and under would go the rocks again, to be lost for some hours beneath the noisy, glorious, ever-restless sea.

"It argues that there must be something very combative in my nature," she said to Mrs. Proctor, when she had confessed what a powerful sympathy there was between herself and the autumnal gales that were sweeping over the coast; "but I cannot describe to you how I love the sea when it is violent! I love the wind to come blustering across the waves; I love to see the waves break with a thunderous noise into foam upon the beach—it makes my heart thrill! I hope you are not afraid of me!" she added with her rare sweet laugh, when she had finished her confession.

"I am not likely to be," Mrs. Proctor replied, with a smile, "for your feelings are my own. I too love the strong wind, the big foaming waves, and the noise. My placid appearance, you see, Elizabeth, is all a sham!"

It was with infinite relief that the old schoolmistress welcomed the great change in the girl. All through the hot peaceful summer days Elizabeth had given her much cause for anxiety. Not even the daily contact with Lady Feodora's baby-girl, who had been sent with her nurse and Miss Peile to join Elizabeth and Mrs. Proctor when Lady Feo and her husband started for America two days after they had followed Richard Saville to the grave, seemed to rouse the girl from her gloomy mood.

When Feo had rushed down for half a day before leaving her baby and taking her hurried departure to America, she had gone down to the water's edge to have a confidential chat with Elizabeth. She had not intended to tell the girl all the new and exciting elements that had been introduced into Antony's story; but, misled by Elizabeth's calm manner, Feo had broken through her caution, and all that had happened, all that was likely to happen, was confided to her. The effect of this on Elizabeth had been very different from what Lady Feo had expected. It was not of Antony's future and his problematical freedom that the girl thought; it was of the dead man—of his extraordinary nature—such a strange mixture of intellect and baseness—of the suffering he must have passed through before letting his evil passions eat, canker-like, through his higher, nobler qualities, that she thought unceasingly. Over and over again, when Feo had gone across the sea, Elizabeth would sit alone recalling what she had heard, and there would come to her a vision of the quiet distinguished-looking man as he had walked slowly in and out of the shadows and the moonlight, speaking now and again so sadly, so wistfully of his heart's love for her.

"Perhaps, if it had not been for me, these two men would have gone through their lives in peace to the end!" she would say to herself.

"Oh, grannie was right!" she said to herself bitterly on one occasion. "I should never have gone out into the world; I should never have let myself dream and hope and seek life as others do! Did I not feel that there would be trouble when I found that Stonebury was so near his—his home? I ought never to have gone to Stonebury—never to have gone to Speede. I cast aside poor grannie's wish, and this is my punishment!"

Out of this morbid, unnatural, and yet at times so entirely natural a frame of mind Elizabeth was suddenly swept one morning in early September. She woke at dawn to hear the sea roaring and breaking over the rocks. The still, smooth brilliancy of the waters was gone; where the floating shifting veil of jewels had been there were a thousand angry white-crested waves. Beyond, as far as her eyes could reach, there stretched this tumult of angry, restless waters, with foam that flew high in the air and a sound that had in it the music of hope, of freedom, of vigor.

Elizabeth flung open her window; the salt wind, drenched with rain, beat upon her and sent her back breathless yet suddenly excited into the room. Half an hour later she was dressed and out in the storm. When she came in to breakfast she amazed them all. She was absolutely beautiful.

"Oh, it is like a return of life!" she said to Mrs. Proctor later in the morning. "I seem to be able to breathe freely; the wind has taken something heavy from my heart and my head. I have been thinking such dreadful things lately!"

In that moment of mental release she spoke of all her unhappy morbid thoughts. Mrs. Proctor took the girl in her arms.

"My dear child, why did you not bring your troubles to me?" she scolded tenderly. "Such thoughts were natural to you, but they were mischievous. Why did you hug such phantoms? And what do you mean by saying that life and life's happiness are not for you? Did I not sweep away all those foolish ideas before? Elizabeth, I want you to be a strong, sensible woman; you have that in you which promises every good thing; but your happiness lies in your own hands. I have given back to you your mother's memory; now I am going to give back to you your father's, too. He was an unfortunate man, a weak man, a cruel man, in a sense, for he broke your mother's heart; but he was by birth a gentleman, and you, as his child, and as the child of my dear Margaret Latimar, are worthy to be the wife of any honorable man, even"—here Mrs. Proctor looked into the girl's eyes—"even the wife of Sir Antony Peile, if he should be free to ask you." Then, before Elizabeth could speak, the old lady went on very quietly. "Your grandmother never recovered from the shock of her daughter's association with the stage and marriage with an actor; she was not likely to grow more lenient when the news came of your father's many escapades and final desertion of your mother. She wanted, poor soul, to protect you from such an experience as poor Margaret had had; but she went to work the wrong way. Now I mean to show you, as I did once before, that life can be made beautiful under all aspects. You are to oblige me, Elizabeth," Mrs. Proctor quaintly added here, "by going out into the wind and rain again. You have no idea how much nicer-looking you are when your cheeks are red, your eyes are bright, and your lips smiling. I assure you I have no fear for your future happiness when I see you as you are now!"

Mrs. Proctor had said this a fortnight before the day on which Elizabeth was to be seen sitting under the old boat, watching the wild sea with a rush and thrill of strangest emotion in her heart. A letter had come only that morning from Feo, and Elizabeth was reading it through for the fourth or fifth time

"We shall be homeward-bound when this reaches you, darling," Feo had written; "and—oh, how glad I shall be to be back again! I believe I should like America very much; but of course we arrived here at the wrong time. The heat has been tremendous! I tell Gregory that his desire has evidently been to become a widower, for he has rushed me about everywhere. 'It's of no use coming so far and seeing nothing,' is what he says. So, Elizabeth dearest, I have been taken to a hundred places—Niagara, Chicago, Washington—oh, I can't mention them all—and I am almost exhausted! The tone of my letter will tell you the state of my spirits!

"Without bothering you with details, I will just give you my one big beautiful bit of news. Tony is free! I never doubted that we should find this to be the case; but Gregory and Tony himself were less sanguine. It is a short and a sad story, and, thank Heaven, my dear Tony has nothing to reproach himself with! He has behaved like an angel, as usual! That poor man Sandford is slowly dying; the trial of meeting the woman who had done him such an injury was too great a strain. He fainted at sight of her. In his intense excitement and agitation he broke a blood-vessel; the doctors say there is no possible hope for him. What a sad, sad life! All this seems to have made my boy an old man! Gregory told me that that woman imagined that Antony would do all sorts of things to her. My poor boy! He is too unhappy to think of punishing her. He left everything to Gregory; and now he has refused to leave America while Sandford lives. The woman, it is perhaps needless to say, has disappeared—none no one knows where; but there will be no search for her, no question of retribution. After all, she was but a tool in the hands of another and a stronger nature. I think, if Richard Saville could see and know the grief he has brought to my boy's heart, even he would be sorry. It is not for what he suffered through his strange unnatural hatred that Tony grieves—it is the loss of all he held so dear, the ruin of a love that was so beautiful! I cannot understand how any one could have abused such deep affection. You cannot think what a change there is in Tony; he is quite grave, he never smiles, and hardly speaks even to me; and yesterday I saw white hairs thick in his dear curly locks. I wish he would come back with us; but it is useless to argue with him. He looks upon this man as sacredly entrusted to him. I believe he means to go as far as he can into Richard's dealings with other people, and to do everything in his power to return good where there has been evil. I have, however, made him promise that he will come back for Christmas.

"Elizabeth"—the style of the letter changed here abruptly, as if the writer imagined that she was in the presence of her friend and speaking to her personally—"you are going to be very good to my boy, are you not, when he does come home? He never mentions your name. I believe he thinks he must not offer his love to you, after all that has passed. But, oh, how deeply he loves you, Elizabeth! I read it in his eyes when we talk of you—I see it trembling upon his lips!" Here there was a sort of blister on the paper, as if the writer had shed some tears, and Elizabeth herself could never finish the letter without tears coming into her own eyes.

"Oh, yes, I will be good to you, my love, when you come back to me!" she said passionately to herself, as she gazed across the great space of heaving water that separated him from her. "I will be good to you, Antony, only Christmas is so far off—so far off!"

* * * *

The day before the big Atlantic steamer Columbia—among whose passengers were Mr. and Lady Feodora Latimar—was expected at Liverpool there came a telegram to the little hotel at Westport. Elizabeth had been left behind by Mrs. Procter, who was due at Stonebury for the beginning of the new term, and the telegram was addressed to Miss Druro. It was from Feo, had been sent from Queenstown, and was somewhat brief—

"Come and meet us at Liverpool. Take one of the maids for a companion. We are due about eight in the morning. Tug will bring you to steamer."

There was great excitement when the telegram had been read aloud. Miss Peile seemed to change to her old brisk self again as she helped Elizabeth to prepare for her journey to Liverpool.

"It is so like Feo to send for you at the last moment," she said; "but I expect she thinks it will do you good, Elizabeth."

Elizabeth assented. She dressed herself as though in a dream, scarcely conscious of "frocks" innumerable questions, realizing nothing but that she was going to see Feo a few hours sooner than she expected, and that there was a vague sense of delight attaching to surprises and railway journeys. The girl was as yet so new to the experiences that constitute the real meaning of life to so many.

She looked very sweet and lovely in her black clothes and small, close-fitting bonnet when she was finally settled in the train, with one of the maids and a luncheon basket containing sufficient food for six, packed by Bertha Peile's own hands.

There was something novel and pleasant when Westport had been left behind. Elizabeth felt as if she were starting out on some adventurous expedition into a new world. She was thrilling with excitement; for the time there was no sadness in her heart. Anne Procter had not had the training of young feminine minds for twenty years without knowing something about them. Her endeavor to put Elizabeth into her proper groove was certain to be triumphantly successful. Fresh hope, excitement, eager anticipation transformed Elizabeth just then into what she was in reality—a girl in the exquisite freshness and beauty of life's morning, with spring in her heart and summer ahead in the future.

How that night slipped away Elizabeth could not have told. By six the next morning she and her attendant were down at the docks; by seven they were aboard the little tug, and were ploughing through the gray, muddy waters of the Mersey to where the Columbia was anchored. The vessel's spotless white decks were thronged with the passengers waiting to be taken ashore. Elizabeth was too intensely excited to note, as she would have done at another time, the picturesque scene around her. Her eyes wandered over the many magnificent ships, the innumerable boats and barges and other sea craft clustered thick in the river as though she were in a dream, till she found herself looking steadily at the great ocean liner. All at once her heart began to beat fiercely—it seemed to her that she knew now why Feo had sent for her. The great crisis of her life was at hand. It was no mere erratic thought that had prompted her friend's telegram.

Elizabeth's face grew pale. Standing on the deck of the little tug, she looked, in her modest black clothes, the same gentle sweet girl that she had looked on that June morning when she had sat on the stone stairs outside Richard Saville's rooms in the old Temple chambers. The tug swung to gradually under the big steamer, and, after a moment or two, Elizabeth found herself being helped up the gangway by the maid. The confusion was tremendous. Everybody was rushing to and fro, shouting, greeting, expostulating. Baggage was being carried from the cabins to the tug; some of the passengers were eagerly following their trunks and boxes, only too glad to reach the shore. Elizabeth had never imagined that such a scene of bewildering bustle and excitement could be possible. She grew dazed; and then everything seemed to become clear again, for Feo's arms were around her neck, and Feo's lips were pressing kisses on her cheeks, while Gregory, smiling and sunburnt, was standing close at hand, awaiting his turn.

Lady Feo cut short his welcoming in her own prompt fashion.

"You can kiss Elizabeth afterwards," she said hastily. "She is a dear sweet girl to have done as I told her! Now she is coming to help me. There are a hundred things you can do, too," she said to the maid. "Go along to my state-room, No. 9—it is on this deck—any one will show it to you. Crisp will receive you with joy. Poor soul, she has been ill all the voyage; she is a rag!"

There was nothing limp about Lady Feodora. Never had she looked more bewitching or more healthful and glowing than she did now in her trim gown of black serge and her close-fitting black felt hat. She dragged Elizabeth through the crowd somehow, chattering away as she went. She was evidently in a great state of excitement. All at once she dived into a little passage, all spotless white paint and shining brass, and knocked sharply at the door.

The moment it was opened Feo took hold of Elizabeth and pushed her inside. It was one of the large-sized deck state-rooms, quite a palatial little apartment, and had served as Lady Feodora's salon during the voyage. Antony Peile was sitting at the table, going carefully through a Bradshaw, with a pencil in his hand. He started to his feet and turned deadly pale when he saw Elizabeth.

Lady Feo turned to Elizabeth.

"Darling, you are going to forgive me? I have been nearly distracted about Tony all through the voyage. He has all but killed himself nursing that poor man. If I hadn't literally dragged him on board, Heaven knows where he would have been by this time! Probably he would have followed poor Sandford's example and gone to his grave! You have no idea how I fought with him to get him to come back to England! And now—now," Feo said, her agitation and excitement almost choking her—"now Elizabeth—will you believe it?—he refuses to come home with us! He says he is going off for a tour round the world! I know what that means—he will never come back any more! Look here—he is mapping out trains and things, so as to catch a ship at Southampton. He threatens to leave us immediately. There was only one hope left—I sent for you. He simply can't refuse you, if you ask him not to go! And now, if you want to make us all happy, Elizabeth, you will tell Tony he is to give up his mad nonsensical idea at once, and come back to London with us to-day!"

Feo had spoken her last words, and had disappered and closed the door sharply behind her, before Elizabeth and Antony had recovered themselves. Gradually the mist of intense surprise rolled away,—only the sweetness of reunion remained. They stood looking into each other's eyes in that moment of silence; the bustle and stamping of feet, the confusion of voices without, made a sort of harmonious murmur, but in that little refuge everything was calm and still.

Elizabeth had turned very pale. She was trembling in every limb; but, as her equanimity returned, and she saw Antony's face more clearly, as she noted the great change in him, as she caught his look—so grave, as Feo had written, with such a sprinkling of white in the dark-brown hair—her love went out suddenly to him.

"Oh, don't go—don't go!" she said, in a passionate whisper. "Feo—they—we all shall be so unhappy if you leave us!"

Their hands were clasped tightly now; a broad band of golden sunshine, falling upon the muddy river beyond, sent a reflection into the cabin.

"Don't go!" Elizabeth cried; and her eyes met his fearlessly.

"Elizabeth! Love!" he cried hoarsely. She was closer to him now—he could feel her hands trembling in his. "Do you know what you are asking?" he said. "Can you forget? Can you forgive? I have caused you so much suffering! I have been so wrong, so cruel, so weak, so selfish! It—it is not possible you can love me, Elizabeth!"

Elizabeth looked at him for a moment.

"Don't go," she whispered again; "or—or, if you will go, let me accompany you, love!"

Antony caught her to his breast with a cry of exquisite joy, and their lips met. Outside the sunshine had shifted and spread; it fell across the deck now, and came through the open window, casting a flood of glory round about where the lovers stood.

DOG ATTACKED A COW.

Cow Was Handicapped in Defense and Was Badly Bitten.

Wednesday afternoon about 4 o'clock a cow belonging to John McCarthy, of South Second street, was attacked by a savage bulldog belonging to Alexander Kane, of Cottage place. The cow was tied to a stake in a vacant lot near McCarthy's house, and was quietly chewing the cud of contentment, when the dog rushed up and attacked her.

Handicapped as the cow was by a chain and halter, she fought fiercely against her enemy, but was getting the worst of the encounter when a man came up with a club and beat the dog off.

In the attack the dog tried to get at the cow's throat, and in the effort bit her tongue, face and shoulders. It is said by spectators that if the dog had not been driven off when he was, he would certainly have killed the cow, and even as it was the animal was so badly frightened that she will take a long time to recover.

Aaron Newman, of Astor place, caught the dog and tied him up where he is awaiting his owner. The matter was reported to Chief Grant. Kane said that he had the dog tied up all day Wednesday, but that some one slipped into the yard and cut the rope. McCarthy will no doubt bring some action against Kane.

THE BIBLE AND STRONG DRINK.

A Lively Discussion at Reform Hall Last Evening

The last chance to argue upon the liquor question and the attitude of the Bible towards using strong drink, was given the members and friends of the Reform Club last night. Those who took advantage of the opportunity to speak were Ethan Lanphear, Robert Armstrong, Rev. A. A. Phelps, Charles Raybert, Mr. Johnson and Benjamin Hand. The speakers took one side or the other, that the Bible forbade the using of strong drink, or else that there was nothing in it to prohibit.

The president, Wm. Smith, did not decide the debate last night but deferred rendering a decision until further consideration. Next Thursday night another discussion, "The Devil in the Box," will be opened. During last night's meeting Mrs. Manley sang a solo and there were two signers to the pledge.

SHOT GAME LEGALLY, BUT WAS FINED $60

Strange Conflict in Game Laws of Two States.

EXPENSIVE FOR J. H. GREEN.

KILLED RABBITS IN NEW YORK, BUT FINED IN NEW JERSEY.

The Season for Shooting Rabbits in New York is Now Open in New York, But Not in New Jersey and Rabbits Shot in Former State and Brought to This State Make Possessor Liable to Fine of $30 Each.

A week ago J. Harry Green, a New York business man who resides in North Plainfield, went up in New York State on a hunting expedition for rabbits, the time for their shooting being legal in that State. He succeeded in bagging six of them, but only decided to bring four home with him.

Somewhat proud of his trophies, he left New York and crossed the Liberty street ferry and took a train for Plainfield. Knowing that he had legally shot the rabbits in New York State he did not attempt to conceal them after his arrival within the limits of New Jersey, where rabbits are still prohibited game. On the train Percy C. Ohl, an officer in the Union, Middlesex and Somerset Counties Game Protective Association, saw Mr. Green with the game swung over his back. He immediately concluded that the rabbits must have been shot in New Jersey in violation of the game laws. As Mr. Ohl has always been energetic in exposing and securing punishment for violators of the State game laws, he concluded that it was his duty to do the same to Mr. Green.

When Mr. Green arrived in this city he went to his home in North Plainfield serenely satisfied with the success of his hunting trip. Mr. Ohl proceeded to the home of Freeholder Andrew Lutkins and notified him of what he supposed was a violation of the State game laws. Freeholder Lutkins in turn notified Game Warden Sebring, of Bound Brook, and the latter came to this city and made an investigation of the case. Of course, he found that the rabbits had been killed in New York in a perfectly legal manner, but on looking into the law he saw that there was a fine of $30 for each rabbit found in the possession of anyone in New Jersey before the open season arrived. The law made no allowances as to where the game was shot. Possession of the rabbits was all that the law provided for.

Mr. Green consulted a lawyer and found that though he had shot the rabbits legally in New York he was guilty of a violation of the New Jersey game laws, and yesterday afternoon he paid $60 to Warden Sebring for the four rabbits found in his possession.

HUNTED FOR HUNGRY MEN.

Plenty of Edibles That Were Not Served to the Delegates.

A pleasant preface to the Christian Endeavor meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church last night was a supper in charge of the young ladies of the church to which the gentlemen were invited, with this provision, however, that they each pay 25 cents for their meal.

The idea originated late yesterday afternoon in the minds of some of the young folks, after dinner had been served to the delegates who attended the all-day session of the Mission Workers, and a great deal of food was left. So the young ladies went out into the highways and byways and compelled the men to come in. It was a genuine man hunt.

In spite of their pains, only a few male friends could be found at that late hour so situated that they could attend, but those who did go enjoyed a good supper, plenty to eat and everything well cooked. If any went anticipating a meal of warmed-over things, they were disappointed.

The money raised in this way went towards paying for some new china dishes that have just been purchased.

The Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session of the semi-annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Circles of the East Association of New Jersey was held in the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday. The speakers were Mrs. Dr. Luther, a returned missionary, and Mrs. Dr. Gould, from Nahlore, India. The delegates left for their homes soon after 4 o'clock.

Mr. Childs Around Vote Getting.

Samuel S. Childs, of Bernards, who is the Democratic nominee for Assembly from Somerset county, visited the borough Thursday and was cordially greeted by membeers of his own party as well as Republicans.

FEDERATION OF CLUBS.

MRS. EMILY E. WILLIAMSON, OF ELIZABETH, MADE PRESIDENT.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Plainfield, One of the Directors—Number of New Clubs Have Joined the Federation.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, October 29.—The second and last day of the convention of the Women's State Federation was held yesterday. Balloting for officers resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, Elizabeth; vice-presidents, Miss Elizabeth Vermilye, Englewood, Mrs. Kate B. Horton, Cranford, Mrs. Fanny J. Taylor, Newark; corresponding secretary, Miss Minnie H. Magie, East Orange; recording secretary, Miss Mary W. Butler, Montclair; treasurer, Miss Madge Smith McClary, Rahway; auditor, Miss J. Hartshorne, Short Hills; directors, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Plainfield, Miss Bella Snyder, Caldwell, and Mrs. Emma W. Newbury, Jersey City, Miss Jenkins, Boontoon, Mrs. VanHorten, Jersey City, and Miss Endicott, Atlantic City.

Miss Gaines, the retiring president, said that she hoped to see the State Federation amalgamated into a national federation.

The following clubs, it was reported, had joined the federation during the last year: Seven Oak Club, Bridgeton; School Teachers' Guild, Newark; Town Improvement Association, Montclair; Allegro Club, Bayonne; City Improvement Society, New Brunswick, and Women's Civil Federation, Elizabeth.

Mrs. Hamilton Gilhooly said the last named club was one of the new clubs of the federation. It had four hundred members. Its success was due to the strong personality, executive ability, and courageous conviction of its president, Mrs. Emily E. Williamson. It has begun on a purely literary and educational basis. It took an active interest in the educational, social, benevolent and other branches of municipal life. It had the hearty co-operation of city officials and merchants.

The afternoon session was devoted to a discussion on sociology by Miss Bird, of the New York Gospel Settlement; Miss Cornelia Bradford, of Jersey City; Miss Rose, of the New Century Guild, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Florence Howe Hall.

The Plainfield women registered were Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Mrs. S. R. Krom, Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. H. M. Maxson, Mrs. E. A. Parse, Miss C. R. Yates, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Mrs. Patterson, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, and Mrs. Frank Curtis.

FAST DRIVERS HELD UP.

WERE SPEEDING DOWN PARK AVENUE YESTERDAY.

Newton B. Smalley, William Baldwin and C. V. D. Corle Caught by Police Officers—The Trial Friday.

Complaint after complaint has come up to the police lately concerning fast driving on Park avenue within the city limits. The roundsman doing day duty takes a ride in that direction frequently afternoons, especially on Saturdays, when the owners of speedy horses are returning from the driving park.

Lately Roundsman Flynn has been on duty, but at his appearance on the avenue there would be a sudden pulling up of horses, and when the officer passed the horsemen the latter would be jogging along quietly enough and would look at him out of innocent eyes.

But yesterday afternoon Newton B. Smalley, William Baldwin and C. V. D. Corle were returning from the park. Chief Grant and Roundsman Flynn were riding out that way and they claim caught the three horsemen violating the ordinance, and speeding down Park avenue three abreast at a three-minute clip.

Why it was that the three didn't see the officers is not very plain. Perhaps they were so much interested in the race that they were oblivous to their surroundings. At any rate the officers came to them, brought the horses to a stop and ordered the men to appear in the City Court this morning at 9 o'clock. Smalley and Baldwin were there, but Corle didn't appear.

A smile went around the court room, when Smalley and Baldwin lined up against the rail. Every one knew them both, and also knew that their only fault was a love for a fast horse and that sometimes their anxiety to show what their animals could do led them to bursts of speed. Both pleaded not guilty and the trial was set down for next Friday morning at 9 o'clock.

—The Women's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will hold an important business meeting Wednesday afternoon.

HOT AFTER GAMBLERS.

REV. T. C. DAVIS' PLAINSPOKEN SERMON AT BOUND BROOK.

Games, He Says, Keep Alleged Honorable Men From Attending Church—Threatens to Make Public Their Names.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, October 29.—Rev. Dr. T. E. Davis, who is almost as well-known in Plainfield among the church workers as he is in this place, is hot after the gamblers of this section. Last Sunday he preached a sermon on "Bound Brook Gambiers and Gambling Exposed."

While no names were mentioned, Dr. Davis was so pointed in his location of the gambling places that nearly every one in the town knew where the places are. After giving a history of gambling and touching on the widespread vice, in which the Prince of Wales was called the most noted of gamblers, Dr. Davis came down to local matters and said:

"But if we come nearer home, into the very streets of our own village, into many a house in our own town, we will find this evil carried on secretly, behind closed blinds and doors, by men who are being robbed at the gambling table and whose wives and children are being made to suffer.

"'Why do not more men attend church?' was my text last Sunday night. Only one letter received by me in answer to 100 queries sent out gave the answer—because of gambling in the town.

"I tell you there is more gambling going on here than most of you know of, and this is one of the reasons why, this morning and evening, some men are not in this church of God. Last night, if it were no exception to the general rule, there was a party of men gambling with cards and money until long after midnight. They are not of the lowest class of men. They are prominent in our town. They are business men who would call themselves honorable men.

"I have the list of these men who go to that place. It would astonish you if I should tell you their names. Another place in Bound Brook where gambling is carried on at least three nights in each week is in a building owned and occupied by one of the railroad companies. Here eight orten men meet to gamble with cards for money.

"Two other places that I know of, one in Main street and another a short distance away, are almost nightly the scene of gambling with cards. I openly admire the woman who found her husband in one of these places, and not only drove every one out of the place but saved her husband from the vice."

Dr. Davis says that unless these gambling places are closed at once he will preach on the subject again in two weeks and at that time mention the names of men he knows who frequent them.

TALKED OF MISSION WORK.

Rev. A. I. Martine Addresses Warren Chapel Endeavorers.

The Christian Endeavor meeting at Warren chapel was addressed last night by Rev. A. I. Martine, of Dunellen, upon the subject of mission work. The time usually given up to prayers and testimonies was taken by Mr. Martine for his address.

The speaker quoted extensively from the Psalms, and used as his real subject "The Greatness of the Church." He showed how the people can make the church great and raise her to the dignity that God intends her to reach. This is not done, said he, by running dancing halls and billiard tables in connection with the church. Dancing and billiards are wrong when conducted under the auspices of the church.

Mr. Martine urged all those present to consider they are as much responsible for the souls of the heathen as the missionaries who are sent out to convert them, for everyone can help, he said, by their prayers and through their pocketbooks.

Volunteers Wanted.

The Relief Association would be glad if two ladies would volunteer to take charge of the "Mother's Sewing Class" which meets at the Relief rooms, 544 West Front street, Friday afternoons at 2 o'clock. Ladies to visit among the beneficiaries are also much needed. Will the friends of the association please remember that donations of worn clothing are desired and any matererial even the contents of piece bags can be made use of.

Euchre Club Organized.

The Watchung Avenue Euchre Club met last Wednesday evening and reorganized for the winter. Mrs. Robert Dryden was elected president; Mrs. Peter Schultz, secretary, and Harry B. Salkeld, treasurer. The club will meet every two weeks at the home of a member.

REGREANT LOVER RAN OFF WITH $1,500 CASH.

TRUSTED A DECEITFUL MAN.

GUSTAVE GERS DECAMPED WITH PROSPECTIVE WIFE'S WEALTH.

Mrs. Wedemeyer Gave Him the Money to Go to Newark to Complete the Purchase of a Saloon for Her, But He Has Gone Where No One Knows—Police Are Looking for the Deceptor.

Another case of misplaced confidence has just come to light, and now a borough woman, who was also a prospective bride, is bemoaning her fate and realizing what a fickle thing human nature is. Last week Mrs. Christine Wedemeyer had $1,500 that she hasn't today, and more than that, she had a sweetheart whom she was to have married last Wednesday. Now she has neither, and the police are scouring the country for the man who took the $1,500, but in the capacity of a sweetheart and prospective husband. Mrs. Wedemeyer has no further use for him.

Gustav Gers is a German, and since Mrs. Wedemeyer's husband's death, has managed her hotel and saloon business on Somerset street.

When Mrs. Wedemeyer sold out her business to Charles Jensen, a few weeks ago, she began to look around for another opening. She finally decided upon a little saloon in Newark which was to cost her $1,500. This she decided to buy. Monday she gathered together what money she could and found she had $1,500 altogether. Part of it was in a check given to her by Murphy & Blatz, the rest in cash.

Mrs. Wedemeyer had the check cashed, and then handing over the entire sum in bills and gold to Gers, sent him to Newark to pay the purchase money on the little saloon.

It was quite early in the morning when Gers started for Newark, and nothing more was thought of him until the afternoon was well advanced and Ger's hadn't returned. When night came and the head man still was absent, Mrs. Wedemeyer became alarmed and went up to Murphy & Blatz's law offices and had them telephone to Ballantine & Co., the Newark brewers, where Gers was to pay the money, to see if he had been there. He had not. Then Mrs. Wedemeyer's fears were confirmed; she was sure that her trusted employee had run away, taking with him all the money money she had in the world.

A visit to the Dime Savings Bank the next morning showed her that Monday morning Gers had drawn $175 which he had on deposit there. Then Mrs. Wedemeyer knowing that the man had really gone set the police on his track. Where he is no one knows for he had covered up his tracks well.

Gustav and Mrs. Wedemeyer were engaged to be married, and the ceremony was to have taken placeWednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Gers were then to move to Newark, where Mr Gers was to run the business. Mrs. Wedemeyer is glad that her intended husband developed this bad trait of character before their marriage, but she would like to see that $1,500 again.

BICYCLISTS COLLIDE.

Mr. Ernie on Wrong Side of Street and Admits His Blame.

Yesterday afternoon on West Front street in front of Henry Liefke's bakery, Mrs. E. D. Barrett, of East Fifth street, had an accident while riding her wheel. She was riding on the right of the road, when Mr. Ernie, draughtsman at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, accompanied by his friend, Mr. Williams, came along on their wheels and tried to pass Mrs. Barrett on the wrong side of the street. Mr. Williams escaped, but Mr. Ernie collided with Mrs. Barrett's wheel, and the front wheel was completely wrecked. The rim was smashed and the spokes were badly twisted. Fortunately neither rider was injured. Mr. Ernie admitted that it was his fault and agreed at once to pay for having the wheel repaired. Mrs. Barrett accepted the offer in a very pleasant manner and stated that she wanted only what was due her. This is the second accident of a similar nature that Mrs. Barrett has experienced in one week.

Will They Petition Again.

The City Council will meet in regular session Monday evening, November 7th, and it is understood that the Plainfield Street Railway Company will petition that body to grant them a franchise for the eastern extension.

A SINCERE FAREWELL.

A FITTING EXPRESSION OF ESTEEM FOR MISS SHINN.

She is Soon to Leave for Missionary Fields in Far Off India—Baptists Make Presentation She Will Remember.

Last evening at the First Baptist church the Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor Societies of the church, together with a large number of the members of the church, met and gave a farewell reception to Miss Julia Shinn, who, for sometime past, has been the faithful and efficient church missionary looking after the members of the home department of the Sunday-school and other church interests. After a course of preparation at the training school at Newton, Mass., she will go to Burmah, India, as a missionary.

The first part of the programme was devoted to the presentation of a dialogue entitled "The Higher Patriotism." Miss Velma Oakley acted as the leader and introduced the representatives from the different countries as follows: Japan, Miss Miriam Sherwin; China, Miss Ella Serrell; Congo Free State, Miss Nettie Haffner; Egypt, Miss Daisy Bogart; Turkey, Miss Bessie Wilson; America, Miss May Serrell; India, Miss Sadie Mantz; Christian, representing the Banner of the Cross, Miss Mattison. Each one of the above had a part to recite which was along the line of missionary work, and at the close Miss Madeline Evans gave the recessional, while Miss Beulah VanWinkle recited the "Hindu Widow." Mrs. Tennyson presided at the piano and every part was perfectly given.

At this time Miss Shinn was called to the platform where she was presented with a handsome traveling dress case by George F. Brown. The gift was from the members of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society. Miss Shinn was also presented with a chatelaine bag by Miss Bessie Wilson on behalf of the Junior Christian Endeavorers.

Mr. Biglow, president of the Senior Society, who had charge of the exercises, suggested that each person present append a greeting on a piece of paper and place the same in the dress case for Miss Shinn to read at her leisure. This was done, and another pleasing feature was the silver offering which was given to Miss Shinn.

NICK KELLY IN COURT AGAIN.

But Released Because of Want of Evidence.

Nicholas Kelly, of the West End, was in the City Court again this morning as defendant in another disorderly case. This time the complainant didn't appear, and for the want of testimony against him Nick was discharged.

Nick's story was that last Saturday he went into Frederick Westphal's butcher shop on Liberty street and ordered some meat. When the meat was handed to him he felt of the package, and, suspecting it was not right, opened it and claims that there was nothing in the package but scraps. Nick had paid his money, and so demanded it back. After a few words, the clerk called a policeman and had Nick arrested.

The butcher's story was that Nick was under the influence of liquor and begun to use profane language in the shop before ladies. As the complainant had left the city, it was quite evident that he didn't wish to push the charge against Nick, so City Judge DeMeza dismissed the matter.

Sole Agent For Lowney.

L. W. Randolph, the prescription druggist, is to be congratulated upon securing the sole agency in Plainfield for Lowney's celebrated candies, bonbons, chocolates, etc. These goods are second to none made, and are considered by a vast army of connoisseurs to be the best. Mr. Randolph received today his first shipment of these goods and they are now on sale. He invites the inspection of all.

Ladies' Relief are Surprised.

The Women's Relief Corps were treated to a surprise last night in the shape of fourteen ladies from Dahlgren Corps, No. 27, of Elizabeth. The visit was entirely unexpected, but the ladies of the Relief invited the guests down stairs to where their fair was in progress and provided them with supper. The evening was passed with recitations, readings and music.

A Missionary Spoke.

Mrs. Dr. Gould, a missionary from Nahlore, India, addressed the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening. She spoke of her work in that vast country, and was listened to with interest.

W. R. Rushmore will return from a business trip to Chicago today.

Rufus C. Larew, of West Fourth street, who has been ill, is improving.

LAND FOR BOULEVARD.

COMMISSIONERS FOR CONDEMNATION NOW SITTING.

They Will Not be Able to Finish Their Work by Nov. 1st—County Will Present Facts About Improvement.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Oct. 29—The commission to condemn land for the widening of Westfield avenue, held its third public session yesterday at the court house. Testimony of but a few persons has been heard, because of the inability of a number of property owners to attend, and it was found that the commission will not be able to conclude its work by Nov. 1st, the time set by Judge VanSyckel for it to file its report. Attorney Coddington was therefore instructed to obtain from the court an extension of the time to Nov. 15th. This extension is necessary because besides the property owners yet to be heard, several estates are to be represented by counsel, and then the county desires to present some facts to the commission, which will consume another sitting.

Frank Bergen was present and was heard by the commissioners. He said he desired to speak on the general aspects of the situation. He did not believe the county ought to take a foot of ground without compensation, although the old laws gave the State that right. The law providing for the Westfield avenue improvement had in it a clause copied from that which authorized the Hudson county boulevard, which provided that in awarding damages the commissions should take from the total damage to property owners whatever amount they would be benefited by the improvement, awarding the net damages. Under that clause the Hudson county commissioners had in cases where land was vacant awarded only nominal damages. They had not taken such action, however, where houses had to be moved, for there the property owners were entitled to compensation. There was but one case of which he had heard, where appeals were taken from the awards of the Hudson county commissioners and then the jury had not allowed the claim.

If the claims of some property owners were allowed, the cost of making the improvement to Westfield avenue would be enormous, but he was confident that with careful adjudication just damages would be given, and then the cost would not be so large as to make the improvement a burden on the county.

GRAND LODGE DEGREE

The society will meet again in two weeks, and will meet at intervals through the winter to hold sociables.

WOMEN RUN TROLLEY THROUGH LINCOLN.

Spectacular Incidents Carried Out by Silas Dashing Drake.

SILVER SPIKE WAS DRIVEN.

MISS EGEL MANIPULATED THE MOTOR LIKE A VETERAN.

Two Car Loads of Representative Citizens Witnessed the Great Event—Mayor Drake Was in His Glory—Bouquet Prevented to Superintendent Radel—A Bottle of Champagne Broken Over the Dashboard.

The opening of the extension of the Brunswick Traction Company between Dunellen and Bound Brook this morning was accompanied with a wealth of spectacular incidents on the part of the people and officials of Lincoln, in which Miss Emma Egel, president of the Lincoln Common Council, and the other members of the Lincoln government played a conspicuous part.

Accompanied by a band of music, two cars containing fifty of the representatives citizens of Bound Brook and Middlesex county, left Bound Brook shortly after 9 o'clock to make the first trip over new extension. As the cars passed over Peters' brook bridge, the dividing line between Somerset and Middlesex counties, Mayor Richard Brokaw, of Bound Brook, immersed the dashboard of the first trolley car with a bottle of champagne to celebrate the end of the contentions between the officials of the two counties growing out of the applications for franchises.

As the first car reached the western limits of Lincoln, Mayor Drake, Miss Emma Egel, president of the Common Council, the other women members of the Common Council and a number of Lincoln residents boarded the car. Edward Radel, superintendent of the traction company, who had run the car to this point, then retired from the front platform and delivered the manipulation of the motor into the hands of Miss Egel, who ran the car to the center of Lincoln. Miss Egel performed the duties of motorman or motoress like a veteran, running the car at good speed and clanging the bell to warn the excited residents of the community, who were out in full force waving flags and shooting off fireworks, to get out of the way. All the factory whistles were blowing full blast as the cars came into Lincoln.

In front of the Lincoln statute the cars were stopped, and a picture of Miss Egel, as motoress, was taken to be developed for the benefit of future generations to gaze upon. Then a bevy of school children threw bouquets at the trolley cars and Mayor Drake, ascending a soap box, made an impromptu speech and presented Superintendent Radel with a mammoth bouquet of flowers.

In the meantime Mayor Drake had been wearing a large silver spike set in his vest to resemble a scarf pin. This he took out with a flourish, and while another photograph was being taken Miss Egel struck the first few blows with a gilded maul driving the last spike to complete the construction of the road. Then the other women Councilmen were given a few whacks at the silver spike, as well as a number of the invited guests.

With the band again playing and factory whistles tooting, the cars resumed their trip, with Miss Egel at the motor, and continued to this city without further incident except a demonstration from the people living along the line of the road.

The return trip was made with Mrs. Flora Wrench, a member of the Lincoln Council, at the motor. At Lincoln on the return trip a banquet was served to the guests by Mayor Drake.

This completes the last link in the extensions of the Brunswick Traction Company, and opens up fifty miles of trolley roads to Plainfield.

Death of Mrs. Green.

The death of Mrs. Harriet S. Greene, wife of Thomas B. Greene, of this city, died last evening just before midnight, after an illness extending for a short time past. Mrs. Greene has been a resident of Plainfield for several years, and both she and her husband have lived retired lives. The funeral services will be held from the late residence, No. 172 East Front street, next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Keep in mind that Scott's Emulsion contains the hypophosphites.

These alone make it of great value for all affections of the nervous system.

It also contains glycerine, a most valuable, soothing and healing agent. Then there is the cod-liver oil, acknowledged by all physicians as the best remedy for poor blood and loss in weight.

These three great remedial agents blended into a creamy Emulsion, make a remarkable tissue builder.

FORMING NEW CABINET

M. Dupuy Has Accepted President Faure's Appointment.

FASHODA CASE UNSETTLED

France, It Is Said, Will Give Up Fashoda for a Consideration—British Cabinet Council Reported to Have Decided That Marchand Must Withdraw Unconditionally.

London, Oct. 29.—A dispatch from Paris to a London news agency says that M. Dupuy has informed President Faure that he is prepared to undertake the formation of a cabinet.

Paris, Oct. 29.—M. Dupuy, who apparently accepts the task of forming a new ministry, conferred with MM. Loubet, Deschanel and Poincare yesterday.

A conference of three hours' duration took place yesterday between Captain Baratier, the bearer of dispatches from Major Marchand, and M. Delcasse, as the result of which the foreign minister communicated with President Faure.

The unfavorable tone of the English news received here causes little disturbance. France will cede Fashoda provided that she be compensated for its relinquishment by the concession of a Nile port.

The Gaulois asserts that the Fashoda question was settled three days ago, when M. Delcasse agreed to abandon Fashoda completely in return for certain compensations which should be subsequently determined upon.

London, Oct. 29.—The Pall Mall Gazette briefly sums up the situation as the result of Thursday's cabinet council as follows:

"Marchand must be withdrawn from Fashoda unconditionally. When this has been done it will be determined whether the questions which France has raised will admit of discussion.

"Every facility will be afforded by England to assist Marchand's withdrawal.

"If he is not withdrawn there will be no interference with his remaining at Fashoda. He will be treated with every courtesy as a foreign visitor, but will be regarded in no other light.

"It will, therefore, be left to France to adopt active measures that would precipitate a conflict.

"There is reason to believe, the Gazette continues, "that while Russia has counselled France to tide over the present difficulty to avoid coming to blows with England, she has distinctly promised at no distant date to throw her weight into the scale for the purpose of bringing the whole Egyptian question of British occupation to the front for settlement."

The Gazette intimates that it would be expedient for England to anticipate Russia by now making a specific declaration of her Egyptian policy.

A dispatch to the Central News from Paris says that President Faure has authorized the statement that no settlement has been reached between England and France in regard to Fashoda.

A dispatch from Paris to a local news agency says:

"A telegram from Toulon states that all of the boats attached to the active fleet and coas defence flotilla came into the harbor last evening. They will exchange their practice torpedoes for service projectiles to-day."

Methodist General Conference.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—The committee which will select the place for the meeting of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in 1900, will come to Chicago next Tuesday and the Methodist Social Union of this city has appointed a committee to secure, if possible, the choice of Chicago.

The committee has already visited a number of cities from which invitations have been received, among them being Saratoga, Ocean Grove, Winona, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Indianapolis and St. Louis.

Work on the Battleships.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 29.—Work on the battleships Kentucky, Kearsarge and Illinois, at Newport News, is progressing rapidly. The two former are about 75 per cent. completed and the latter nearly 50 per cent.

Yesterday there arrived for the Kentucky a steel stern post and propeller frame weighing fifteen tons. It is expected that the trial trips of the Kentucky and Kearsarge will take place not later than January 1.

Protectorate Denied.

London, Oct. 29.—There does not seem to be the slightest ground for the report of yesterday that the British cabinet had decided to declare a protectorate over Egypt.

It was based solely on a London dispatch to the Paris Soir.

The papers do not comment upon the statement and the St. James Gazette alone alludes to the subject, urging the government to adopt such a course.

THANKSGIVING NOVEMBER 24.

President McKinley Issues a Proclamation Announcing the Day.

Washington, Oct. 29.—President McKinley yesterday issued the following proclamation:

By the President of the United States:

A PROCLAMATION.

The approaching November brings to mind the customs of our ancestors, hallowed by time and rooted in our most sacred traditions, of giving thanks to Almighty God for all the blessings he has vouchsafed to us during the past year.

Few years in our history afford such cause for thanksgiving. We have been blessed by abundant harvests, our trade and commerce have wonderfully increased, our public credit has been improved and strengthened, all sections of our common country have been brought together and knitted into closer bonds of national purpose and unity.

The skies have been for a time darkened by the cloud of war, but as we were compelled to take up the sword in the cause of humanity, we are permitted to rejoice that the conflict has been of brief duration and the losses we have had to mourn, though grievous and important, have been so few, considering the great results accomplished, as to inspire us with gratitude and praise to the Lord of Hosts. We had laud and magnify his holy name that the cessation of hostilities came so soon as to spare both sides the countless sorrows and disasters that attend protracted war.

I do therefore invite all my fellow citizens, as well as those who may be at sea, or sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe Thursday, the twenty-fourth day of November, as a day of national thanksgiving, to come together in their several places of worship for a service of praise and thanks to Almighty God for all the blessings of the year; for the mildness of the seasons and the fruitfulness of the soil; for the continued prosperity of the people, devotion and valor of our countrymen; for the glory of our victory and the hope of a righteous peace, and to pray that the divine guidance which has brought us heretofore to safety and honor may be graciously continued in the days to come.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-eighth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-third.

WILLIAM McKINLEY.

By the President,

JOHN HAY,
Secretary of State.

Sixteen Lives Lost.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 29.—The steamboat L. R. Doty, with sixteen aboard, is believed to have gone down on Lake Michigan with all hands on board.

The Doty left Chicago on Monday with a tow and has not been heard from since. She was owned by the Cleveland Transit Company. Yesterday morning the owners received the following dispatch from Chicago:

"The fate of the Cleveland steamship L. R. Doty, reported lost twenty-five miles off Kenosha, Wis., is no longer in doubt. Pieces of wreckage were brought to the Chicago life saving station this morning, and positively identified as having been a portion of the lost vessel. No tidings of the crew has been received, but the life savers are firm in the belief that the sixteen men who took the vessel out of Chicago have perished."

Leiter's New Enterprise.

Providence, Oct. 29.—It is stated on authority which appears to be unquestioned, that Joseph Leiter, son of the Chicago millionaire, who, during the last year was much talked about owing to his extensive wheat dealings, has purchased the Rhode Island Locomotive Works, and that it is his purpose to begin the manufacture of locomotives under the patents the concern holds, and also manufacture the Wheelock stationary engine under patents owned by a Chicago firm.

The price paid fo rthe property cannot be learned, but it is thought to be near a million dollars. Mr. Leiter is understood to represent a syndicate of rich iron and steel men, who are bent upon monopolizing all the big plants like the Rhode Island Locomotive works.

Marchand at Khartoum.

Cairo, Oct. 29.—A boat recently dispatched to Fashoda has reached Khartoum on its return journey, with Major Marchand on board. The major deemed it necessary to bring personally to Cairo the unfinished portion of his report of his explorations. Captain Germain was left in command of the French mission at Fashoda.

Major Marchand left Fashoda on Sunday and arrived at Khartoum yesterday morning. He will start for Cairo to-day.

As the other Frenchmen remain at Fashoda, Major Marchand's departure from there is not regarded as a settlement of the question as to the possession of that place, which is in dispute between Great Brotain and France.

Wants to Raise the Maine.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The Acme Wrecking Company of San Francisco has made a request upon the navy department for authority to raise the battleship Maine.

The company has had experience in raising vessels on the Pacific coast and representations have been made to the department as to its ability to accomplish the task in Havana harbor.

Cry of Fire Caused Stampede.

Lyons, Oct. 29.—Judge Isaac Lansing and Color Sergeant Wright addressed a Republican mass meeting at the Opera House here last night. Just as the judge was beginning a eulogy of Colonel Roosevelt a gang of small boys in the hall began shouting either "Van Wyck!" or "Fire."

The cry of fire was taken up and a stampede occurred.

Train Kills Three Men.

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Three men, supposed to be tramps, were struck and instantly killed by a New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad train near this station at 5.25 yesterday morning. The bodies have not been identified.

CLOSE OF THE JUBILEE

A Successful Termination of the Philadelphia Celebration.

AT INDEPENDENCE HALL

The Postponed Parade of Civic Societies Was a Grand Success. A Large Number of Floats Attracted Much Attention. The Mayor and Many Distinguished Guests Review the Demonstration.

Philadelphia, Oct. 29.—The fourth and last day of the peace jubilee in this city opened yesterday with good weather.

There were two events of almost equal importance arranged for the final day of the jubilee. One, the rededication of Independence Hall, where Mayor Warwick delivered the oration, and the other the civic parade, which was postponed from Wednesday, owing to bad weather.

The procession yesterday followed very much the same line of march as that of the military parade the previous day.

The line formed on Broad street, the head of the column resting on uCmberland street. The parade was formed in ten divisions, comprising all local labor, civil and social organizations, as well as many Masonic lodges and other fraternities from nearby towns. The policemen, firemen, letter carriers and all branches of the city government had men in line. Volunteer firemen from all parts of Pennsylvania were represented in the procession.

The most imposing feature of the parade, however, was the great number of elaborate floats built especially for the occasion.

The city of Philadelphia built fourteen floats, which were said to surpass anything of the kind ever before constructed in this country. They were entitled "Columbus at the Court of Spain," "The Landing of Columbus," "The Birth of the American Flag," "Washington Crossing the Delaware," "Our Reunited Country," "United Blue and Gray," "Liberty," "Dewey at Manila," "United We Stand for Civilization and Peace," "Hobson's Raft," "A Lesson in Humanity," "Proud of Her Boys," "After Many Years," "A Trifle Embarrassed," and "Our Heroes."

The art schools of the city prepared a number of floats representing different periods of art. Among the institutions having floats in line were the Philadelphia School of Design for Women, the Philadelphia Commercial Museum, with four floats representing our new colonies, "The Philippines," "Hawaii," "Porto Rico" and "Cuba." and the Master Builders' Mechanical Trades School.

The parade was reviewed by the mayor and other city officers from the reviewing stands in the court of honor. The streets were almost as crowded as they were Thursday, although thousands of persons left the city after the departure of the presidential party.

The warships served to draw many persons away from the down town districts, and all the morning the landing at the foot of Chestnut street was crowded wih visitors to the war vessels remaining in the river.

The Dolphin left for Annapolis and the New Orleans started for New York yesterday morning.

The Texas is still here, however, and was the Mecca for the majority of the visitors. The exact date for the departure of the Texas has not been determined. She will probably not leave here however, before Monday or Tuesday of next week, when she will return to New York.

Cargo of Coal for Havana.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 29.—The schooner Charles K. Schull has cleared from this port with a cargo of Pocahontas coal for Havana. This is the first shipment of fuel to Havana from any American port since the war and the first from this for a number of years.

Others will follow. The expansion of Norfolk's coal trade since war with Spain was declared has been marked. Coal is now shipped to far distant ports which never before received fuel from this source.

The development of trade with Spanish and South American ports is especially great of late.

Appointments by the President.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The president has announced these appointments:

Richard W. Burt, surveyor of customs at Peoria, Ill.; Stephen P. Barchet of Maryland, interpreter of the consulate at Hankow, China.

Navy—Surgeon Nelson M. Ferebac, to be medical director; Passed Assistant Engineer Frederic C. Brig to be chief engineer; Assistant Paymaster John H. Merriam, to be passed assistant paymaster; Acting Carpenter eorge W. A. Bailey, to be carpenter.

American Interests in China.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Rear Admiral Dewey has cabled the navy department that everything is quiet at Pekin and that no further troubles are anticipated, and that American interests in China are not in danger.

The Petrel is at Taku, the seaport of Tientsin, and as navigation of the Peiho river, upon which Tientsin is situated, closes in November, no attempt will be made to send the vessel up that stream. The Boston has sailed from Taku for Chefoo.

Jamaican Emigration to Cuba.

Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 29.—The recent wholesale emigration of indigent Jamaicans to the island of Cuba has evoked a protest from the American authorities at Santiago, and the local government here yesterday issued a memorandum quoting the protest of the American officials, and warning British subjects not to proceed to Cuba without they have adequate means of support.

Emperor Williams Journey.

Jaffa, Palestine, Oct. 29.—The Emperor and Empress of Germany were warmly welcomed by the German residents here on their arrival, after a hot and tiresome eight-hour drive from Kaifa.

They proceeded to-day on harseback to the camp at Babolwad, and expect to reach Jerusalem to-morrow.

PETITION FROM THE PILLAGERS.

Leech Lake Indians Want to Go on Cutting Dead and Down Timber.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The secretary of the interior has received a petition signed by 127 of the Pillager Indians on the Leech Lake reservation, Minnesota, asking "That we be allowed to continue the cutting of dead and down timber, as such cutting is our sole means of making a livelihood, and if deprived of the labor incident to such cutting we will be unable to provide for our women and children the coming winter and we will suffer greatly for the necessaries of life; and furthermore, we do not wish that white men married to Indian women should do the cutting to the exclusion of the Indians, and we do not wish them to log in the names of their wives and children."

Since ongCress gave authority to the secretary of the interior to cut dead and down timber on the reservations, with the intended purpose of furnishing work to the Indians, the Indians have complained that the white contractors are getting all of he benefits. This work has gone on for some time, and to it is partly traceable the dissatisfaction that caused the late trouble with he Pillager Indians.

Repors from the scene of the disturbances seemed to indicate that the Indians wanted the present system of cutting the dead and down timber discontinued.

Accordingly the secretary of the interior ordered that the work be suspended. This petition from a majority of the braves of the Pillager band on the Leech lake reservation lends an entirely different aspect to the situation, and will require prompt action by the Indian bureau.

THE PHILIPPINE SITUATION.

A Commercial Agreement Between the Spanish Commander and Gen. Otis.

Manila, Oct. 29.—Colonel Morales, representing eneral Rios, the Spanish commander in the Philippines, concluded a commmercial agreement with General Otis yesterday. The Manila customs authorities are authorized to clear Spanish or American ships for Iloilo, Cebu, or Zamboanga. For Caipez, Tacloban, Catbalogan, Misamis and Surigao they will require Spanish captains and a guarantee of legitimate commerce. For Dumaguete, Camiguin and Cycan they will require the sanction of General Rios. Calling at other Viscayan ports is forbidden.

General Rios reserves the right of search in all cases, and he can prohibit crews from landing.

Washington, Oct. 29.—A cable dispatch from Manila announces the serious illness of Major Robert B. C. Bement of the volunteer engineers, with typhoid fever. He was appointed from St. Paul, Minn.

San Francisco, Oct. 29.—Orders have been issued by General Merriam assigning for transportation to Manila on the Zealandia, Colonel W. C. Smith, headquarters staff, band, non-commissioned staff and seven companies of the First Tennessee regiment.

The number of officers is limited to 31, and men to 550. The vessel, which has begun to take on her freight, is docked at the Pacific street wharf. She will probably sail to-morrow.

Rubber Manufacturing Interests.

Naugatuck, Conn., Oct. 29.—It is announced here that at the meeting of the directors of the Goodyear Metallic Rubber Shoe Company in New York city last Thursday, George A. Lewis of this place, president of the company, and his son, Tracy F. Lewis, secretary and treasurer of the company, both presented their resignations and they were accepted.

William T. Rodenbach was elected secretary and treasurer, but the office of president was not filled.

The factory of the Beacon Falls Rubber Company in Beacon Falls, this state, is being refitted with machinery to manufacture rubber shoes, and it is stated that a new company is to operate the factory as an opposition plant.

It is rumored that Mr. Lewis and his son are connected in some way with the new company at Beacon Falls and that they are to hold prominent offices with the new company.

Regular Cabinet Meeting.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The president and Mrs. McKinley and the members of the cabinet, who attended the peace celebration at Philadelphia, reached Washington yesterday.

The regular cabinet meeting began at 11 o'clock.

Secretaries Long and Gage and Attorney General Griggs were absent. The members said after the meeting that nothing but routine business was transacted and would not admit that any action was taken in regard to the peace commission.

At 1 o'clock the president received in the east room the members of the American Society of Municipal Improvements, which is in session here.

Fatal Fire in Oswego.

Oswego, N. Y., Oct. 29.—The plant of the Tonkin Boiler and Engine Works was reduced to ashes early yesterday morning. Being a wooden structure, it burned quickly and had a good start before the alarm was given.

Otto Snyder, the watchman, perished in the flames. Snyder had a Newfoundland dog, which also perished.

The plant with its equipment cost $105,000; insurance $45,000.

Injunction for Gov. Tanner.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—The Tribune has the following:

"The coal operators of Illinois interested in the Virden situation are preparing a petition to be presented soon in one of the United States courts for an injunction to prevent Governor Tanner from interfering with the importation of laborers to take the places of the men formerly employed at the seat of trouble."

Lunatic Kills Conductor.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 29.—In a fight between a lunatic of the name of Sharpton and Conductor Bishop on a street car here yesterday, Bishop's throat was cut from ear to ear, causing his instant death.

Captain Thompson of the police force attempted to assist Bishop and was seriously cut about the face and neck. He may die. Sharpton is under arrest.

NEGOTIATIONS TO END?

Spanish Commissioners Will Return to Madrid.

SAGASTA MINISTRY TO END

The Work at Paris Ends Because the United States Refuses to Yield. The News Comes from Madrid That a New Conservative Ministry Will Be Formed. Washington Advices Are Favorable.

Madrid, Oct. 29.—Since the American peace commissioners disregard the propositions submitted on behalf of Spain by Senor Montero Rios, president o fthe Spanish commission, the Spanish commissioners will retire from Paris to Madrid, protesting in legal form.

The Sagasta government will then immediately resign.

It is learned that Premier Sagasta has decided to convene the Cortes immediately upon the return of the Spanish peace commissioners to Madrid and then resign.

Senor Silvela, the Conservative leader, will probably succeed him, and his ministry will be supported by eneral Martinez Campos, although the queen regent prefers a cabinet under General Polavieja.

Everything depends, however, upon the eventual result of the work of the peace commission.

Our Flag Down in Ladrones.

Madrid, Oct. 29.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Manila says that letters received there from the Ladrones assert that after the American cruiser Charleston had taken possession of the archipelago and hoisted the American ensign, she departed without leaving a garrison.

After she had gone the Spaniards lowered the Stars and Stripes and hoisted the Spanish flag, declaring that the islands reverted to Spain.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The president was enabled to lay before the cabinet yesterday very encouraging reports from Paris regarding the progress of the peace negotiations. The administration now fully believes that the negotiations will be concluded much sooner than was expected from the outlook a few days ago.

It can be stated authoritatively that the commissioners have not yet actually begun the discussion of the Philippine question, and further that it will not be taken up until next week.

Since the Spaniards have found that the American commission mean exactly what they say and that their presentation of the side of the United States is in reality an ultimatum, the uselessness of prolonged debate, it is said, has become apparent to the Spaniards, and it is now believed the Philippine discussion will be less protracted than expected some days ago.

The recent action of this country government in intimating that the negotiations were proceeding much too slowly has had its effect upon the Spanish commissioners and they are not likely to debate remaining propositions to the length they did the settlement of the Cuban debt.

Views Sent to the President.

Paris, Oct. 29.—Each member of the American peace commission has separately formulated his views regarding the Philippines in his own terms, and all have been forwarded to Washington.

The transmission has been by mail and cable, and this individual expression of views on the Philippines has thus been forwarded in order that President McKinley might have the advantage not only of the conclusions of each commissioner, but the added advantage of each commissioner's diction and personality in the determination of the ultimate instructions or advice to the commission.

The Americans are expected to present an expression of their expectations as to the control, disposition and government of the Philippines at next Monday's joint session, and they will look for final counsel from Washington on the subject to-day.

A report from Madrid, via a New York newspaper, has reached here to the effect that the Spanish peace commissioners will retire, protesting, from Paris, because the Americans disregard the Spanish propositions.

The Spanish commissioners deny the truth of the statement.

Four Men Break Jail.

Kingston, N. Y., Oct. 29.—There was a jail delivery at the Ulster county jail yesterday morning.

Four prisoners escaped. They were Joe Savage, and Thomas Lonroe, who were charged with burglary, John Davitt, held for murderous assault, and Frank Stafford, charged with highway robbery.

The men climbed up a water pipe to the ceiling and got through the floor to the woman's apartment, where they spread apart the thin iron rods in front of a window and lowered themselves to the ground on sheets tied together.

Savage, one of the men, escaped last Sunday, but was recaptured on Monday night.

Four men indicted for murder refused to go with the fugitives.

Mrs. Botkin Indicted in California.

San Francisco, Oct. 29.—The grand jury yesterday returned an indictment in the case of Mrs. Cordelia Botkin, charged with the murder of Mrs. John P. Demming of Dover, Del., to whom she is said to have sent poisoned candy by mail.

Santiago's Situation Excellent.

Washington, Oct. 29.—A cable dispatch from General Wood announcing his departure from Manzanillo, on the Hist, on a tour of inspection, informs the war department that the situation in Santiago is excellent.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

Business Has Been Considerably Affected by the Foreign Situation.

New York, Oct. 29.—Business has been more affected by foreign affairs than many realize. London's apprehension of war first caused advance in wheat and fears of monetary pressure here. Then came confidence in London, with a flight of French money across the channel, and stock markets here advanced, while wheat fell. Mobs in Paris did not mean to influence American interests from New York to San Francisco, but electric wires have made the world small. So the wires moved a cargo of wheat from the Pacific coast, started $2,500,000 more gold from Australia to this country on London account, and the selling of American securities one day and buying the next. There has been no domestic change of much importance, and the rise in prices of western railroad stock indicate that the supreme court decision against the Trunk Line Association is considered helpful to railroads.

Wheat rose three cents from Friday to Monday, and then fell 4 1-2 cents to Friday. But such changes do not represent actual conditions, and with western receipts for the week 9,558,205 bushels against 6,996,487 last year, nobody can pretend that holding of stocks by western farmers is an important factor. The Atlantic exports, flour included, amount to 3,796,830 bushels, against 3,864,649 last year, and Pacific exports 825,994 bushels against 1,326,803 last year, making 16,697,362 bushels in four weeks, against 19,418,847 last year, when the foreign demand was far beyond all precedent. In four weeks the western receipts have been over 40,150,699 bushels, against 30,723,288 last year, and yet prices are 25c. lower. Corn refused to follow wheat, but slightly advanced.

Cotton rose to 5 1-2 cents last week, but has fallen to 5 3-8 in spite of heavy frosts in parts of the growing region. This expresses strongly the belief that no curtailment of pield is possible that will affect the surplus more than the closing of eastern mills one month in three, and the reduction of consumption abroad.

Wool dealers have reached the conclusion that, with the heavy stocks on hand, it is no longer a question of profit but of avoiding losses, and concessions have brought a big increase in sales for the week, though for four weeks the aggregate has been only 14,898,900 pounds, against 36,394,098 last week, 28,320,100 in 1896, and 25,538,503 in 1892.

The volume of business reflected by clearing house returns in the month of October thus far has been 2.9 per cent. larger than last year, and 4.9 per cent. larger than in 1892, the increase for the last week being 10.8 per cent., compared with last year, and 15.1 per cent. compared with 1892. Foreign trade continues to show larger gains in exports than in imports over last year, the increase for three weeks being about $2,000,000, or 9 per cent. in exports, against $700,000 or 3 per cent. in imports, which indicates another heavy balance in favor of the United States for the month just closing. Failures for the three weeks have been $10,665,953 against $6,570,496 last year.

RECOMMENDATION FOR DREY FUS.

M. Bard Advises the Court of Cassation to Pronounce in Favor of Revision

Paris, Oct. 29.—The proceedings in the case of Dreyfus were resumed here before the court of cassation yesterday, the scenes within and without the court being similar to those of the previous day.

Counsellor Bard concluded his formal statement to the court as the result of his investigation of the available evidence, finally contending that the elements of evidence actually trustworthy were insufficient for the conviction of Dreyfus. He declared that if the so-called secret evidence was not produced immediately he would ask the court to conclude the inquiry and pronounce in favor of Dreyfus.

At the close of M. Bard's speech M. Mornard, counsel for Mme. Dreyfus, addressed the court, dealing with the conclusions contained in M. Bard's address.

M. Manau, the procureur general, at the beginning of his part of the discussion, exclaimed:

"Let us go on with revision!"

This utterance created a sensation in the court. M. Manau then declared that revision was a legal necessity. The false statements that had been made by Colonel Henry and various other matters which came to light in 1897, he went on to say, were of such a nature as to establish the innocence of Dreyfus.

The Procureur general asked the court of cassation to suspend the punishment of Dreyfus pending the decision of the court upon the question of revision of his trial.

London, Oct. 29—A Paris dispatch to the Central News says that a striking change is already evident in the aspect of the Dreyfus case, and the acquittal of Dreyfus is now regarded as being quite within the realm of possibility.

Tobacco Deal Completed.

New York, Oct. 29.—It was said in Wall street yesterday that the negotiations for the formation of he new company which will combine the plug tobacco interests that are in sympathy with or controlled by the American Tobacco Company, had been practically completed.

The capital of the new company, it was reported, will be between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000, half in common and half in preferred stock bearing dividends.

It will be called the Continental Tobacco Company.

The companies to be taken into the new concern are: P. J. Sorg Tobacco Company, Middletown, Ohio; P. Lorillard & Co., Jersey City; John Finzer & Brothers, Louisville; P. H. Mayo & Brother, Richmond, Va.; Daniel Scotten & Co., Detroit; Henry Wessinger Tobacco Company, Louisville, and the Drummond Tobacco Company of St. Louis, now controlled by the American Tobacco Company, together with the plug tobacco interests of the American Tobacco Company.

The vice president of the new concern, it is said, will be J. B. Duke, president of the American Tobacco Company.

It is estimated that the combined output of all the plants will be 105,000,000 pounds per annum, and hat the company will employ 15,000 persons.

Trolley Promoters Must Have It.

The article printed in the news columns of The Daily Press yesterday describing the projected consolidation of the trolley interests in northern New Jersey, so as to make a through line between Jersey City and Trenton—and eventually to Philadelphia—justifies all that The Daily Press has said to prevent the Council from granting the East Second street trolley franchise to the Plainfield Street Railway Company until better terms and stricter stipulations are accepted by the capitalists.

The capitalists who are in this deal have the whole route, with the exception of the East Second street link, within their grasp. Mr. Riker, secretary and treasurer of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and one of the principal promoters of this through line, made a dramatic statement that unless the Council granted a franchise in perpetuity the company would not touch it with a ten-thousand foot pole. Are there any sensible people who believe that the capitalists who own the Plainfield Street Railway Company, and are in this projected big deal, are going to forever abandon their efforts to secure the East Second street franchise? We guess not.

Every day the value of this link of road becomes more and more valuable in the light of developments among the trolley promoters and speculators.

The capitalists, it is plain to see, have got to secure this franchise because it is the pivotal one, as Mr. Riker confessed himself at the public hearing, to their plans. They may bluff and bluster about what they will do, but it can be depended upon as an assured thing that at the proper time—and it is not very far distant—the Plainfield Street Railway Company will bob up serenely and petition again for the granting of the franchise which they so dramatically declined last Monday night.

It is to be hoped that they will come to the people then with a kindlier feeling for the rights of the people. We have no doubt but what they will, and that the Common Council can arrange terms that will give better satisfaction than those of the ordinance which was under consideration last Monday.

There is one very important matter that should at an early date engage the attention of the City Council, and that is the present overhead drainage system now in vogue on most of the buildings in the business part of the city. This sort of thing is not only very annoying in rainy weather, but is positively dangerous in winter when the water freezes in cakes on the sidewalks.

The Elizabeth Journal takes an optomistic view of Assemblyman Murray's ballot-counting scheme and has the following comment to make on it:

Assemblyman Murray seems to have hit on a little device which can hardly be objected to even by the most scrutinizing constitutional lawyer, and he is getting out sample tally sheets and explaining his plan to all who are interested. If it is successful it will prove a boon to election officers, the voters, the newspapers and the public generally.

The plan of Democratic re-organization in Plainfield is interesting the Republicans to a great extent. The local G. O. P. has had undisputed sway for several years past, but with an energetic organization of their opponents their feeling of serenity will probably be disturbed.

James E. Martine will commence his campaigning tonight when he will address a meeting at Springfield on the issues of the State campaign. Next week he will devote his whole time to stumping the State, going wherever the State committee assigns him.

Plainfield Republicans are now looking with longing eyes upon the county clerkship nomination a year hence. The names of Sheriff Kirk and City Clerk MacMurray are both mentioned in connection with aspirants for the office.

Enthusiasm is described by one bright man as something that often carries people away and leaves them to return in disgust. That came pretty near hitting the local Republicans Thursday.

These are the days when General Apathy and Overconfidence gets in his fine work.

EMPEROR WILLIAM IN THE HOLY LAND.

Emperor William is never long at a time out of the public eye. His latest noteworthy act is a trip to Jerusalem and the dedication of a protestant church, with which is connected a new orphan asylum and hospital. The church of St. Mary the Great is an imposing structure and cost nearly $500,000.

PLAINFIELD AVENUE IN BAD SHAPE.

After Using That Street a Correspondent Calls Himself a Rough Rider.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—How long will the people who travel Plainfield avenue be subjected to its present condition? On this avenue near the southern city line a mudhole full width of the macadam has been allowed to exist for some years, only being in fair condition for passing vehicles during an extended dry season, while in time of heavy rain water rises to the height of wagon axles. At same times at other points on the avenue water crosses and recrosses the macadam, while at still other points the entire crown of the roadway is submerged giving the avenue the appearance of a river. While Plainfield avenue is one of the greatest thoroughfares contributing to the interests of the city, and should be among the first to receive attention, it would seem must have been placed last, or perhaps left off the list altogether.

A Plainfield Rough Rider.

The Companion's First Subscriber.

The Youth's Companion is probably the only periodical in the world seventy-two years of age, whose first subscriber is still living and still a constant reader of the paper. The subscriber who enjoys this unique distinction is Mrs. Hannah M. Parsons, of Brooklyn, New York, now in her 85th year. She was the little sister of a friend of Nathaniel Willis, father of N. P. Willis, the poet, and founder of The Youth's Companion. When Mr. Willis had resolved upon publishing a new paper for young people, his friend had him put down his sister's name as the first subscriber. The Companion's first issue was dated April 16, 1827, and for more than 70 years this first subscriber has continued to read and enjoy it. The volume for 1899 will be the best The Companion has ever published. The most popular of living writers will give the best work of their best hours to the entertainment of the hundreds of thousands of households in which The Youth's Companion is every week a welcome guest. New subscribers will receive all the remaining issues of 1898 free from the time of subscription, and the beautiful Companion Calendar for 1899—the most beautiful one ever given to Companion readers—in addition to The Companion for 52 weeks, a full year, to January, 1900 The Youth's Companion, 211 Columbus Avenue, Boston, Mass.

Michael Lyons, of Philadelphia, who has been visiting James Muldowney, of West Third street, has returned home.

Mrs. Maze Edwards, after a pleasant visit of some two months in the west with relatives, and a subsequent visit to New York, has returned to her home on West Front street.

Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury, of West Seventh street, was one of the dames who stood in line and received the guests at the sixth annual commemorative meeting of the New Jersey Society of the Colonial Dames of America, held in Jersey City Wednesday.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

That funny musical farce comedy, "McFadden's Row of Flats," will be the attraction at Music Hall tonight. It comes direct from its scene of triumph, with its many sights and novelties, said to be true to life in the Greater New York, and will prove a real innovation. The scenes are all laid in New York and by the author of "Chimmie Fadden." The company comprises such well-know artists as the eccentric Irishman, Tim McFadden, Joe J. Sullivan; the German comedian, Baumgartner, Harry Crandall; Miss Eatelle Wellington, the charming soubrette; Sadie Conoely, the droll and clever Irish humorist, and other character roles, among whom are a score of pretty girls. Among the decided novelties are the Bros. Speck, the funny dwarfs, commonly called Alex. and George, the Yellow Kids; the Five Nosses in their original musical act; the Little German Band, superior to all others and the funniest sensation of the season, making in all a company of artists interpreting one of the most amusing comedies, and adding such special features as none other now on the road. Laughter prevails from rise to fall of curtain. Special scenery and costumes, new songs and dances make the production complete.

* * * * *

The great possibilities of the continuous performance form of entertainment have never been so splendidly exploited as at Mr. Proctor's theatres this present season. The magnitude and wide range of the bills put forward have astonished the theatrical world and delighted the amusement-loving public, who have profited by Mr. Proctor's spirit and liberality. The even excellence of the weekly shows is another wonder, for it is no light task to get together fifteen or twenty "acts" of the highest class week after week. Yet that is what is being done at Proctor's Twenty third Street Theatre, and at the Pleasure Palace, East Fifty-eighth Street, New York, with never a break. Take the programmes at the two houses this week as an instance: At the Twenty-third Street house there are four turns, any one of which would formerly have been considered a sufficient attraction in itself, but here we have this cluster of bright stars, and supplemented by a dozen other acts all of which are excellent. The list is headed by that old time and ever verdent favorite, Maggie "McCloskey" Cline; John W. Ransone, the clever impersonator; Caron and Herbert, the clever acrobatic comiques, and Milton and Dollie Nobles in their excrutiating funny farce, "Why Walker Reformed." At the Pleasure Palace there is Robert Hilliard, presenting his pathetic and artistic little play, "The Littlest Girl," the prettiest serious offering in vaudeville. And when it is considered that all this may be enjoyed for a trifling sum, (25 and 50 cents) in theatres which for elegance and comfort are not bettered in New York, the achievement partakes of the marvelous.

Says That They Paid Up

An article appeared in The Daily Press of October 17th, inst., under the head of "Primaries in Somerset" in which it was alleged that at the primaries in Warren township the delegates were turned out of doors because of their refusal to pay their liquor bills. This is a fabrication of the whole cloth, and any one who was at my place on that day will deny that any one was put out or that any one refused to pay his bills. Any person who puts such statements in the papers has little to do and is not a safe man for a paper to rely upon. The public should be very careful how they deal with such liars as this! What will be the next canard?

We give no rewards, an offer of this kind is the meanest of deceptions. Our plan is to give every one a chance to try the merit of Ely's Cream Balm—the original Balm for the cure of Catarrah, Hay Fever and Cold in the Head, by mailing for 10 cents a trial size to test its curative powers. We mail the 50 cent size also and the druggist keeps it. Test it and you are sure to continue the treatment. Relief is immediate and a cure follows. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

TRAPPIST MONKS IN ALGIERS.

How They Live at the Famous Monastery of Staoueli.

If Algiers is at present a rather lawless paradise, the famous monastery of La Trappe de Staoueli is a paridise of peace. The life of the Trappist monk is no idle dream. He is the hardest laborer one can imagine. As I stroll about the farms and plantations, says a writer, I see monks digging potatoes, chopping wood, gathering grapes, drawing water, wheeling huge barrows of vegetables, directing the laborers in the vineyards, planting, hoeing, destroying weeds, trimming flower beds, toiling in the distillery, carpentering, bottling wine—doing a thousand things. Generally they are clad in sober brown or white habits, with hoods, stout boots and big straw hats. But sometimes, when their labors are very menial, they cover themselves up in a sort of loose blouse, such as a butcher might wear. In this they are unrecognizable. A day or two ago I was on the farm watching a herd of little black pigs fighting over their food, when a young laborer came up and began to talk—about pigs, naturally. He told me that he looked after them, and invited me to make the tour of the piggeries. The conversation slipped from the subject of pigs to that of bulls, from bulls to bull fights. Thinking the young man was a Spanish workman—half the world is Spanish at La Trappe de Staoueli—I drew out my cigarette case and offered him a cigarette. He refused it gently, saying: "It is forbidden; I have not smoked, I have not been outside these walls for fifteen years." And, turning up his blouse with a smile, he showed me his monkish habit underneath. I learned afterward that he and his father had been monks together at La Trappe. The father is buried now in the cemetery, and the son presides over the destinies of the Trappist pigs.

It is a mistake to believe, as many people do believe, that the Trappists never speak. Some of them may speak at certain times and in certain places with strangers. They may speak in order to give directions to the workmen in the fields and about the farms. But within the monastery and among themselves they preserve continual silence.

ETIQUETTE OF THE TOILET.

Peculiar Method of the Russians in Arranging the Hair.

"The etiquette of the toilet varies in different countries," says a contributor of Cassell's Magazine. "I can remember reaching a khan in Armenia once, accompanied by a big party of fellow travellers. Our party had wandered about for miles, and lost our way, and it was so late that we were too sleepy to eat. We were ushered into a long, low room, with beds on the ground about a yard from each other. I was the first to be awakened the next morning by a sunbeam dancing on my face, and on looking up, found that the occupants of the bed next to mine consisted of a man and his wife and a little girl of about three, who had apparently gone to bed in their clothes. In this instance the husband simply got up, shook himself and put on his boots; the lady braided her hair and put on her boots and the little child had gone to bed in its boots. They proved to be native Christians, who have a rooted hatred for soap and water, more intense even than that of Russian pilgrims, whom I remember on board a vessel going from Constantinople to Joppa. On fine days a barrel of water was brought up to that portion of the deck roped off for the accommodation of the Russian Pilgrims, who occupied themselves in singing hymns and making tea in a samovar, a utensil much beloved by an old aunt of mine, who informed me, in all seriousness, that she much preferred tea a la Russe, 'in a semaphore,' although she did not explain how she was going to get it there. The Russian pilgrim's toilet resembles the way in which the Chinese laundrymen dampen linen, for they would approach the barrel, suck up a mouthful of water, and carefully blow it over the head of some companion whose hair they were arranging."

Wisconsin's Fairest Daughter.

Miss Elizabeth Stephenson, who was selected to christen the battleship Wisconsin at San Francisco, is one of the fairest daughters of the Badger state. She is the child of ex-Congressman Isaac Stephenson of Marinette, and is just 21 years old. The Wisconsin sponser was born in Marinette and was educated at Milwaukee-Dower College and LaSalle College, near Boston. She was graduated from the latter institution with high honors. Miss Stephenson is a magnificent specimen of young womanhood. She is almost six feet tall and slender. She has dark eyes and a bright, attractive face. Her father is quite wealthy.

Dressy Silk Blouse.

In spite of the edict which has gone forth declaring tight bodices to be the proper attire this fall and winter, many handsome blouse waists are still shown for evening and dressy wear, and it is safe to predict that this becoming style of garment will remain in favor with a large majority of the feminine world.

A smart bodice in Cuban red silk is made with a tight fitting back, the material in the front gathered on to a

V-shaped yoke which is trimmed across both ways with straps of black velvet ribbon, with appliques of lace arranged inside the squares thus formed. The sleeves are trimmed in a similar manner and are finished with puffs of silk at the top.

Fancy Collars.

A pretty finish to the neck of a dress is at all times desirable, the plain linen collars being only suitable for morning or business wear. Cravats are made in silk, silk muslin, lace, and chiffon, and the foundation of each is a plain band, a well fitting linen collar being useful for this purpose.

White silk is employed for a dainty neck finishing. The material is slightly fulled on the band and is edged top and bottom with a narrow ruche of chiffon, which also trims the bow in front which is strapped with a band of white ribbon. Another collar has the band covered with pale pink tucked silk. The bows and long ends are finished with tucks and fine lace.

Bed Candlesticks.

A particularly acceptable present after a visit to a country house or to a bridal pair who will possess an out-of-town residence is a set of bed-candlesticks. These in silver pewter or old brass are sure to be found on the landing of the staircase duly set out on a table, copying the English fashion. Gas, oil lamps, and electric lights cannot banish the bed-candle, whose lighting by a merry house party in an old English castle hall has been made the subject of a fine picture.

Cheese Sandwiches.

Delicious cheese sandwiches may be made by cooking in a double boiler half a pound of grated cheese with half a cup of cream or milk, a tiny pinch of mustard, and a little salt. Thicken with a teaspoonful of flour; when thoroughly cooked, and just before removing from the fire, add a well-beaten egg. Have ready some thin slices of toasted bread or some crackers, and spread. These sandwiches must be eaten while hot.

Mrs. Timkins was taking her son to school for the first time, and after impressing the school-master with the necessity of his having a thorough good education, finished up by saying: "And be sure he learns Latin."

"But, my dear madam," said the school-master, "Latin is a dead language."

"All right," said Mrs. Timkins; "he'll want it. He's going to be an undertaker."

TRUE FRIENDS.

Mary Ann stood on the back porch churning. Her dress was neatly tucked away from the contact of splashing buttermilk, and her eyes rested on the blue flecks of sky, showing through the leaves of a Virginia creeper which covered the lattice; but her thoughts were remote enough from flecks of sky, green leaves or splashing buttermilk.

Inside the dim sitting room her mother nodded to the musical rythm of the churn, and the buzzing of two flies, high on the window pane. The needle, stuck half way through the cross stitches in the heel of Mary Ann's stocking, was held perilously close to the gray head bending over it, and bobbing up again at regular intervals. The warm, languorous June day courted sleep, the churn dasher outside rose and fell monotonously, and its cadence mingled with Mrs. Smither's dreams.

Presently there came a rap of bony knuckles at the front door. Mrs. Smithers's head gave a final jerk upward and her eyes blinked open. She rose and hastened to the door, the stocking still in her hand. "Oh, is it you, Liza?" she said. "Come right in. I was half asleep when you knocked—these long summer days make one so drowsy."

Liza gave her skirts a shake.

"It's awful hard for people to keep clean in Kansas," she complained, "with the wind blowin' the dust all over creation." She seated herself and glanced smilingly about her. "It's nice in here, though," she added, "and I'm mighty glad I found you at home, because I came on special business."

"I hope you didn't come beggin' for the church," said Mrs. Smithers. "There ain't a red cent in the house, and won't be until Mary Ann finishes the churnin' and sells the butter."

"That's her churnin' now, ain't it?" asked Liza.

"Yes. Why?"

"I've got somethin' to say I don't want her to hear, that's all." She took off her mittens and smoothed them out across her lap.

"Sarah," she began solemnly, after an awkward pause, "I've always been a good friend to you, haven't I?"

"'Bout as good as any friend I've got," answered Mrs. Smithers, with a curious intonation which was lost on Liza, so intent was she upon the subject in hand.

"Well, I've come to do you a friend's turn now." Here she paused again, and Mrs. Smithers, drawing her needle through, held it suspended, waiting to hear. "Sometimes," Liza went on, "people's own kinfolks is the very last ones to hear things that's goin' on—talk, I mean—and that ain't right. If there's talk goin' on the ones nearest of kin ought to be the first to hear it. Leastways that's my opinion. Ain't it, yours, Sarah?"

"It depends," said Sarah dryly.

Liza rolled the mittens neatly together and turned the hem of one over both.

"Now, supposin'," she said, at a slight loss for words for once, "that I had a girl like Mary Ann—"

Mrs. Smithers involuntarily started. For a second she shook as if with a chill.

"And people was goin' roun' talkin' about her? Wouldn't it be your duty to come and tell me?"

Mrs. Smithers did not reply. Her wrinkled face had turned a palish yellow under the tan of the Kansas winds. The stocking had fallen into her lap.

"Of course it would," continued Liza, "and so I'm goin' to tell you this, because I think you ought to know it."

She coughed twice behind her hand before she began again.

"As near as I can make out," she said, "it was this way: Jake Saunders was comin' along the road from Mulvane Saturday night—I think it was; yes, I'm sure it was Saturday night—and he saw two young people driving towards him in a buggy in the shadow of the trees. It was bright moonlight, you know, and when they came out from under the shadow the young fellow threw his arms around the girl's neck and kissed her! Kissed her right there in the moonlight where Jake Saunders could see, where anybody could 'er seen what had a mind to look! Why, in the name of common sense didn't he kiss her when they were in the shadow of the trees? That's what I'd like to know. Sarah, that young fellow was Charlie Sullivan, and the girl—well, the girl was—Mary Ann!"

Mrs. Smithers had mechanically taken up her work and was slowly running the long needle through the heel of Mary Ann's stocking. She pressed the threads down with her thumb nail and snipped off a stray end with her scissors. Her face was emotionless, as if carved in stone, but the fingers that held the scissors trembled a very little.

"You know Jake Saunders," Liza went on. "He can't keep nothin'. That was Saturday night, and before mornin' the whole town was alive with it. Everybody knew it, even the little children. Such things go like wildfire, once they get started, and the worst of it is they keep addin' and addin'. You wouldn't 'er known the story by Sunday, they'd put so many frills and furbelows to it."

She looked hard at Mrs. Smithers, searching in her stony features for some slight encouragement to proceed, but, finding none, she proceeded anyway.

"Now, seein' I'm your best friend, Sarah, I thought it would be a kindness to come and tell you what they were sayin'. It seemed sort of pitiful like to hear everybody talkin' about Mary Ann, and you smilin' around unbeknownst—smilin' maybe at the very people what was doin' the worst talkin'."

She fidgeted a moment, while the sound of the churn filled up the silence.

"As I said to Jane Hawkins," she wound up lamely, "it wasn't right. If nobody else would come and tell you, I said, I would."

Mrs. Smithers cleared her throat.

"I see by the mornin' paper," she said, "that's wheat's gone up. That'll be a good thing for Kansas—that is, if the railroads don't charge mor'n it's worth to haul it away. This ought to be a good year for Kansas with such big wheat crops and the corn so fine."

"Yes; the corn's fine enough right now," retorted Liza, "but there's no telling what it'll be before the season's over. Like as not the hot winds will kill it, or the chinch bugs'll eat it all up."

She flipped a speck of dust from her sleeve and took up the old subject where she had left off.

"If I was a lone widder with one daughter, and people was talkin' about her, I'd thank somebody to come and tell me. That's what I would do."

"I try not to think of the chinch-bugs," said Mrs. Smithers. "If they come, let 'em come. Any way, half a crop in Kansas is better than a whole crop in any other state. That's what the matter with Kansas. Her own people run her down."

Liza suddenly left her chair and stood erect, her starched skirts rustling with indignation.

"You're a queer creature, Sarah Smithers," she said. "You never were like other people, and you never will be, I guess. When a friend comes to do you a kindness you ain't got a civil word in your head for her. This is the last time I'll go out of my way to accommodate' you—the very last time!"

Mrs. Smithers remained seated.

"You'll excuse me not goin' to the door with you, I hope," said she, without offering any special reason for not doing so; and her visitor flaunted out of the house and down the walk alone, heedlessly brushing against the inoffensive rows of phlox and sweet williams as she went.

When the gate had closed upon her with a loud click, Mrs. Smithers raised her head and listened for the sound of the churn. It had ceased.

"Mary Ann!" she called softly.

"Ma'am," answered Mary Ann from the pantry where she stood, moulding a shining pat of butter.

"Come here a minute."

Mary Ann printed a clover leaf on the butter, laid it on a plate, and appeared in the doorway, holding it out upon the palm of her hand.

"Look at this," she said, "ain't it yellow as gold?"

"Yes," smiled her mother, "but put it down and come here."

She put the plate on the table and approached her mother, her face flushed with the exercise of her work. She knelt down by her.

"There's something I want to tell you," she said, clasping the old woman's waist with her strong young arms, and throwing back her head with an estatic gesture, her eyes aglow.

"Wait," said Mrs. Smithers. "Maybe I can guess what it is. Let me see." She pondered, her finger on her lip. "Saturday night you and Charley Sullivan were out driving along in the shadow of the trees. You were driving towards Mulvane. He asked you to be his wife and you said you would. What a naughty girl, to promise without her mother's consent! Just then you drove out of the shadow into the moonlight, and he threw his arms around you—and kissed you!"

The girl smiled and dimpled.

"Why, mother!" she cried. "How did you know?"

"I'm a mind reader," Mrs. Smithers answered; then, seeing the puzzled look on Mary Ann's face, she added: "No, dear, I'm not a mind reader, but I've got so many friends—good, true friends who come and tell me things they think I ought to know."

"I hear one of them coming now," said Mary Ann, rising from her knees. "You go to the door, mother. My face burns so."

Mrs. Smithers put down her work and went to the door. She half opened it and looked out.

Entering the gate was a middle-aged woman of ample proportions. As she approached the house her wide skirts filled up the narrow walk, bending the slender stalks of the flowers to the right and to the left. She panted as she climbed the steps, a broad smile further expanding her face across which the skin was stretched, drum like, to its utmost tension.

"How pretty your flowers always are, Mrs. Smithers," she gasped. "How do you ever get them to grow like that in Kansas?"

"I suppose stayin' at home and tendin' to 'em has somethin' to do with it," answered Mrs. Smithers grimly. At the same time she fastened the hook on the inside of the screen door.

Mrs. Hawkins stood outside, like a book agent, meekly waiting to be admitted.

"Ain't you goin' to let me in?" she asked.

Mrs. Smithers answered the question with another.

"Are you one of my friends?"

"Yes."

"Have you come to tell me something you think I ought to know?"

"Yes," answered Jane Hawkins.

"Well, then, I'm not at home," said Mrs. Smithers, and she slammed the door, drew the bolt and went back to her darning.—Peterson's Magazine

SHE WON AT LAST.

"Look here, Alice, I want you to understand clearly that I do not intend to have all my chances ruined by playing with you. Everybody knows that you can't act, my dear, and I think you must be almost aware of the fact yourself by this time. Your attempt at being pathetic is simply screamingly funny, and the gallery and the pit were guying you tonight all through my best scene. We shall have to go back to the original arrangement."

"You mean that Ella Denton will play the part?"

"Yes; I shall speak to Vivian about it to-morrow."

"Very well, dear, good-night. You won't be working very late, will you? You—you look rather tired."

"I'm a little worried—that's all. But I shan't work very long to-night. Good-night."

The woman went upstairs to bed; her husband lit a pipe, and dozed in the easy chair. They were not high enough up in their profession to be Mr. and Mrs. Ainger on the playbills. She still called herself by her maiden name—Alice Fellowes.

Ainger was quite right about his wife's histronic ability. The play they were touring with had one splendid scene, in which a good actress always succeeded. Ainger himself acted well, and during the first few weeks of the tour had managed to carry this big scene through simply by his own exertions. But after a time he wearied of playing night after night with an actress who could not help him to make a big success, even though that actress was his wife. Hence the above conversation.

Ainger smoked his pipe and meditated. He was glad that he had spoken to his wife, and that she had been sensible enough to fall in with the proposed new arrangement at once. He had not expected that she would take it so kindly. Ella Benton, the actress who was going to take Mrs. Ainger's part, always played emotionally, to say the least of it, and Ainger smiled in anticipation of the big hit they would make next week when they played in another town. He lit another pipe. On the stage he was a villain and had to consume several cigarettes every evening, but in private life he preferred the less romantic pipe. He was really tired, to-night, and he changed his mind about working. After a few minutes he fell fast asleep in the easy chair, and the pipe dropped from his mouth unheeded.

When he awoke he noticed that the lamp in the room had burned very low. He looked at his watch—it was half-past two. He stepped into the hall, found a candle, lit it, put out the lamp in the sitting-room, and went upstairs to bed.

Mrs. Ainger awoke with a start as her husband entered the room.

"Sorry, dear, to wake you," said Ainger, "but those beastly stairs will creak, and—what have you been crying about, Alice?"

"I—er—haven't been crying—much. I couldn't get to sleep, so I read 'Romeo and Juliet' till my eyes ached, and the——"

"Well, Shakespeare doesn't usually make you cry——"

"Oh, Herbert, you needn't be so unkind. No, it wasn't Shakespeare that—I'm so unhappy. Can't you guess why? You are going to play again with that woman, Ella Denton, and—I—shall be out of the bill."

Ainger put his candle down, and sat on the edge of the bed. He was trying to think of the best thing to say.

"Well, my dear, I'm sure——"

Mrs. Ainger raised herself from the pillow.

"Don't you know, Herbert, why that makes me miserable? Don't you remember all that people used to say about you and Ella Denton before we were were married, and can't you think what the same people will say now if she takes my part? Oh, give me just one more chance; Herbert, I'll play my best to-morrow, I promise you I will—let me have another try . . "

Ainger was not a brute. He bent down to kiss his wife. I will see, dear—I will—"

He started back. "Why, Alice, I have it! You shall play to-morrow, and you shall make a big success—if you'll remember your feelings now. Be to-morrow as you are now, and you'll bring down the house."

And the following evening Mrs. Ainger remembered, with the result that the next morning a little paragraph appeared in the local paper:

"Enthusiastic scene at the Lyceum.—Theatre-goers were afforded a genuine treat last evening by the superb acting of Miss Alice Fellowes. We must candidly admit that until last evening, the inhabitants of Pedlingham had not seen Miss Fellowes at her best, owing, we understand, to a recent attack of influenza. Last night, however, Miss Fellowes showed no signs of her recent illness, and in her final scene in which she, as Jessica Bryans, the heroine of the play, has to confess her love to the villain (Mr. Herbert Ainger), the talented young actress fairly brought down the house. We have seldom seen such a display of enthusiasm as was exhibited last night at the Lyceum when the final curtain was lowered."

HEARD ABOUT MISSIONS.

Interesting Address Delivered in Crescent Avenue Church

The Young People's Missionary Societies of the First Presbyterian and Crescent Avenue churches met last evening in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church and listened to a very able address given on missionary work by Edward F. Reimer, of Princeton Theological Seminary.

Mr. Reimer is a talented speaker and he recited the progress of missionary work both in this and foreign countries. He spoke of the great work being accomplished by Christian Endeavorers all over the world, and said that now it can truly be stated that this society belts the globe. He urged more personal work on the part of young people. He quoted the fact that at present there are about five hundred students in Presbyterian colleges and universities that are preparing for foreign and home mission work, and in a year or two these students will be knocking at the door of the Board for Foreign Missions asking to be sent to the field of labor.

During Mr. Reimer's talk he told much of the condition of affairs in many foreign countries where there is need of the Gospel of Christ, and he excited a great interest among those present in the work. He exhibited a photograph of George Pearson, a missionary in China, who is being supported by the young people of this Presbytery. The meeting throughout was one of great interest and all felt that they had been helped as a result of Mr. Reimer's talk. During the service a vocal solo was given by Miss Charlotte Messersmith, accompanied on the piano by Miss Mabelle Force.

FELL FROM TOP OF A HOUSE.

Severe Injuries Received by a Carpenter at New Orange.

John Snyder, a carpenter, residing on Greenbrook road, who has been working on a new house at New Orange, near Cranford, fell from the top of the house this morning and suffered severe injuries. The distance is about 30 feet, and Snyder had to be assisted by fellow-workmen.

He was picked up and brought to his home after which Dr. Zeglio was called. It is impossible at present to determine the extent of his injuries, but Snyder is in a helpless condition. There was another man working on the house with Snyder and he fell a distance of twenty feet. The accident was caused by Snyder removing a support to the chimney. This caused the chimney to topple over and the two men were thrown from the building.

ROBBERY IN BOROUGH.

Coddington Avenue House Ransacked and Cash Stolen.

Yesterday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock some person or persons entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Waldron, on Coddington avenue, and, after ransacking the house, made way with a large quantity of pears and $8 in cash. Some of the pears were on the table in the dining room, while the others were in a closet.

The thieves entered the house through the cellar door, which was open, and they found it easy to get into the kitchen through another door which was unlocked. Many things about the first floor were disarranged and scattered about.

During the above-mentioned hours Mr. Waldron and his wife were out enjoying a drive, and when they returned they found that someone had been in the house. The matter was reported to the police, but this is another case where there is no clue upon which to work, for no one in the neighborhood remembers having seen any strange person or persons about Mr. Waldron's house or the neighborhood.

Recently another robbery was committed on the same street, when thieves entered the cellar of Corra Ryno's house and stole about fifteen cans of fruit put up by Mrs. Ryno. No clue to the thieves in this case could be found.

BOILING WATER WITHOUT FIRE.

It Can Be Done by Stirring With a Paddle For Five Hours.

It is possible to make a pail of water boil without putting it on the fire and without applying external heat to it in any way. In fact, you can make a pail of water boil by simply stirring it with a wooden paddle. The feat was recently performed in the physical laboratory of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md., and any one may do it with a little trouble and perseverance. All you have to do is to place your water in a pail—it may be ice water if necessary—and stir it with a wooden paddle. If you keep at it long enough it will certainly boil. Five hours of constant and rapid stirring are sufficient to perform the feat successfully. The water will, after a time, grow warm, and then it will grow hot—so hot, in fact, that you cannot hold your hand in it, and finally it will boil. Professor Ames of Johns Hopkins annually illustrates some of the phenomena of heat by having one of his students perform the trick in front of his class. It is a tiresome job, but it is perfectly feasible.

The point which Professor Ames wishes to illustrate is what is known as the mechanical equivalent of heat. It requires just so many pounds of work to develop a given quantity of heat. By turning the paddle in the water at a regular speed it is possible to find out just how much work is required to raise the temperature of the water one degree. The best measurement so far made, and, in fact, the one which is accepted as the standard of the world, is that which was measured in Johns Hopkins College.

Heat is developed in almost any substance which is subjected to continuous or very violent action. It is an old trick for a blacksmith to forge without a fire. Long continued and violent hammering on two pieces of wire will heat them to such an extent that they can be welded together. A lead bullet, if shot directly at a stone wall, will develop heat enough by the contact to melt and fall to the ground a molten mass. There are many other occasions wherein this mechanical development of heat becomes manifest. —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

STUMP PENCILS ARE MASCOTS.

Members of Stock Exchange Superstitious About Lead Sticks.

"Talking of hoodoos and mascots," said a member of the stock exchange, "the boys on the floor of the exchange are as suspicious as a lot of sailors. If you don't believe it you look at the lead pencils they are using the next time you are in the building.

"You won't find a man using a long lead pencil. Why? Because a long pencil is a 'hoodoo' of the worst kind. They always cut a new pencil in half before they sharpen it. Some of these pencils acquire the reputaton of being lucky.

"Less than a week ago I came down without my pencil, which, by the way, is a lucky one—every memorandum made with that pencil results in a profit for me—and I borrowed one from a friend on the floor. He handed me a stump about an inch long, and said: 'You can use that; it's a lucky pencil.'

"Sure enough, I made two deals in the morning, and each netted me a handsome profit.

"I was about to make a memorandum of some stock I had bought when my friend approached and said:

"'Here, take this pencil and let me have mine again. I've lost on every deal since I loaned it to you.'

"Sure enough, I lost on that deal and the luck went back to the owner of the pencil.

"When you get hold of a lucky pencil you want to hang to it.

"Some of the boys have little lucky pencils not more than an inch long, and they guard them as they would their lives.

"If you, through carelessness or accident, cause them to break the lead point they lose whatever regard they have for you and forever afterward regard you as inimical. Some of them wouldn't take $5 for a little piece of pencil worth considerably less than a cent."—New York Press.

A Woman of Faculty.

"It was the morning after the battle of Lexington that Mrs. Pond, the wife of Colonel Pond of West Dedham, was greatly astonished at seeing a company of about one hundred men stop in front of her house. She soon discovered that they were totally exhausted, having marched all night, and that on empty stomachs.

"They were in great haste for something to eat, but Mrs. Pond, not having expected them, was totally unprepared. With a woman's wit, however, she rose to meet the emergency. With the aid of a woman and a hired man she filled an enormous kettle full of water and placed it over the fire to boil, so that she might make some tasty pudding.

"There was a store not far off, and here some of the soldiers helped themselves to earthen dishes and pewter spoons, while others milked Mrs. Pond's ten cows, and still others stirred the pudding. The two servants meanwhile collected all the milk available around the neighborhood. Within an hour the meal was served, and the soldiers, refreshed and cheered, marched on to their destination."

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS. B. A. HEGEMAN, SR.

Contracted Acute Pneumonia and Passed Away Saturday.

TAKEN SICK IN NEW YORK.

ARRIVED HOME ONLY TO LIVE FOR A FEW HOURS.

Mrs. Hegeman Was Active in Church and Charitable Circles—A Member of the Crescent Avenue Church, But Attended Regularly With Her Husband at Trinity—Funeral Wednesday.

The community was deeply shocked yesterday when the sad news of the sudden death of Mrs. Catherine E. Hegeman, wife of Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Sr., of 37 Sycamore avenue, became known. Mrs. Hegeman's death was due to acute pneumonia, contracted within the past few days. She and Mr. Hegeman went to New York week before last for the purpose of spending two weeks at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Thursday last Mrs. Hegeman was taken ill with a cold, and as she did not improve it was thought best that she should return home. She returned under the medical treatment she was receiving Saturday afternoon with Mr. Hegeman. Dr. Jenkins was called at once and everything known to medical science was done to restore her health. At 5 o'clock that afternoon Mrs. Hegeman passed into a stupor and did not regain consciousness again. Her death occurred at 11 o'clock Saturday evening.

Mrs. Hegeman was 68 years old and was the daughter of the late Judge William J. Roome, of New York. During the past two years she has not enjoyed good health. The critical illness of her husband several months ago, when he passed through a violent attack of hiccoughs, had atendency to weaken her constitution considerably. However, she was not at any time considered seriously ill, and her sudden death is a terrible shock to her husband and her relatives. Dr. Jenkins called Dr. D. C. Adams in consultation, but it was soon learned that her life could not be spared.

Although Mrs. Hegeman was a member of the Crescent Avenue church, she attended Trinity Reformed church regularly with her husband, and was one of the most active workers in that church. She was a valuable member of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church and will be greatly missed by those with whom she came in contact, both in church work, and also as a member of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Management of Muhlenberg Hospital and the Board of Managers of the Children's Home. She was closely identified with charity and her works will follow her. She gave freely to those who were needy and in many channels her death will prove a great and inestimable loss. The bereaved husband and members of the family have the sympathy of the whole community in their deep hour of sadness.

The funeral services will be held next Wednesday afternoon from her late home at 3 o'clock, and interment will be in Hillside cemetery Thursday morning.

The death of Mrs. Hegeman leaves Miss Eleanor Roome, her sister, who resides adjoining the Hegeman residence, the only remaining member of a family of ten.

To be Interred at Hillside.

The death of Mrs. Minerva E. Disbrow, wife of Henry G. Disbrow, of Brooklyn, occurred last Saturday at her home No. 66 Morton street, Brooklyn. She was a sister of the late Mrs. F. H. Gardner, of this city. The funeral services were held in Brooklyn this morning at 8 o'clock, and interment will be in Hillside Cemetery this afternoon.

To Draft Resolutions of Condolence.

H. J. Martin, J. P. Laire and O. W. Dunham teachers in Trinity Reformed church Sunday school were yesterday appointed by the school as a committee to draft resolutions to be sent B. A. Hegeman, Sr., expressive of the sorrow of the officers, teachers and scholars at the death of Mrs. Hegeman, their friend and benefactor.

Plainfield Has Changed a Little.

John Eick, an old railroad man, who now lives in Germantown, was in town today for the first time in thirty years. Eick used to brake on a freight on the Central Railroad in '68, and then was quite a frequent visitor here. He said that the city "had changed a little."

THREE TEAMS ARE TIED.

CONTEST AMONG THE TRAPSHOOTERS IS VERY INTERESTING.

The Seventh Event Held at Dunellen Saturday—Weather Conditions Not Good for High Scores—Results of Shooting.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, October 31.—The seventh shoot under the auspices of the Central New Jersey Trap Shooters' League took place Saturday on the Dunellen Gun Club grounds. The conditions were not favorable for good scores. The light was very poor and the birds thrown against the background of foliage made it almost impossible for the marksmen to get sight of the targets before they had flown out of distance of the shot. The race for the Peters Cartridge Company's trophy is now very interesting. The Climax Club has scored two wins, Dunellen two and New Brunswick two. The next shoot of the League will be held on the Climax Club grounds, Saturday, November 12th, and should either Dunellen or Bound Brook win, the tie will be shot off with the Climax Club. Below the scores of Saturday's shoot will be found in detail:

DEMOCRATS WAKING UP.

ORGANIZATION PLANS TO BE DISCUSSED THIS EVENING.

The Meeting of the Representatives From Various City Wards Will be Held at Councilman Moffett's Office.

If the ideas now in course of consummation are carried out successfully, tonight will be an important one for the local Democrats, since it is the time for the committeemen on reorganization of the party machinery to meet and informally talk over what shall be done to put the Democrats on a thorough working basis in local politics.

Councilman Elmore D. Moffett, of the committee appointed at the primary in the Fourth ward, which was the first to take the initiative step in the matter of reorganization, has called the meeting of the representatives from the other wards to be held in his office, over Stephenson's restaurant, on North avenue, at 8 o'clock this evening. It is expected that every ward will be liberally represented by Democrats who are anxious to see the party made something more of than a mere name.

Just what plan will be decided upon is not known, and, in fact, will be only determined after a free and full expression of opinion among the Democrats on whom the reorganization plans depend for their success. It is likely, however, that a movement will be inaugurated which will aim to personally interest every member of the party in the city into active efforts for the success of a thorough and permanent organization.

ALL HAIL TO HALLOW E'EN!

Jack o'Lantern Shows His Face and Spirits Come From the Vasty Deep.

Hallow E'en comes tonight, and the small boy is meditating upon bonfires and pumpkin Jack o'Lanterns. It will not be many hours before timid young women will be going backward down cellar stairs looking for the faces of future husbands in mirrors. It is the day when chestnuts roast and candles give forth a mellow glow. Tomorrow is All Saints' Day and tonight spirits walk abroad.

If you can murmur incatnations you may summon spectres from the vasty deep and peer into the future. Every man may be his own seer and every woman may know at least the initials of her future husband. Apple peels will whirl over shapely shoulders and chestnuts upon a hot shovel will tell whether the true lover is disposed to be distant or to approach.

A SUCCESSFUL FAIR.

The red, white and blue quilt was disposed of privately. Everything on sale was disposed of before the fair closed and it will be a few days before the members will be able to tell exactly how much money was made.

Runyon's Third Suit Against the Road.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth Oct. 31.—Elmer E. Runyon, an Elizabeth nurseryman, has started a third suit against the New Jersey Central Railroad Company for $10,000 damages for being ejected from a train at Communipaw by the company's detectives because they suspected he was carrying packages for Edward Stoddard, a pony expressman of Elizabeth, and helping the latter to outwit the railroad company. Runyon, in his first suit, was nonsuited by Justice VanSyckel before the case went to the jury. Runyon carried the matter up to the Court of Appeals, which granted him a new trial. He then, in the first part of the month, began a second suit, which for some reason, he afterward discontinued. Now he has started another suit.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, October 31 — Constable Marsh, of Westfield, reported to the police here yesterday that Sergeant Henry S. Weber, of the First New Jersey Volunteers, whose home is in Westfield, is missing. The report says the soldier is probably demented. He is twenty-eight years old, and wore a moustache and goatee. He had on a brown suit and heavy black overcoat and black derby hat when he went away from home. He is six feet one and one-half inches in height.

—The Odd Ladies will hold a dime sociable tonight at Mrs. Bosterli's on Watchung avenue tonight. A good time expected.

HILLSIDE GOLF CLUB WON FROM BALTUSROL.

A Great Victory for the Local Golfers Saturday Afternoon.

THE SCORE WAS 18 to 6.

J. H. P. WHARTON WAS THE WINNER OF MRS. FISK CUP.

Three Players Who Were Regarded as Possible Winners, but Two of Them Fell Three Points Below Mr. Wharton, Whose Score was 12—Great Interest in Match Game—Grounds in Good Condition

After a close and exciting contest the play for the Mrs. Charles J. Fisk cup was decided last Saturday on the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. There were three players who were considered possible winners, J. H. P. Wharton, Carl Walz and A. R. Fisk. Mr. Wharton won the first honors by scoring 12 points, while the other two players each made 9 points. The cup is now the personal property of Mr. Wharton whose fine playing has won for him many honors in golf play.

An event of great interest on the links Saturday was the match play between the Hillside and Baltusrol Golf Club teams. The latter team is considered to be very strong, and being more experienced, was, of course, thought to be the winner. Such was not the case, however, for the home team won easily by a score of 18 to 6. At no time were the visitors in it and they were outplayed at every point. The score in detail follows:

HILLSIDE.		BALTUSROL.
Dumont	4	Candlor	0
Richards	6	Palmer	0
Fisk	0	Schroeder	6
Stockton	1	Cobb	0
Glenny	0	McKenzie	0
Wharton	7	Hervey	0

The golf grounds are now in excellent condition and during the winter months if the weather permits a great deal of work will be done on the links, so that by next season they will be superior to anything in this vicinity. New bunkers and hazards will be built and much will be done to improve the links. The past season since the new grounds were opened the members have gained much experience as to how the grounds want to be, and they will be fixed accordingly.

Next Saturday the girls' handicap play will be the feature on the grounds, and on the following Saturday play will be opened for the Chapman championship cup.

THIRD REGIMENT BOYS WON'T VOTE.

Will Not Cast Ballots for Either Candidate for Governor Unless at Home.

The voters of the Third Regiment, encamped at Pompton Lakes, almost to a man have signified their intention of not voting for either candidate for Governor in November unless they are allowed to go home to do so. Nearly five-sixths of the regiment are voters and the number of votes will therefore amount to over eight hundred. The members of Company G have already made a binding agreement not to vote in camp. Company I's men say they will not vote there, and from talk Companies A, H, M, F, B, D, E will also fall in line and refuse to vote in camp. Company L's members swear that they will not vote unless it be at home.

It is said that there is little prospect of the regiment leaving Pompton Lakes until after November 1st, and it is very doubtful if it will get away until after election. In fact, the prophets are forecasting another pay there, which means that the Third will remain until possibly the 15th of next month.

Do You Want Clothes?

Each article bears the manufacturer's name, and the goods are from leading New York and Boston clothing makers.

Fought the Constable.

A report comes from Washingtonville that Constable George Steward, of that place, and a Swede farm hand were engaged in a fistic encounter yesterday and that the constable received several blows in the face. It is said that the constable was trying to arrest the Swede and the latter refused to be arrested, hence the scrap. It is reported that the Swede got away and that a warrant has been issued for him.

FACE CUT WITH A KNIFE.

A FRACAS THAT OCCURRED IN A BOROUGH MARSHAL'S BARN.

Jules Berrek Accuses Martin Holmes of Doing the Cutting—Wound Not Serious—Men Were Evidently Drunk.

Early yesterday morning a stabbing affair occurred in Marshal George Wise's barn on Grandview avenue, at which time Jules Berrek, an employe of Mr. Wise, was badly cut about the face with a knife. The deed, according to Berrek's story, was committed by Martin Holmes, a resident of this city.

According to the injured man's story Holmes and one of his brothers were asleep in the barn when he returned home. He always sleeps in the barn and he went in to retire for the night. After he got inside he stumbled across Holmes and his brother. Evidently all hands were somewhat under the influence of liquor for a scrap followed, in which Berrek's face was cut with a knife. After the cutting the brothers escaped, and Berrek went to the house and awakened the inmates. His face was bleeding profusely and it was feared that he might bleed to death. The family at once sent for Dr. Rushmore and he dressed the wounds and made the man as comfortable as possible.

This morning Berrek appeared before Recorder Long and made a complaint against Martin Holmes, charging him with assault and battery. Holmes has not yet been found by the authorities.

RECORDER LONG RETURNS.

Disposed Justice in Borough Police Court Today.

Recorder Long, of the borough, has returned from his vacation spent in New York State, and this morning he held court for the first since his return. He had before him a man named James Totten, who has been in court before, and only a few days ago was released from Somervills, where he served ten days for being drunk and disorderly. The charge against Totten when he was arraignned this morning was drunk and disorderly, and Recorder Long fined him $3, which he paid. He then made a bee line for the nearest saloon.

After Six o'Clock Sale a Success.

Woodhull & Martin's dry goods store did a rushing business Saturday night after 6 o'clock as the result of the display advertisement in that day's Press. The unheard of prices brought out the people in great numbers, and the way things sold was enough to make one open their eyes. The special sale was advertised to commence at 6 o'clock, and at the stroke of the hour customers rushed in, each one afraid his or her neighbor would secure the best bargain. 200 umbrellas, the 25 cent kind, were sold. One half grosa of coal hods at 6 cents each and other bargains equally as good. This is the firm's first departure in such a sale, and it was a success in every particular.

Surprised Mrs. Anthony.

Last Saturday evening about fifteen friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Mrs. Anthony received her guests in her usual hospitable manner and an evening of games, sociability and refreshments was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone.

HAVE IMPLIED POWER.

THT QUESTION OF REGISTRATION BY AFFIDAVIT?

Former Judge Cross Declares That Boards of Registration Have Implied Power to Accept Affidavits Under Law.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Oct. 31—Former Judge Joseph Cross, of this city, was asked if he had given an opinion on the election law to the effect that under the new law members of Boards of Registry are not empowered to take affidavits.

"I have not," he emphatically replied. "What I did say on the subject was merely expressed in the course of a conversation with Surrogate Parrot in his office, in which we agreed that it might be better to have the affidavits taken by an outside party, authorized for the purpose. What I wish now to say on the matter is simply this:

"The omission to give the power in question by the commission appointed to revise the election law, of which I was a member, arose from the fact that the section of the act of 1871, which gave registration boards the power to take affidavits upon the registration of a voter, was omitted from the general statutes published by the authority of the State in 1895 The revisers dealt with the act as to not appearing therein, nor in the election law issued in pamphlet form to the registration boards by the Secretary of State, the matter escaped the attention of the revisers and of the Legislature as well.

"Some good lawyers hold, however, that the members of the Board of Registration have an implied power to take affidavits. I have never said anything to the contrary, but only that I thought it would be safer, under the circumstances, to have them taken by some outside officer, unquestionably qualified for the purpose, than to trust to an implied power, arising from the fact that Registration Boards were authorized to take affidavits on election day upon challeges made, as well as from the fact that in a certain sense the members of the Registration Board have judicial power—that is, the power to satisfy themselves of the right of any person to be registered and vote in his election district."

MUSIC THE FEATURE.

New Way of Conducting Epworth League Meetings in Grace Church.

A new departure in the method of conducting the Sunday evening Epworth League meetings at Grace M. E. church was taken last night. Instead of following the old routine with prayer and testimonies, a musicale was given.

Miss Agnes Tingley sang a solo, D. Winckler rendered a violin solo and Mrs. Gardner, wife of the pastor, accompanied them on the piano. Mrs. Gardner also led the meeting, and the privilege was given any to take leader's place, give out a favorite hymn, and it would be sung if the announcer would read the first two verses of it. The meeting was so successful that it will be repeated soon.

Elizabeth, October 31—Jere Dunn, sporting man and former pugilist, who owns several fast horses, has left this city, where he has been living quietly for nearly eight years, and has gone with his wife to White Plains, N. Y., to live. It is said he is going into partnership with William Muldoon in his sanitarium at that place for the training and development of athletes and the cure of obesity.

POLITICIANS FEAR THE STAY-AT-HOMES.

Great Deal of Apathy Exhibited By Both Parties.

CANDIDATES' HARD WORK.

BOTH CRANE AND VOORHEES ARE DOING THEIR BEST.

One More Week of the Campaign to be Gone Through and Much Territory Yet to be Covered—Result Will, it is Said, Depend on the Independent Vote—Democrats Seem Confident.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Oct. 31—The last week of the political campaign, which is now at hand, will develop many interesting points in the situation, which all along has been so perplexing to the leaders and politicians of the two great parties. The rival candidates for Governor have been working so hard during the past two weeks that it is feared they will become physically exhausted before the closing of hostilities. The work of the coming week, beyond a doubt, will be the hardest of all. So far Candidate Voorhees has covered the ground pretty thoroughly, and he intends to devote most of the time now at his disposal to Essex county. Candidate Crane has several counties yet to visit, and he expects to have his canvass well performed by the end of the week.

Although the campaign has put to the test the staying qualities of the candidates to a marked extent, and they have stood it pretty well, yet on the part of the voters, the same interest has not been manifested as in former years. Nor is the galaxy of stump orators as large or as brilliant as three years ago, when John W. Griggs was accompanied on his whirlwind tour by some of the best oratorical talent in the State. The mass-meetings then were much larger and more enthusiastic, and there was more evidence of sincerity and earnestness among the followers of each party than the present campaign has demonstrated. It is no wonder, then, that the politicians are nonplused as to the meaning of this peculiar situation of affairs.

Apathy among the general masses of voters, it is feared, prevails to an ominous degree. Mr. Voorhees, in a recent interview, gave expression to his feeling that there was danger ahead for his side unless the Republican voters awoke from the lethargy which seems to envelop them. He had no doubt at all of a sweeping victory for his ticket if the Republican voter did their duty election day. A stay-at-home vote was the only danger apprehended.

On the Democratic side, excepting in a few of the lower counties, the campaign has developed a confidence in the result, which is apparently undisturbed by any dread as to apathy among the rank and file of the party. Still, while there seems to be much activity among those Democrats who are ever loyal to the party, yet there is reason to believe that others who are not so much interested in the result feel somewhat indifferent as to the duty they are expected to perform election day.

The result will depend upon the independent vote, which will come from the vest pocket. Some of the best informed politicians incline to that belief, and hence the uncertainty which seems to prevail in circles which are not moved by party bias and prejudice. It is easy enough to get figures on the result from hide-bound parties who never see any merit in the opposite party. He is generally a reckless prophet and a resourceful mathematician. His prominence in the present campaign is easily perceived, and most of his predictions seem ridiculous.

From an independent stand the augury is that neither party can lay claim to a positive victory. There are so many weak spots in the campaign on both sides that it is hard telling at the present time which ticket stands the best chance for success. A leading Republican said a day or two ago that he feared the Republican leaders were not giving Foster M. Voorhees that loyal support which was expected of them. There was an absence of interest on their part, he added, which was very displeasing to the friends of the Republican Gubernatorial candidate. He hoped for the best, however, and he felt that despite this apparent indifference on the part of those leaders to the ticket that Mr. Voorhees would be elected by a good majority.

HE BLAMES THE MEN.

Camp Thomas' Medical Purveyor Says That Soldiers Were Negligent.

Chattanooga, Oct. 31.—Major Edward T. Comegys was the first witness before the war investigating commission Saturday. He was medical purveyor here during the life of Camp Thomas. He stated that there had never been any delay in filling his requisitions on the surgeon general, and that he had always been able to meet all requisitions upon himself.

Major Comegys admitted that he had refused to fill some requisitions from the hospital from the Second division of the Third Corps, because he was satisfied that the articles demanded were not needed.

He accounted for the sickness in Camp Thomas by saying the men did not know how to take care of themselves.

"They seemed to think," he said, "that when they had put on the uniforms there was nothing else to do; that they could simply enjoy themselves and that their officers would do the rest."

He thought the colonels and regimental surgeons were to blame.

Lieutenant James M. Arrasmith, who acted as chief commissary of subsistence for Camp Thomas, said that while in the beginning there had been some congestion on the transportation lines, there had never been any shortage of supplies.

The rations were the best he had ever seen issued in many years' experience. He thought the principal trouble in regard to rations was in the matter of cooking.

The witness considered Chickamauga a natural camping site, but that there were more men in it than there should have been.

Some of the volunteer regiments never took down their tents during their entire stay and there was a general neglect of the rules of cleanliness and sanitation.

Bids for Supplies in Cuba.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Advertisements inviting bids for providing the war department with certain supplies required by the quartermaster's bureau in Cuba will be issued in a few days.

These include lumber of various dimensions, machinery of several kinds, including pumps, iron pipes and lighters by which men and stores may be readily transported from ships to the shore.

These are the classes of articles that the Hecker board, now in Cuba inspecting and locating camp sites, has advertised for.

It is found impracticable to secure in Havana and other Cuban cities near the proposed sites all the materials needed, and in consequence much of it will have to be shipped from the United States.

The lumber is to be used in constructing warehouses, hospitals, providing flooring for the tents, etc., while the pumps and iron pipe are necessary for maintaining an adequate water supply.

HEART DISEASE.

SOME FACTS REGARDING THE RAPID INCREASE OF HEART TROUBLE.

Do Not be Alarmed, But Look For the Cause.

Heart troubles, at least among Americans, are certainly increasing and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, of poor digestion.

Real, organic heart disease is incurable; but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by branches of the same great nerves, the Sympathetic and Pneumogastric.

In another way, also the heart is affected by that form of poor digestion, which causes gas and fermentation from half digested food; there is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion also poisons the blood, makes it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimilation of food.

This can best be done by the regular use after meals, of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found at most drug stores and which contain valuable, harmless digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

It is safe to say that the regular, persistent use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at meal time will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

PRICE OF THE ISLANDS

Story That $40,000,000 Was to Be Paid for Philippines Untrue.

QUESTION NOT CONSIDERED

Spain Has not Offered to Release the Island for Any Stated Amount of Money. Everything Points to Fact that All of the Philippines Will Be Retained.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—So many stories are being sent broadcast over the country in regard to the alleged attitude of the administration in regard to the Philippine question that the following authorized statement from a member of President McKinley's cabinet will be of interest and have much weight.

"There is absolutely no word of truth in the declaration that the United States has agreed to pay Spain $40,000,000 or any other sum for the surrender of the Philippine islands. Neither is it true that Spain has offered to release the islands for this sum or for any stated amount. In fact, the question of the Philippines and the indebtedness of the islands has not yet been considered by the peace commissioners at Paris. It will be taken up for the first time next week. The newspapers have merely jumped at the conclusion that we are to pay $40,000,000 from the fact that the Philippine debt amounts to about that sum. There is absolutely no authority for these statements, however. Of course it is also untrue that the United States has gone so far as to prescribe the manner in which the money for the Philippine debt will be applied, if paid by us. I do not say that this country will not make a payment of money to Spain, but what the amount will be no one at this time knows."

The fact that President McKinley's views in regard to the retention of the entire Philippine group of islands has undergone a change since his recent western trip however, remains undisputed.

As stated in dispatches on the day the president returned to Washington, from Chicago, the great unanimity throughout the West in favor of expansion greatly impressed President McKinley and he came back to the national capital practically converted to the theory of expansion.

The situation in Paris regarding the peace negotiations according to advices received in this city from the French capital, is favorable, and in administration circles the statement is made that the work is in a fair way of being speedily and successfully accomplished.

While it can be said that the Philippine question has not come up for formal consideration, some representations have already been passed between the two commissions, and in administration circles it is said that an adjustment will not be as difficult as it appeared would be the case some time ago.

Everything points to the fact that President McKinley has decided to retain all of the islands.

Must Remain in Our Possession.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—Secretary Hay has had an interview with the president, presumably on matters before the Paris peace commission, but nothing is known of the contents of dispatches which may have been received from Mr. Day.

It was intimated, however, that our representatives in Paris probably would be prepared to take up this week and submit to the Spanish members a distinct proposition on the Philippine question.

It is fairly assumed, however, that this proposition may be subject to change as the negotiations progress.

On the general subject of the Philippines members of the cabinet are unusually reticent and this fact is assumed by some to indicate that up to this time the administration itself has not fully determined upon what it will or will not demand in this connection beyond the fact, as heretofore stated, that the entire archipelago must remain in the possession of the United States. This determination has undoubtedly been reached and under no circumstances will this government, through its Paris representatives, consent to a treaty which does not involve a complete surrender of Spanish sovereignty therein.

It may be further stated that this government will not assume any Spanish debt or obligation possibly beyond the guarantee of certain municipal obligations which have been incurred in substantial municipal improvement.

The debt which Spain has incurred in her efforts to put down insurrections will neither be paid, assumed nor guaranteed by the United States.

First Whaling Bark to Return.

San Francisco, Oct. 31.—The whaling bark Charles W. Morgan has arrived here, being the first from the Okhotsk sea fleet to return. She had a rough trip down and sustained some injury, but her voyage was fairly successful. She brought 1,300 barrels of sperm oil, 100 barrels of whale oil and 900 pounds of bone.

When the Morgan left the Okhotsk sea for San Francisco the bark California had 740 barrels of oil and the bark Horatio 840 barrels.

Bloodhounds Trail Men.

Boulder, Col., Oct. 31.—Sheriff T. J. Thompson and a posse with bloodhounds are attempting to trail five prisoners who escaped from the county jail by tunnelling through the walls, a distance of over ten feet.

The fugitives include John J. Cassidy, convicted of murder, and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Only two prisoners remained in the jail.

Bank Quits Business.

Springfield, Ohio, Oct. 31.—The Second National Bank has decided to go into liquidation. It is perfectly solvent and has a surplus of $120,000, but lack of business caused the semi-annual dividend to fall to two per cent., and the officers concluded to quit business. The capital stock was $200,000.

MORTALITY OF THE WAR.

The Lives of Three Thousand Soldiers and Sailors Sacrificed.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Pensions Commissioner Evans, who is in this city, states that up to September 30 the war with Spain had caused the loss of the lives of 2,906 American soldiers and sailors.

He further declared that the statistics of his office show that the percentage of deaths in camps from disease last summer was much less than in the civil war.

When asked for further particulars he spoke as follows:

"In the rebellion forty thousand men were killed in battle and three hundred and sixty thousand perished in camps and prisons. From official figures which I have recently completed, covering a period from May 1 to September 30, I find that the total number of deaths as a result of the war with Spain was 2,906. Of this number 107 were officers. At Santiago the loss of life was 22 officers and 222 men. This is an average of one officer to every ten men. At Cardenas one officer was killed. Since the battles on Cuban soil sixty-one men have died of wounds received in service. The total number of American soldiers who have died in camps from disease is eighty officers and 2,520 privates. This is remarkable in view of the terrible climatic disadvantages, and it fully verifies the soldier's adage that disease kills more men than bullets. There have been six hundred claims for pensions filed to date as a result of the war.

"In the Cuban campaign the loss of so many officers is accounted for by the fact that Spanish sharpshooters hidden in the trees and dense foliage, used smokeless powder and picked off the officers with ease. Some of the wounds received by officers were remarkable. I recall one case in particular, that of Captain Knox of the First cavalry. The captain was shot in the back. The ball penetrated his kidney, liver and lung and broke two of his ribs. He is alive to-day and the president has promoted him."

Commissioner Evans says that the loss of life resulting from the destruction of the Maine in Havana harbor will be placed on the same basis as mortality in battle. He holds that the general law providing for indemnity to sailors and soldiers in the federal service will apply to the explosion at Havana.

"Thus far only fifty-five claims have been presented from relatives of the boys who went down with the Maine," said the commissioner. "Every one of them will be pushed through. It is no more than right that the dependents of the men who went to watery graves in Havana harbor be provided for by the United States government."

Chippewas' Timber Lands.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—Secretary Bliss has been investigating the alleged scandals in connection with the sale of timber lands of the Chippewa Indians and will treat the subject in his forthcoming report to Congress. The charges, upon investigation, are shown to be utterly without foundation. Under the treaty of 1889 the United States has advanced to the Indians over $2,000,000, and as yet been reimbursed only to the extent of $600,000.

The expense of estimating the cost of timber lands which are to be sold has been rather heavy, owing to the fact that there have been several boards, but the present board is doing its work with perfect satisfaction. The secretary's report will clear up the misapprehension which exists in certain quarters regarding the sale of these timber lands.

Miners No Longer Enjoined.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 31.—The injunction cases against Edward Cahill and twenty-five other miners of Virden, brought by the Chicago-Virden Coal Company, enjoining the miners from interfering with the operation of the mine, were dismissed in the circuit court by the complainant.

It is believed that this is preliminary to an effort to again arbitrate the differences between the company and the employes.

Troops for Savannah.

New York, Oct. 31.—Four batteries of the Seventh artillery reached here yesterday from Boston on the transport Mississippi. The batteries came from Portland, Me., and are en route to Savannah.

Upon arriving here the batteries left the Mississippi for the Michigan, which will take them to Savannah. The Michigan will also take on board for the same destination four companies of the Second volunteer engineers, who are due here from Camp Wikoff, where they have been doing guard duty.

The engineers will be attached to the Second army corps and it is expected will see garrison duty in Cuba next winter.

David A. Wells Dying.

Norwich, Conn., Oct. 31.—David A. Wells, the noted economist, is seriously ill at his home in this city and his death is considered to be a matter of a few hours at the most.

Mr. Wells has been in failing health for several months and has been failing rapidly for the past two weeks. His advanced age discourages all hope for his recovery.

Mr. Wells first became prominent in public life in 1864, while residing in Troy, N. Y., by writing a pamphlet entitled "Our Burden and Our Strength," demonstrating the financial strength of the federal government and its ability to defray the cost of the war.

Made Over Thirty Knots.

San Francisco, Oct. 31.—The torpedo boat Farragut made another speed trial Saturday. She made several short, but very fast races against time, and attained better than thirty knots speed.

She will doubtless receive her trial trip by the government some time next week.

New Equipment Officer.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—Commander John P. Merrill has been selected by the navy department as the successor of Commodore Sperry as the equipment officer for the Brooklyn navy yard. Merrill had command of the supply ship Glacier during the recent war.

REVISION FOR DREYFUS

No Demonstration Followed the Announcement.

INQUIRY TO BE INSTITUTED

The Court of Cassation Orders a Revision of the Case but Refuses to Release the Prisoner. It is Reported that the Secret Documents in the Case Have Been Burned Some Days Since.

Paris, Oct. 31.—The court of cassation has decided to grant a revision of the Dreyfus case, and will institute a supplementary inquiry.

The court, however, has declined to order the release of Dreyfus.

The decision of the court, textually, is as follows:

"In view of the letter of the minister of justice, dated September 20, 1898, in view of the arguments of the public prosecutor denouncing to the court the condemnation pronounced by the first court martial of the military government of Paris on December 22, 1894, against Albert Dreyfus, then a captain of artillery attached to the general staff, in view of all the documents in the case and also of articles 443 to 446 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, amended by the law of June 10, 1895, relative to the admissibility of an application in proper form for revision:

"Whereas the matter has been brought before the court by the public prosecutor, in virtue of the express order of the minister of justice;

"Whereas the application comes within the category of the cases contemplated in Article 443, and has been introduced within the period fixed by Article 444;

"Whereas the judgment, revision of which is demanded, has the force of a chose jugee;

"Whereas the documents produced do not place the court in a position to decide all the merits of the case, and there is ground for making a supplementary inquiry;

"For these reasons the court declares the application to be in proper form and legally admissable, and states that it will institute a supplementary inquiry, and declares there is no ground at the present moment for deciding on the public prosecutor's application for a suspension of the penalty."

The judges of the court were occupied for three hours and a half in considering the judgment.

The public, whose admission to the court was regulated with the greatest care, awaited the decision with marked calmness. During the suspension of business the public crowded into the lobbies, and there was evident anxiety to hear the result.

There was no demonstration when the court rose.

At the opening of the court M. Mornard resumed his arguments in behalf of the Dreyfus family, insisting that the bordereau was not in the handwriting of Dreyfus, or an imitation by him of the writing of Major Esterhazy. The latter hypothesis, counsel continued, was highly improbable. If it was an imitation the author of it must be a third party. If it was no imitation, the author of the bordereau, he asserted, could only be Major Esterhazy himself.

Continuing, M. Mornard pointed out that the honor of the army was not involved in the doings of courts martial, as, like other courts, they can err without their honor suffering.

After M. Mornard had closed his argument, the court retired to deliberate, with the result announced above.

M. Yvos Guyot, in the Siecle asserts that the secret documents in the Dreyfus case were burned some days ago.

Sympathy in Russia for Dreyfus.

London, October 30.—An article in the National Review, written by J. L. Maxse, who has previously shown himself to be well informed in the Dreyfus affair, has caused some stir.

He affirms that the Czar has now become a convinced Dreyfusard and is taking a sympathetic interest in the prisoner of Devil's island.

The National Review adds that there has been great astonishment and indignation in French ministerial and the higher military circles of France by the publication in Russia of two frank, outspoken articles by M. Zakrewski, president of the Russian appeal court, declaring that the Dreyfus court martial amounted to a return to the lettres de cachet and the days of the Bastile, and also scathingly criticising the prosecution of M. Emile Zola.

It is asserted that the Russian government received remonstrances from Paris in the interval between the articles, efforts being made to have M. Zakrewski silenced or removed.

But, it is added, the attempt failed. This is looked upon as being evidence of a remarkable change of opinion in Russia.

Claims Our Action is Unjust.

Lima, Peru, Oct. 31.—The government is preparing a special book giving a history of the MacCord claim with a view of showing that the action of the United States is unjust and unfriendly.

DEATH OF COL. WARING.

Yellow Fever Contracted in Havana the Cause.

Colonel George E. Waring, Jr., succumbed to yellow fever at 7.35 a. m. Saturday in his home in the Rutherford apartment house, No. 175 Second avenue.

Dr. Daniel M. Stimson, who had been attending him from the time the disease attacked him on Tuesday last, left the house at 10 p. m. on Friday night for a brief rest. A change for the worse set in shortly after that, and Mrs. Waring summoned Dr. Stimson to the bedside of her sick husband.

He found that Colonel Waring was sinking rapidly.

At 1.45 o'clock Saturday morning the patient was taken with black vomit, the forerunner of death in most cases of yellow fever. From that time on his strength failed rapidly.

The vomiting ceased about 5 o'clock and there was no evidence of suffering after that.

George Edwin Waring, Jr., was born in Poundridge, N. Y., on July 4, 1833, and was educated at College Hill, Poughkeepsie, where he studied engineering and also took a special course with Professor James J. Mapes in agricultural chemistry.

He displayed a special aptitude for this science.

When only 21 years old he made a lecture tour through Vermont and Maine, talking upon agricultural topics. Shortly afterwards Horace Greely became interested in his work and employed him to manage his farm in Chappaqua. This was in 1855.

Two years later he was appointed agricultural and drainage engineer of Central Park. He designed the present system of drainage of the park and incidentally planted the two rows of noble elms on the Mall. He was in this office when the civil war broke out. He dropped his work immediately to go to the front.

In 1867 Colonel Waring went to the state of Rhode Island as manager of the Ogden farm, where he remained ten years. Subsequently he began general practice as a drainage engineer.

The disease which carried off Colonel Waring was the one which he combatted successfully and which brought him into prominence. When the epidemic of yellow fever broke out in Memphis in 1878, Colonel Waring was summoned to the city and revolutionized the sewerage system of the place. Because of the peculiar topography of the city, he found his task a difficult one.

He introduced there the system by which the house drainage and the surface drainage were disposed of separately. It was called the Waring system and has proved so efficacious that Memphis has been free from yellow fever ever since. By reason of this work he became widely known. His system was adopted in many American and some European cities.

Colonel Waring was the writer of many books and found time to lecture extensively. He was commissioner of the street cleaning department of this city under Mayor Strong and under his management the department of street cleaning was reformed thoroughly and reached a high degree of efficiency. In fact it can be said that for the first time in the present generation the streets were cleaned thoroughly. The employes of the department were uniformed, their work was systematized, and the streets of this city were not only cleaned, but kept clean.

Lucky Chicago University.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—President Harper has announced to the members of the senior class at the University of Chicago that before January 1, 1900, the university authorities, in all probability, will have obtained sufficient additional gifts to meet the conditions named by John D. Rockefeller in his last offer to that institution.

Mr. Rockefeller's offer is that he will give that sum provided an equal sum shall have been raised from other sources before the end of the coming year.

In this connection Dr. Harper said that when the $2,000,000 shall have been secured it will be used to establish and develop technical schools, such as law, medicine and applied sciences.

Of the $2,000,000 to be raised in order to accept the offer of Mr. Rockefeller, nearly $1,500,000 already has been procured.

Mormon Missionaries Sail.

New York, Oct. 31.—Eighteen Mormon missionaries sailed Saturday morning on the American liner Pennland for Southampton. They are in charge of Elder Lyman A. McBride of Tooele, Utah. He was formerly a grocer in Tooele, and was making $300 a month when he decided to become a missionary. The missionaries will scatter all over Europe and preach their gospel for two years, at the end of which time they expect to return with a number of converts.

Mussulman Murderers Executed.

Candia, Crete, Oct. 31.—Five of the Mussulmans convicted of taking part in the massacre of British soldiers on September 6 have been executed. In addition four Bashi-bazouks have been sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment at hard labor.

Since the departure of the Turkish troops a number of guilty Mussulmans have been discovered daily. It also appears that the Turkish officers appropriated the valuables stolen by their soldiers.

Veterar Journalist Dead.

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 31.—C. A. Wall one of the oldest newspaper men in the country, died at his home in this city Saturday.

Mr. Wall was born in Leicester in 1820. In 1837 he entered the office of the Weekly Spy of Worcester, with which he has been connected ever since. For a time he was proprietor of the Daily Transcript, which later became the Gazette.

Cloth Mills Will Courtail.

Fall River, Mass., Oct. 31.—Manufacturers state that the pooling and curtailment of print cloth mills is having a satisfactory effect.

All the mills in the agreement will curtail four weeks, many of them having already shut down, and from eight hundred thousand to nine hundred thousand pieces will be withheld from the market.

Porto Ricans Meet and Ask Full Territorial Rights.

ANARCHISTS INFEST PONCE

Delegates from the Chief Towns of the Island Meet at San Juan. They Pass Resolutions Demanding a Cessation of Military Rule and for a Regular Civil Government.

San Juan de Porto Rico, Oct. 31.—The principal theatre of the city was taxed to its utmost capacity this afternoon on the occasion of a public meeting of delegates from the chief towns of the island to consider and draft recommendations regarding the necessities of the island for the use of the special commissioners, who will be selected later to represent Porto Rico at Washington when the time comes for settling the administrative system.

The assembly was fairly representative, and, although the proceedings gave undue prominence to unimportant details, there was abundant evidence of intelligent reflection on the part of the delegates and of a determination not to tolerate partisan politics at this crisis in the island's affairs.

Carefully prepared reports were submitted by the political, social and economical committees.

The meeting received with enthusiasm the resolutions demanding territorial rights, the cessation of the present military rule and the installation of regular civil government.

Other resolutions were adopted asking an eight-hour day for the laboring man and severely denouncing the present corrupt system of registering deeds of land.

It was obvious that the delegates proceeded upon the assumption that the United States would grant Porto Rico territorial rights.

Ponce, Porto Rico, Oct. 31.—A sensation was caused here yesterday on the arrival of the Red D line steamer Philadelphia from the Spanish Main, by the discovery in the handbags of two passengers of a number of explosive cartridges containing dynamite.

The discovery was made by the customs officials, and the passengers were arrested on the supposition that they are Anarchists.

The police, who fear that others belonging to the gang have escaped, are making a strict search.

Will Pay Dollar for Dollar.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—Mr. Dawes, the controller of the currency, has received from the committee of the directors of the failed Tradesmen's National Bank of New York a letter expressing satisfaction with the controller's action in appointing a committee to pass upon the action of the bank with a view to its going into voluntary liquidation.

They also state that "within a week after such authority is given the bank will be prepared to pay one hundred cents on the dollar to all depositors, that is to say $1,750,000 on demand and $650,000 with interest in certificates of deposit, payable on or before the expiration of four months."

Quakers Mustered Out.

While the Ninth regiment did not see any active service, it suffered heavy losses from disease. Three captains and twenty-six privates died from typhoid fever.

The Dinner for Gen. Miles.

New York, Oct. 31.—Arrangements for the dinner for Major General Nelson A. Miles at the Waldorf-Astoria on Friday, November 11, are well under way. The large number of applications indicates a notable affair. At the guests' table Joseph H. Choate will preside. The boxes and galleries will be given over to the fair sex.

Pasters Will Have to Be Used.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 31.—The sudden death of Colonel George E. Waring, the candidate for state engineer and surveyor on the state ticket of the Citizens' Union party, will make necessary the use of pasters on the official state ballot for the first time since the blanket ballot has been put in operation.

Who Has Been "Bullying.?"

Mr. Wright Babcock, of Fanwood, who has heretofore had a word or two to say in reference to the trolley project, is now stirred up again and comes forth with a newspaper communication in which he talks about "the recent bullying of the Plainfield Council in the interest of that project." Mr. Babcock may be able to keep himself well-posted in affairs of Fanwood, but if the above expression is an index of what knowledge he possesses of municipal affairs in this city he certainly is wofully deficient.

Mr. Babcock labors under the impression that the citizens of Plainfield are striving to forever prevent the Plainfield Street Railway Company from securing a franchise, thus making the way clear for the county trolley project. Time and again it has been stated by those who opposed the granting of the franchise that the Common Council had under consideration that they were not opposed to the Plainfield Street Railway Company only in so far as they were asking for inestimably valuable privileges for which they did not propose to afford either ample protection or fair compensation to the public. If the Plainfield Street Railway Company will agree to do what is fair and just in negotiating the use of the public rights they will find that the citizens of Plainfield will gladly acquiese in their plans.

If there has been any "bullying," as Mr. Babcock describes it, in the agitation of the trolley franchise matter for the eastern section of the city, it has not been on the part of the people.

The opening of the Bound Brook-Dunellen branch of the Brunswick Traction Company on Saturday was somewhat spectacular, but it was a celebration that means a substantial and welcome improvement to facilities for bringing more business into Plainfield. New Brunswick people talk about how much benefit the opening of that line is going to do for their city, but it will be very minute compared with the benefits Plainfield will get out of it. Now we can fairly hear some people cry out against the inconsistency of The Daily Press making such comment, in view of our attitude towards granting a franchise out of the eastern section of the city. We flatter ourselves, however, in the claim that we are not inconsistent. We want to see the trolley lines extended in every direction, knowing how valuable they are in building up up the city, but we do not want to see valuable privileges granted to the promoters till we see the rights of the people, now and in the future, protected. We are very confident that the trolley promoters will soon be forced to accept this view of the matter, and then we will all rejoice of the hum of the trolley at both ends of the city.

The fact that J. Harry Green, of North Plainfield, was compelled to pay the tidy sum of $60 for having brought game into New Jersey that was legally shot in New York, has caused considerable comment, and it has all been in the nature of calling it an outrageous condition that there should be such an inconsistent conflict of the laws between the two States. If Mr. Green cared to fight the matter he no doubt could prove that the construction of the New Jersey game laws that fines a man for having in his possession game legally shot in another State, is unconstitutional.

A few weeks ago The Daily Press suggested that the essential need of the Democrats in Union county was a thorough reorganization of the working forces. The advice is evidently taken as the truth, for in Rahway an organization has been effected, in Plainfield one is about to inaugurated and in Elizabeth the city executive committee has taken steps for putting the party at the county seat on a better working basis.

Though the State campaign has been vigorously pushed in several parts of the State for several weeks past, the first political meeting of any kind in this place thus far will be held tonight in Saengerbund Hall when Senator Reed and Comptroller Gibson, of Newark, will expound Republican doctrine for borough Republicans and any others that may happen around.

The Prohibition chandidates in this county are: Senator, J. M. Brookfield, Rahway; assembly, W. H. Chandler, Summit, George B. Sayre, Elizabeth, Edward L. Massett, Westfield; coroner, J. T. Syer, Elizabeth.

Would the Common Council dare to grant a franchise in perpetuity to the Plainfield Street Railway Company after seeing the demonstration against such a course made at the public hearing a week ago?

The agitation of the Woman's Town Improvement Association for public playgrounds for the poor children can easily be fulfilled by removing the "please-keep-off-the-grass signs" in the city park.

The Newark newspapers seem to have lost sight of Crane and Voorhees in the State campaign and are fighting over the question of which will make the best United States Senator, Smith of Kean.

It is being talked openly now among certain Republicans that Mr. Ackerman's defeat for the Senatorial nomination can be laid at the doors of certain other Plainfield Republicans.

Tonight the local Democrats will meet and try to find out where they are at in the matter of a competent organization.

Thus far General Apathy seems to be getting in some good strokes in both political parties in and around Plainfield.

Election day is but a week off.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The application of the Plainfield Street Railway Co. for an extension to Fanwood, was withdrawn by Mr. Riker, Monday night, and the missing link is still advertised as lost. Plainfield seems to be on its ear.—Westfield Republican.

* * * * *

There seems to be an opinion among some people that the members of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders are a good thing and that they will readily grant the Plainfield Street Railway Compan a right of way for their trolley through Mountain avenue in the borough. This avenue has recently been macadamized at a great expense to the county and it is not at all likely that the Freeholders are going to be "so easy" as some would believe.—Plainfield Press.

The Freeholders will do what is right in the matter, but they cannot be bamboozled into giving away valuable franchises. Just ask John Blair MacAfee if they are dead easy to work. —Somerville Democrat.

PASSING COMMENT.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

If one-half of the compliments that have been paid to John Stapleton's comedy "A Bachelors Honeymoon" are merited the theatregoing public of this city have a veritable treat in store at the Stillman Music Hall, Wednesday night. The play which is farcical in theme and construction was produced originally last season at Hoyt's Theatre New York and scored a hit with the metropolitan public. The story concerns the experience for one day of a widower who marriage is subject to the approval of his maiden sister on account of the eccentric will of his deceased parents. He marries an actress whom he introduces into his household as a governess for his twin daughters, who themselves are of a marriagable age. The complications which grow out of this act of his commence almost with the rise of the curtain and become so thoroughly confusing that no two characters in the play know what they are about until the final denouement in the last act. The fun is spontaneous and the play is said to be one long irresistable and joyous laugh.

The popularity of "A Runaway Girl" increases at Daly's theatre in New York as it was predicted at first that it would. It began in terribly hot weather when few theatre goers were in town and those few were far from enthusiastic about sitting indoors all the evening. But those who were good judges of such things and who saw that the houses even at that time were by no means slender said: Only wait, if it can draw houses like this now it will have overflowing ones bye and bye. The managers were quite of this opinion, too, and have had every confidence in the piece and in the company, that has since been fully justified. For the gain has been steady from the first and is still going on. Every night brings more new visitors and brings back more of the old ones. The songs grow more popular and the applause is greater and the company is consequently inspired with additional spirit.

* * * * *

The history of the stage of the past two seasons would make a barren and uninspiring narrative, for failure followed after failure with a rapidity that was as unfortunate for managers as it was alarming to devotees of dramatic art. Production followed production and nearly all shared the same depressing fate. In this dearth of things dramatic, among the few plays destined to hold the stage since its first production two years ago, was Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer's great success, "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley." It will be seen here during the present season, and lovers of comedy have a genuine treat in store for them.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Dame Fashion has decreed that the hat worn "off the face" will be the correct thing in headgear for dressy wear this fall and winter, and that this mandate will be obeyed by that portion of fair femininity who wishes to be strictly up-to-date in all things pertaining to the toilette, goes without saying. Not, however, without decidedly detrimental results in many cases. Youth and beauty and a certain piquancy of expression are necessary to set off these fetching little toques, and if the girl not possessed of these attributes will still insist upon adopting the style, we may expect to see some queer sights during the coming season.

As those toques, or properly speaking toquets, set well back on the head elaborate coiffures are necessary and the becoming pompadour will have a new lease of life.

Velvet is extensively employed in millinery this autumn and ostrich feathers, the longer and fluffier the better form the chief adornment. Jet is also used in profusion, the pins with large fancy jet knobs at the top being very fashionable. Paradise, pheasants and owl feathers are greatly in demand, turbans made entirely of breasts of birds being seen in great variety, while silk, lace, fancy aigrettes and even fur are seen on many of the newest models.

Another pretty way to trim these smart little hats is with the wired velvet and pretty bowknots of velvet and satin. These have a very frail appearance, but indeed are wired in such a strong manner that they can withstand the strongest wind storm.

Castor color is a popular shade in millinery this autumn and makes up charmingly in velvet or felt. Royal blue, all the purple tints and for evening wear amethyst blue and many delicate shades are also extensively employed. Black, especially when combined with white is much in evidence, a lovely model, made with a full crown of black velvet, covered with applied lace, being trimmed with white ostrich feathers.

After the all-velvet models, hats of pleated chenille and a sort of satin covered straw come next in favor, and as they need very little adornment are decidedly popular with the amateur milliner, a couple of handsome plumes, with a dashing bow of velvet caught with a jeweled or rhinestone buckle making a dainty and fashionable headcovering.

Many different names are applied to these turbans, but as each one is usually built to suit the individual style and beauty of each patron, there can be no distinguishing title to bestow upon them.

The stiff hats displayed at the openings, intended for traveling or walking gowns are bewildering in their array. They come in all shapes and colors and have a chic appearance all their own. The Alpine model with the brim a little wider and broader than those of former seasons, is popular. And then we have the English walking hat slightly different in shape from last year's model, and for cycling there is the low felt hat with narrow brim and the larger campaign, "Rough Rider" and Dewey hats, all of which are high in favor.

Although the separate waist has been relegated to the background time and time again it still holds a very prominent place in my lady's wardrobe, and the large establishments have set apart a separate department for the display of these lovely creations at all the openings, and it is safe to say that fair womankind will not soon relinquish so handy and becoming a fashion.

At a recent opening a very dainty blouse bodice was composed of checked velvet in tones of green and brown, and trimmed with embroidered green velvet. The blouse made rather plain fastened slightly to the left side with jeweled buttons and opened at the top with narrow velvet revers over a yoke of cream colored peau de soie, with stock collar of same edged with narrow velvet. Embroidered velvet finished the top of the close fitting sleeves and shoulders while the belt was of green velvet to match the revers. An attractive hat of green velvet, adorned with loops of ribbons and fluffy black plumes accompanied this pretty waist.

Taffeta still holds its own for the making of separate waists and a decidedly handsome model worthy of mention was made of royal blue taffeta, tucked in groups of six with about two inches between each group. In front the fabric was arranged to have a pointed effect in the center, where it was trimmed with a band of embroidered taffeta, these bands also adorning either side of the bodice. Embroidered taffeta, gathered on, gave a full appearance to the top of the close fitting sleeves. Girdle and collar of black velvet. A fetching little toquet of black velvet, with two black ostrich plumes caught in the center with a jeweled buckle gave the finishing touch to this stylish waist.

Cuban red silk composed another handsome waist, which was tucked and plaited and adorned with bands of silk embroidery. The simulated yoke and vest was simply tucked at even distances, while the remainder of the material laid in tiny lengthwise folds, was elaborately intersected with bands of embroidery. Epaulets edged with embroidery capped the shoulders, and the sleeves which moulded the arm had a slight puff at the top, finished with tucks and embroidery. A dainty capote of Cuban red velvet, adorned with ribbon and feathers had a double rhinestone buckle directly in front almost resting on the hair.

Mrs. Y.: "My daughter is a promising young musician."

Mr. C.: "Well, get her to promise that she won't sing any more."

NEW STYLES IN LINGERIE.

Muslin Petticoats Cut After the Patterns of the Latest Dress Skirts.

The woman has yet to be born who has not a fondness for dainty, fresh, beautiful lingerie, and it is therefore natural that this phase of fashion should interest and fascinate all womankind.

English nainsook is the fabric most in use for fine underwear.

The nightgown of the immediate future is gored and trained and most elaborately trimmed.

This season the short-waisted effect is much sought in night dresses, and laces and embroideries are inserted bayadere fashion.

The fichu is a feature of the newest night-dress, and is a most becoming part of it.

The chemise has again come into use. Formerly this garment was worn next to the skin under the corset, but it is now more frequently worn over the corset, doing duty as a corset cover and short skirt. The most highly approved design is rather short—falling just low enough to hide the drawers. Most of the newest models are made to draw in behind at the waist line with a ribbon, so that they fit the figure as snugly and smoothly as a fitted corset cover.

Drawers are by no means so wide as they were last season. Very few umbrella drawers are shown, this design having been greatly modified. They are narrower, and fit very snugly and plainly about the hips, having no gathers at all in front and on sides, and as few as possible in the back.

Both the very short and the long muslin petticoats, are cut after the newest dress-skirt patterns, and their fit is faultless. Their tops are sheath-shaped, and they fit back and front around the top without a gather or pleat or even so much as a pucker. It goes without saying that they flare decidedly at the bottom, and on the long petticoats three lace-edged graduated ruffles are made to fall over one another, and are set on an attached lace-edged flounce, which makes four fluffy ruffles about the feet.

While the matinee more properly belongs to neglige dress, the average woman thinks of it in connection with her lingerie.

A most useful one is the Geisha dressing sack illustrated. This is made of fine French flannel in delicate pinks and tans, and is lined with pale pink India silk. Another good model is a matinee of white albatross with a square, horizontally tucked yoke back and front. Heavy lace of the shade known as age yellow almost hides each tuck. The sleeves and skirt are tucked vertically, a style most becoming to stout figures. By the way, very desirable nightdresses for steamer or sleeping-car wear are made of albatross in all colors, and fine flannel gowns made after the most approved styles, except not quite so elaborate as to trimming, are considered desirable.

A WOMAN'S WILL.

"It's no use trying," said Phemie, "mother hates me, and everything I do is wrong."

"Your mother can't help it, Phemie," said Doctor Jasper. He was the new medical man, in huge favor with Mrs. Albatross, Phemie's mother. "Your mother is highly strung—quite a woman of genius—and allowances must be made for her temperament, my dear young lady. Temperament rules everything."

Indeed, Mrs. Albatross' temperament seemed to rule Doctor Jasper, the parson, the squire, the parish, but it did not rule Phemie.

"Look here," said the girl—she was just past twenty—"you and mother are always croaking about me, I know, but you do nothing to help me. At least I think you would, but you're afraid—"

"Your mother used to take an interest in you, but you did not meet her half way. Is not that so?"

"No, it isn't. When I was sixteen she had a fad of dressing me up in last century costume and making a doll of me—not my style at all—just to show off her own cleverness and queerness at my expense. She said I was ugly and only dressing could make me fit to be seen."

"Well?" said Doctor Jasper, who was a rising young medico of thirty, as he looked gravely and judiciously at the pretty, much tried girl, who only half believed in his good will.

"Well," said Phemie, "every one laughed, and I showed mother I would not stand it."

"And then?"

"Then she packed me off to school. The mistress said I was sort of dazed for a time, as if I had been ill treated—and so I had—and quite neglected, but they were kind to me there, and I was very happy for more than a year except in the holidays, which were always odious. Then you came along." And Phemie paused and stole a doubtful glance at the doctor.

"What then?" said the doctor, like a person coldly inquiring for ordinary information, yet with a certain little twinkle in his eye which did not escape the aggrieved Phemie.

"Then," said the girl, "I thought you were my friend at first, but I don't now. At least—"

At this moment Mrs. Albatross entered, and, turning sharply on Phemie, said with a snap:

"I suppose you haven't fed the fowls or sorted the linen or done anything but idle away your time, as usual?"

"I was called when Doctor Jasper came, because you could not be found."

"I'm sick of your excuses. Doctor Jasper does not wish to see you."

Then, in quite an altered tone, as Phemie shrunk away out of the room: "Do you mind coming up to my sitting room? I want to have a talk with you about those changes at the infirmary. I am sure that you will agree with me and you will be most useful. We can't allow things to go on," et cetera.

Dr. Jasper always did agree with Mrs. Albatross, but somehow he molded her, and she usually came round to his opinion. He listened and she talked. He could wait, and when he had taken her bearings—without ever interrupting or contradicting—she listened and he talked, and not then, but next time, she echoed his opinions and fancied they were all her own.

"It is such a comfort to find a sensible man to talk to in a stupid place like this," said she, laying her arm confidingly upon the doctor's as he sat smiling and agreeing with her.

Mrs. Albatross had worried one husband into the grave—she was too clever for him—but her intellectual vivacity, imagination and enterprise made her an interesting companion. She was only a little past forty, and very well preserved, and she meant to marry Doctor Jasper.

Whether it was hypnotism or will power, the doctor came again and again and would not send in his bill, and the doctor's bill never was paid. He paid himself.

"Don't speak to me," said Phemie hurriedly, as she met the doctor coming down stairs after a long confab with her mother. "Mother's about. She's out all to-morrow afternoon. I've got to paint the doors." And Jasper passed out with a sympathetic smile. She knew he would call and advise her about painting the doors. He did call.

"What a deal you know about mixing paints and things! I'm sure I want good advice a great deal more than mother does. But then, I'm not clever like mother," added Phemie, with a little aggrieved pout. "So it's not worth while talking to me."

"I do feel for you," said the doctor, with an unusual warmth of manner. "I have done all I could to get your mother to be fair to you, Phemie"—he had never called her Phemie before, and she felt her color rise. "What's the matter?" he added hastily, for suddenly Phemie's eyes filled with tears, and she just went off then and there and left the paint pots and things without saying another word.

* * * * * * * * *

Doctor Jasper's visits became more frequent. Mrs. Albatross was constantly seen about the village with him. They met in cottages. She was devoted, so she said, to nursing the sick. It was certainly a new development. She was never seen with her daughter, nor was Jasper, but he saw her daughter oftener than she knew. Still it seemed less and less possible to do without Mrs. Albatross. Her ability, her cooked foods and port wine in "cases;" her influence with the squire, who disliked and obeyed her; with the parson, whose good will was important to the doctor, and who was afraid of Mrs. Albatross, for she browbeat him in the chair at parish meetings, picked holes in his sermons and organized the penny readings, which he disliked, under his very nose—all this and a good deal more—for Mrs. Albatross was a woman and not above feminine arts—put Jasper in rather a tight place.

He knew that Mrs. Albatross wanted to marry him, and there were days—yes, whole days—when he really thought he should be obliged to marry Mrs. Albatross.

The moment came. It was in the little sitting room up stairs.

Something had happened. Doctor Jasper saw that plainly enough.

The lady was flushed and excited, and he missed the usual confidential hand squeeze.

"I—I wanted to see you," she said, and paused. "Nothing has come to your ears, I suppose?"

The doctor looked inquiringly.

"Well, then, I'm dreadfully troubled, annoyed beyond measure, put out. Of course, you know my maid, Susan. She has been with me ten years, and is not a gossip—"

"What on earth do you mean? Do be plain. Surely with me you might be quite plain." And he moved a little nearer, feeling at that moment a curious kind of attraction which almost compelled him to lay his hand upon her arm and force her to be quite honest. "Don't keep me on tenterhooks," he said eagerly. "Tell me."

"I will," said the lady. "I feel I can tell you anything. I don't think I have any other friend in the world—at least, not like you. No one understands me, no one has helped me as you have, and we've got to part. That is all—"

"What on earth?" said Jasper, really shaken and troubled—he had never seen her grow pale like that, or her lips quiver like that, and she was not of the crying sort, and she did not cry now—"what—what has Susan been saying?"

"Only that it's all over the place, and that she thought at last she ought to tell me—"

"You don't mean, you don't mean"—He couldn't quite say it.

"Yes I do," she said. And she rose and walked up and down the room full of a sort of angry vexation, mingled evidently with a conflict of passionate feeling she could neither conceal nor subdue.

"Sit down," he said.

He had risen. He took her arm. She was positively trembling. He led her to the sofa by the fire.

"I shall have to leave this place," she said in a sort of hard voice.

The angry tears came into her eyes He had never seen her weep. This was the nearest approach to it.

"I know what you are going to say. Don't say it. No, you shan't go. You are useful. The people trust you. It is your sphere. I am the marplot Why should you go?" said Jasper, hardly measuring his words. "Why should either of us go? Why not stay—and stay—stay together?"

"You don't mean it?"

Men at such times are more fools than knaves.

"Yes, yes—I do."

Jasper had taken her hand. The woman with the iron will, the keen intellect, the nature self-contained, which seemed at times as hard as nails, turned toward him, and in another moment fell crying and laughing hysterically into his arms. At that moment, as ill luck would have it, Phemie, hearing unusual sounds, and thinking some one needed assistance, entered.

"Go and fetch some sal volatile Your mother is not very well."

Indeed, at that moment Mrs. Albatross seemed to have really fainted away. Whether she fainted or not no one will ever know. The doctor himself was doubtful.

* * * * * *

Jasper never entered the house again. He went home, packed up his things, wrote a hurried note in a disguised hand to Phemie, who on the following day would be twenty-one years old, and come into five hundred pounds a year, which had been left her, to the disgust of her mother, by her fond father—and Jasper went to bed.

* * * * * *

He must have risen early. No one at his lodgings saw him go out. His hot water was brought up at eight o'clock. His boots had not been put out over night.

The servant knocked again at nine. The door was not locked. She entered. She saw boxes packed and labeled "Left till called for." The bed was empty.

The station was a mile off. There were only two passengers by the early train.

When Mrs. Albatross came down to breakfast she inquired for Phemie Phemie was gone.

A Beggar's Retort.

An anecdote of Bishop Thomas W. Dudley reveals in his own words the secrets of his success:

When it was first known in the city in which he was settled that he was to go to Kentucky some of his friends were disposed to be critical.

"You are not going to Kentucky, are you?" asked one.

"Yes, indeed."

"Do you know what kind of a state that is? I saw in a paper that one man killed another in a Kentucky town for treading on a dog."

The bishop said nothing and the man continued impatiently:

"What are you going to do in a place like that?"

"I'm not going to tread on the dogs," was the calm reply.—Sioux City Journal.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Duke Carlton paced restlessly back and forth on the platform at the station of D——. He was a man twenty-six years of age, upon whom nature had certainly lavished an undue amount of good looks, but whose face was marred at present by a look of contempt for everything upon which his glance might chance to fall. And it was scarcely to be wondered at, for in just nine hours, as time was told by the large, slowly ticking clock in the waiting room at the depot, Duke Carlton was to be married. And here he was forty miles from his destination, and had just been told by the station agent that the trains had changed time, his train having left at precisely twenty minutes before his arrival, and there would not be another before eight that evening! Eight—the hour set for his marriage with sweet Lilla Houghton. What would she, could she, think? What a position to put her in. Already he imagined the crowded church, the sea of eager faces, the waiting bride and no Duke. He must reach the city of E—— in time for the ceremony, but how?

Presently he walked back to the little ticket office, where the agent was laboriously writing.

"Do you know if there is any sort of conveyance around here that I could get to take me to the next village? I would pay well for one, as it is imperative that I should reach E—— before night."

The agent calmly finished the sentence he was writing, pushed the cap he was wearing on the back of his head still further back, and having thoughtfully chewed the end of his pen for about a half a minute, replied:

"I dunno. You might be able to get old Harmon's horse and buggy if 'tain't let. He keeps the tavern 'bout a stone's throw from here, an' sometimes lets his horse; but he wants a tarnation price. You can try him, though; that's his chimney you see jest over the yeller house there." And he rose lazily and pointed vaguely down the street, where a number of small houses were visible, among which the yellow one stood out distinctly, having been recently built and just received its coat of priming.

Duke walked rapidly from the depot and hastened in the direction of the "tavern," keeping the chimney in view as a guard against mistake, and soon found himself before a dirty, ill-kept, ill-looking place, from which an odor of boiled cabbage and onions was now issuing. To his loud and twice repeated knocking the door was finally opened by an untidy specimen of womankind from which he would at any other time have recoiled in disgust; but his necessity was urgent, so, stepping forward, he raised his hat and courteously asked if he might see the proprietor.

After a prolonged stare, as if mentally digesting the word, she answered with a half grunt:

"Ain't t' home, but I'm 'is wife 'nd we ain't no secrets. What du you want?"

Duke smiled in spite of his perplexity, before he replied:

"I merely came to see if I could engage some one to take me over to the village east of here. I must reach E—— tonight; I believe I can get a carriage there."

"There ain't no horse to hum," she said, "but Abe would take you over in the mornin'. Du you want lodgin' for the night?" she added, an eager look taking the place of the previous vacant stare.

"No, thank you," said Duke; "if I cannot find a vehicle of some description I suppose I must walk, for I must certainly get there to-night. Can you tell me about how far it is to the next village, and which is the nearest way to go?"

"It's four mile an' a half by the railroad, an' nigh onto seven if you take the road," was the surly answer, as she saw there was not even a remote chance of "Abe's" making something in the morning. "But 'tain't many as likes to go by the railway, on 'count of the narrer tunnel, though it's a deal nearer."

"Thanks. Then if I take to the track here and go straight ahead I shall come out at the village at the end of about four miles?"

A nod was his answer, followed, as he turned away, by the words:

"Four an' a half, I said."

So Duke started to walk the four and a half miles, concluding he must take the shortest way he could, as he had not a superabundance of time; there might be some little delay even after he arrived at the village. So he began his journey at once, without even stopping for dinner.

He had passed the third mile post when he reached the tunnel.

"Ah!" he said aloud. "Here is the tunnel of which she warned me. I wonder how long it is? What a dunce I was not to ask. It does look like a ticklish place, that's a fact—small, one track affair. I don't half like the idea of going through it. Wonder if I'd have made it if I'd taken the road? Well, it's too late now—I'm in for it."

He had groped along for a short quarter of a mile, feeling his way carefully by the wall. Not a thought of any actual danger had entered his head—so full of his fair bride to be—until suddenly a dull rumble struck his ears, and caused him to wonder from whence the sound proceeded. Another instant and there flashed across his brain the horrible reality. A train was coming, from which direction he could not tell, but certainly coming, and if the tunnel proved much longer, the fact was undeniable that he should be rushed beneath the iron monster there alone in the darkness and no one would know his fate.

He listened, laying his ear to the rail; it was coming in the rear. He quickened his steps—he ran—ran as rapidly as he dared for fear of a misstep which would hinder instead of advance his ends.

Now the roar comes nearer; he can imagine the train as it is tearing along, carrying death to him. He thinks each individual hair is standing on end. The sweat pours down his face, and still this darkness, still this louder roar of the engine as it comes steadily nearer and nearer, and his strength is nearly exhausted.

At last a gleam of light greets him at the farther end of the tunnel. Oh, what hope it inspires! He thinks of the races he has won at college, and determines to take a fresh start. Yes, he will run as if running a race, and forget the huge monster behind him, which seems to paralyze his limbs and prevent all motion; he will run, run—he must win—how terrible the result if he does not! He thinks of Lula, his sweetheart, his wife that was to have been. Shall he ever see her again?

The light ahead grows more and more distinct, but his breath is going, and the train behind is rushing on fast; it seems quite close now; he can almost feel its breath upon him; still he runs. Another moment and he will have gained or lost—which? He must make that short space! What a thing it is, this being face to face with death! He cannot hold out much longer; he feels he must lose—and what then? but no—he will make one more effort. He clears the tunnel, leaps from the track, and falls headlong down the bank on the side, saved—but unconscious, while the heavily loaded freight train passes by.

But the engineer had seen him jump, and not being able to ascertain whether he had been struck by the cowcatcher or not, stopped the train and went back in search of him; and when Duke Carlton regained consciousness he was lying on a seat in the depot in the village for which he had started some hours before.

He was not seriously injured. His fall had but stunned him, and in an hour he was quite ready to proceed on his journey, a little pale, it is true, and shaky in the lower extremeties, but otherwise rejoicing that he had succeeded in his quest, and would be in time for his wedding, with thirty minutes to spare.

Duke Carlton does not believe in the theory that a person's hair turns white in a night from sudden fright or sorrow, for his own raven locks show not a trace of silver; and surely no one ever had a more terrible fright or a narrower escape than did he on his wedding day, when he ran a race for his bride.

THE FRENCH HONOR.

In the Army It Is of a Particular Variegated Kind.

"No," said the French artillery officer quoted by the Cleveland Leader, "I have never done a thing that any man should be ashamed of."

"You have never told a lie?" the advocate demanded.

"Never."

"You have never robbed a chicken coop?"

"Never, as I am a gentleman and a scholar."

"You have never violated the sanctity of an oath?"

"No, I have never thought of doing such a thing."

"You have never gone into your friend's house and abused his hospitality?"

"Of course not."

"You swear that you are guiltless of all these things, do you?"

"I swear it."

"You have never cheated your landlady?"

"Never."

"Now, on your honor as a soldier, tell me, are you not guilty of all the crimes that I have mentioned?"

The officer went pale, and replied:

"Ah, monsieur, why have you appealed to my soldierly honor? Why do you compel me to confess that I have lied, robbed hen coops, abused my friends' confidence, perjured myself, and left my board bill unpaid? As a soldier of France I could do these things and still remain unsullied; but upon my honor as a soldier I may not deny them. Hand me the six-shooter."

Befo' de Wah Style.

In these days of crazy fads almost any price will be paid for the gratification of a sense A novelty is presented by a middle-aged man of wealth who lives in a handsome house near the lower end of Central Park. His father was a slaveholder, and old times are recalled by a daily return to ante-bellum conditions. Negro servants are employed with the understanding that when there are no visitors in the house they shall call the owner "Master" or "Mars John." It is just like slave days to be there. "Here, Sam, you —— black scoundrel, black my boots." "Yas, Mars John." "George you rascal, saddle my horse." "Yas, marster." "Henry, you'll get a thousand lashes if you don't hurry up there." "Yas, sah, Mars John, I is hu'in fas' 's I kin." In the presence of guests the servants say "Mr. Barcus," "Yes, sir," and "No, sir," while he addresses them with dignity and respect.—New York Press.

Has Its Compensations.

I notice that there's a good deal of ague in this part of the country," said the tourist, who stopped at the farmhouse for a drink of water. "That's a great drawback. It unfits a man for work entirely, does it not?"

"Gener'ly it does," said the sallow woman who handed him a tin cup. "Still, when John has a right hard fit of the shakes we fasten the churn dasher to him and he brings the butter inside of fifteen minutes."

A SWINDLER ESCAPES

REED ELUDES A PRISON KEEPER AT WORCESTER.

They Went to That City to Consult a Lawyer and the Keeper Left His Prisoner Alone for a Few Minutes.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Worcester, Oct 31.—John Reed, the notorious bunco man who was serving a sentence of fourteen years in the State prison, is at large. Accompanied by J. L. Abbott, a State prison keeper he came to Worcester yesterday for a conference with his counsel, Col. Gile of this city. This conference was held early in the evening at the Sherwood House.

Later Reed's wife, who followed her husband from Boston, was engaged in conversation with him for some hours. Shortly after midnight Abbott left the room. When he returned, fifteen minutes later, Reed had disappeared. A train left for New York and the west at 15:29, and it is thought that Reed escaped on it.

Telegrams were sent out to the police of many cities in the hopes of intercepting him, and the local police immediately began to hunt for the man. On his way out of the hotel Reed took from the hallway an overcoat belonging to the proprietor.

John Reed, who has operated under the aliases of Spencer, Greenhalge and many other names, is one of the most remarkable swindlers known to the police of this country. He has been under arrest many times, but has escaped usually by jumping his bail which his friends have furnished.

When Reed escaped from Gardiner, Mass., late in 1897, the police in all the principal cities of the Eastern States were asked to keep a sharp lookout for Reed. All trace of him was lost until early this year when Chief of Police Murphy, of Jersey City, obtained information that the man was in Philadelphia, and was about to sail for Europe on a cattle steamship. He was arrested there and extradicted by the Massachusetts authorities.

After the swindler's arrest it was found that he had been living in a fine house in a fashionable part of Plainfield. He lived here in the best of style and posed as a wealthy salesman.

The news of his arrest caused a great sensation in Plainfield.

SPORTING.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The local team will meet for practice tomorrow night.

Saltzman will probably play quarterback on the team in the game election day.

Everyone rejoices to hear that Cathcart is back again in his old place at left halfback.

Nathan Lewis, centre on the Stevens Institute team, practiced with the Plainfield boys Thursday night.

Waring, being out of town will not be able to play in the coming game but his brother, Dick, may play.

Manager Smith has written to the manager of the San Remos' team asking him of the weight and the line up of his team election day.

Carey the new applicant for a place on the football team played with the Orange Athletic Club last year and the year before was with the Crescent A. C. of Brooklyn.

The Alias team went to Elizabeth Friday afternoon and played Pingry's eleven, defeating them by a score of 15 to 0. This was done although the Pingry men outweighed the Alias team.

Carey, who last year played end on the Orange Athletic Club, and who is now residing in Bound Brook, has made application to Manager Smith for a position on the Plainfield football team. Carey will be around at the practice Tuesday evening, to show what he can do. He will probably play at one of the ends of full back

BASKET BALL.

Friday night the Plainfield boys go to Newark to play the Newark Institute team.

The first game to be played at home this season is scheduled for Monday night, when the return game with the Young Men's Institute, of New York, will be played.

Three new teams were organized Friday night at the Y. M. C. A. The members of the regular team were divided into couples, and these couples choose the teams from among the applicants. Eric Moraller and Berry Egan will have charge of one team. They chose McKillop, Perrin, Carroll, Brokaw and Cudding. Max Moraller and George P. Smith chose the second team which consists of McDonald, Overton, Suffern, Dolliver and Zimmer. The third team is captained by Long and Bonny and the members are Radford, Smith, Terry, Rogers and Hobbie. These three extra teams will compete among themselves for a banner. It is not yet decided when the first game will be played.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

Friday night the Central Jounral Bowling League met at Elizabeth and drew up a schedule and the rules of play for the coming year. It is not known whether it will be a two or three ball game this year.

Interest in bowling keeps right up at the Park Club. Tonight is the last chance the bowlers will have to break the scores. As they now stand Willie Roome has made the highest score, 237, and will get the prize unless the score is broken tonight. F. O. Ball has three 200 scores to his credit, while Clarence L. Murphy, Laurens VanBuren, F. H. Ball and W. Roome have each two.

ROD AND GUN.

The Independent Gun Club are arranging for a shoot on Thanksgiving Day.

Inasmuch as no one has shown any interest in the shooting tournament, proposed to be held on the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club election day, the event will probably go by default. It almost seems a pity that out of such a large membership in the club not one has evidenced any interest, not even enough to make an entry.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The evening class at the Y. M. C. A. gynasium has been graded and now C. E. A. Heywood, the physical director, will conduct the class according to grade. There will be five grades this year, and the applicants for membership in the class are expected to begin at the fifth grade and pass up. New members, however, will be examined and will be put in whatever grades they are qualified to enter.

A Whale Photographed While It Struggled For Liberty.

Hunters and other sportsmen who carry the camera with them when they go after big game, have an advantage over the ordinary man because they often manage to get a snapshot to prove the truthfulness of their stories. Recently the improvement in small protographing apparatus that could be carried in a pack has made it possible for hunters to return to civilization not only with the heads and hides of big game but with pictures that showed the quarry while it still was alive and ignorant of the fate that was creeping on it. Thus stay at homes have been treated to pictures of rogue elephants, pumas, bear and deer taken by clever and plucky men. But never, until an English sportsman in the Shetland Islands was fortunate enough to have his camera along just as a school of whales appeared off the fishing village, has the world been treated to a photograph of a whale hunt.

The sportsman-photographer was loitering around the shore one day when the fishermen cried out that whales were coming into the voe. The voe is a deep narrow inlet or firth, of the kind which abound on the coast of the Shetland and Orkney Islands.

The daring fishermen of those coasts are always on the lookout for such prizes as whales and almost before the cry had ceased they were running toward the beach from all directions to launch boats and fight the immense sea creatures. Our Englishman was as greatly excited as were the fishermen, only instead of a harpoon he carried his little camera and soon he was in one of the long, solid boats that were speeding toward the tumbling whales. He was lucky enough to get his boatmen into position just as the whaleboats closed in on the school and when the first harpoon was thrown he got an excellent picture.

The whales which are shown in it are the bottle-nosed or grinder whales. They are large, though not as enormous as the right whale, and they make a fierce fight. The Shetlanders approached the school in such a way that they cut off the retreat to deep water and having the whales between the boats and the shore, they fastened several boats together with long towing lines so that the victim when struck should have as much of a load as possible to pull. Then the foremost or harpooner's boat was steered close to the whale, as near his head as possible and yet so far away from his eye that he could not see his enemies approaching. The iron was hurled into him and the boats all backed away as swiftly as the men could wield the oars.

In the particular hunt which made it possible to take this picture, the first and largest whale to be struck was killed in good shape after having towed the boats only a short distance. But the second whale to be harpooned, though he was a small fish, was so savage that the battle lasted for hours and finally, when the men were tired out, it ended in the escape of the plucky animal. The Shetlanders, however, did not have to return with only one whale. While the fight with the small whale was going on, the other fishermen managed to drive part of the school close in shore and three or four of the whales, panic sticken, swam into the inlet where they were caged by the falling tide. It was an easy matter to dispatch them, and the village soon was rich and odorous with whale oil.

AMERICA ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

Much Pleasanter To Live In The Present Time.

There was not a public library in the United States.

Almost all the furniture was imported from England.

An old copper mine in Connecticut was used as a prison.

There was only one hat factory, and that made cocked hats.

Every gentleman wore a queue and powdered his hair.

Crockery plates were objected to because they dulled the knives.

Virginia contained a fifth of the whole population of the country.

A man who jeered at the preacher or criticised the sermon was fined.

A gentleman bowing to a lady always scraped his foot on the ground.

Two stage coaches bore all the travel between New York and Boston.

A day laborer considered himself well paid with two shillings a day.

The whipping post and pillory were still standing in Boston and New York.

Beef, pork, salt fish, potatoes and hominy were the staple diet all the year round.

Buttons were scarce and expensive, and the trousers were fastened with pegs or laces.

A new arrival in a jail was set upon by his fellow prisoners and robbed of everything he had.

When a man had enough tea he placed his spoon across his cup to indicate that he wanted no more.

Leather breeches, a checked shirt, red flannel jacket and a cocked hat formed the dress of an artisan.

The church collection was taken in a bag at the end of a pole, with a bell attached to arouse sleepy contributors.

Will Vote in Mid Ocean.

Topeka, Kan., Oct. 31.—The members of the First battalion of the Second Kansas, who sailed from San Francisco for Manila, carry ballots with them and will vote on Kansas officers about midway between Honolulu and Manila. These six hundred men live in western Kansas, where members of the legislature have been elected by less than twenty-five majority.

Both state committees admit that fully twenty-five members of the house in sparsely settled western counties can be chosen or defeated by this mid-ocean vote.

What worries them is the possibility of a delay in receiving the returns here until February 1, one month after the legislature meets. With a very close vote on state officers, as is now predicted, still greater complications confront them.

Hobson Before Bureau Chiefs.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Naval Constructor Hobson arrived in this city Saturday from Philadelphia, where he took part in the peace jubilee. He appeared before the board of naval bureau chiefs for the purpose of explaining the condition of the Spanish ships wrecked off Santiago and the progress and prospects of the efforts which are being made for their recovery.

It is said that over one million dollars will be required to continue the operations, and the secretary of the navy desires to know what chance there is of success before authorizing the expenditure of so large an amount of money.

The action of the department will be based on the report of the board of bureau chiefs after the examination of Constructor Hobson.

Emperor at Jerusalem.

At 11 o'clock their majesties entered the Jaffa Gate and at 3 o'clock visited the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

The streets presented a lively appearance and the buildings were lavishly decorated.
